THE PORT OF LONDON

Early Records Date Back to A.D. 61—Modern Docks Planned in 1799

London, Dec. 25.—The origin of the city of London has never been penetrated by the historians. One of the oldest, Geoffrey of Monmouth, ascribed the founding the city to Brutus, who called it New Troy, but the earliest authentic record is that of Tacitus, who, writing in A. D. 61, described London as a place "copia negotiatorum et commeatuum maxime celebre"—rendered, liberally, "much frequented by a number of merchants and trading vessels."

London's position, sixty miles inland, at the head of navigation of a deep tidal river, gave to it commanding advantages as a centre of distribution. To the end of the eighteenth century its trade was carried on either at moorings in the stream, by the aid of barges and lighters, or, at wharves constructed on the river side.

There were no enclosed docks in that period, with warehouses where valuable cargoes might be stored in security. Losses by theft and damage became so serious that public opinion was aroused in the City of London, and a scheme was promoted and the money guaranteed by the leading merchants for constructing enclosed docks. As a result a bill was passed by Parliament in 1799 authorizing the construction of the West India Docks. The beginning of the modern dock system as it is today. The foundation stone was laid with great ceremony in the presence of Premier Pitt and his Cabinet in 1800, and the docks were completed and opened to shipping in 1802.

So successful was this first venture that what would be called today a "boom" in dock-creating enterprise ensued, and further schemes in the Port of London were promoted and sanctioned by Parliament at short intervals. Prior to 1909, when the Port Authority was created, the provision of facilities and accommodation was in the hands of private undertakings, which had become impoverished by ruinous competition one with the other, and consequently lacked the means to carry out the improvements necessary to keep the port abreast of the times. A state of inaction had existed for nearly thirty years, and this was becoming a menace to London's position as the world's centre of commerce. Then a Royal Commission was appointed to administer all the various dock undertakings on the River Thames.

Lloyd George was then President of the Board of Trade and put through Parliament a Government bill creating the Port of London Authority, 1908, and this came into effect in 1909. The beautiful Port of London Authority Administration Building, which was formally opened a short time before Lloyd George resigned the Premiership, is a monument of which the Port Authority and the citizens of London generally, have reason to be proud. It cost £10,000,000, and is considered to be one of the most beautiful buildings in London.

Bangor, Maine, Dec. 27.—An enterprising native of the state of Maine has solved the problem of what to do with an abandoned railroad. Some months ago the Bangor and Aroostook Railroad discontinued service over its twelve-mile branch running from Brownville Junction to Katahdin Iron Works. Henry Green saw his opportunity.

He started with a small automobile and an idea. The idea was to fit the car with flange wheels and make it run on the unused rails. He worked. He rented the whole branch line from the railroad company at $100 a month and started business. Now traffic is so brisk that he is using a trailer behind his car.

There is some doubt as to how this one-man railroad will work in mid-winter, but the proprietor has attached some sawed off shovels to the front wheels, a miniature rotary plow. He thinks this will take care of snow up to a depth of a foot. If it gets deeper the passengers will have to help shove away the drifts.

Years ago there was a flourishing business in the mining and smelting of iron at Katahdin Iron Works. When it was finally abandoned as unprofitable the place became a sportsmen's resort.

COURTESY OF THE ROAD

Gentleman Cross—Pardon me, sir, but haven't I seen you before?

Weary Victim—Well, the gas looks familiar, but I've forgotten the face.

COPPERFIELD LIBRARY CHANGES HANDS

London, Dec. 28 (By Canadian Press).—The David Copperfield Library now belongs to the children of St. Pancras, London, it having been presented to the Borough of St. Pancras by the Children's Library Movement. This new institution for children is in memory of the novelist, Charles Dickens, and is appropriately named after one of the chief works of the English master of fiction. It is located in the house where Charles Dickens lived as a boy. No. 13 Johnson street, Somers Town, and which Dickens immortalizes in "David Copperfield" as the residence of Wilkins Micawber, who was always waiting "for something to turn up." This house, with two adjacent buildings, is the gift of Councillor A. Davis, of St. Pancras.

The David Copperfield Library is the alone of Somers Town. Its windows were blessed, its chimney pots grotesque, and its outer front studded as a wreep, for it was built 150 years ago; but it has been renovated and made habitable for its new use. One room in front of the house a little bal lay at night by a pile of old books reading the strangest romances. These books were the works of famous writers, yet this boy, unknown at that time, lived and illuminated, made to be read, for that the authors of the books he was reading; his name was Charles Dickens.

In this house now, there are books in every room, crowds and crowds of books, all around the walls. About the floors are shelves filled with books, with illustrated books, the kind and books that can be provided in the evening, and the children may come for a quiet

A CERTAIN METHOD.

Two friends were talking. One of them had been married for a year to a pugnacious young lady.

"Well," said the unmarried one, "have you cured your wife of her desire to learn to smoke?"

"I think so," said the other, with a grim smile. "I've made her sick at her first lesson by smoking one of the cigars she gave me for my birthday. And she doesn't like to smoke cigars, but she now wants to see me forgiveness on the grounds of cruelty."

Tells of Woman How She Was Restored to Perfect Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Woodbine, Mass.—"I cannot speak too highly of what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I was a nervous wreck and I suffered so from my troubles that I would not even speak right to my husband. The doctor said he could do nothing for me. My husband's mother advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once. I was able to do my work more and it was a pleasure, not a burden. Now I have a fine booming baby and am able to care for myself and do my work. I cannot help recommending your medicine, and any one seeing me before I took it, and then seeing me now, can see what it has done for me. I am only too pleased for you to use my testimonial."—Mrs. Edith Davis, 721 McGee St., Winnipeg, Man.

WILL ABOLISH PREMIUM ON U.S. DOLLAR

New York, Dec. 28.—The United States Government is getting ready to establish stabilizing interests abroad in order to facilitate arbitrage dealings in the currency of countries whose units of exchange are quoted in the neighborhood of 5 cents in this market and above par in London. Notably among these are those of Holland, Sweden and Japan. Gold exports are expected to follow these arbitrage operations. Singularly enough, Spain pays a low premium for sitting gold imports. It has learned the lesson that Switzerland learned, that when a commercial nation's unit of exchange sells at a premium it is penalizing its own trade. The United States is beginning to learn the same lesson.

THE STORY OF A MOVIE STAR

The exes of Wallace Reid, motion picture actor idol, is pathetic, says Detroit Free Press. He was one of those men who found it hard to say "no" to a friend. Night after night his home was invaded by people of the film world—directors, actors, scenario writers, and cronies who like to eat his company and made his home a club. In consequence he did not get to bed many a night before the rooster's clarion announced the rising of the sun. Then, to picture-house for a day's acting. His contract called for one play every two months. He usually starred in twice that number, and as nerves gave way under the horrible mistake of sustaining action he resort to drink. His employers finally urged him to take a holiday and invented the excuse that his eyesight had been impaired by the glare of the studio lights. To bear this out, he let his employment wearing dark-green glasses. There is a lesson in Mr. Reid's misfortune, and it is borne home in Mrs. (Judge) Murphy's book "The Black Curtain," that resorting to narcotic drugs is one sure pathway to shattered reputation, broken health, and probably shameful dissolution.

That Body of Yours

By James W. Barton, M.D.

OVERWEIGHT

A stout lady came into my office some years ago and wanted to consult me regarding her excessive weight. Before I had a chance in asking the timely fundamental methods necessary to reduction she said:

"Now, Doctor, I don't want you to interfere with my diet."

I said "No?".

"And I don't want to take any exercise because I just hate it."

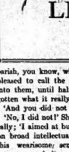
I said again, "No?"

"And I don't want you to interfere with my rest, because I don't get up until afternoon any day."

I said still again, "No?". Well Madame there are three absolute essentials to reduction, and you have cut them all away before I start. I'm afraid I can do nothing for you."

For that woman weighed 227 lbs., and she went away grieved.

And yet after all a little thought, a little work, and a little self-denial was all that was necessary to satisfy her desire.



First, simply reducing down the amount of food, particularly "all" the liquids and the starchy foods, such as potatoes, bread and pastry, and also candies.

Second, enough exercise, hard work or better work with plenty of clothing on to induce perspiration, for a body tissues must be used and therefore wasted.

Third, sleeping and resting should be done at night only, and eight hours at least. Then, in fact, you're willing to pay this not exorbitant price you can attain the carriage you desire.

HISTORY IS THE STORY OF HEROES

"Ye, where was Babe Ruth born?".
"Couldn't tell you, son."
"Where was Jack Dempsey born?"
"Don't know that, either."
"Say, will you buy me a history of the United States?"

There seemed to be no objections to the purchase.

"Not ten- Then it's over two hours.

LINKED LIVES

By D. Kinmount Roy

Sherwin sauntered about the large room thoughtfully.

Somethings were pleasant and soothing. The change from his modest rectory and its narrow income, which made the expenditure of every guinea a matter of consideration, was impressively making strong appeals to him. It was like a sudden translation into a new world. Gladstone, he remembered, was once born to wealth and was without religion even to a young man—in short, he was quite frank on that score—and yet he was master of all this! He recalled that he had meant to do his duties when he took orders, nor had he anything of a flagrant character with which to reproach himself. But somehow things had gone wrong, and he was puzzled to know when and how he had got out of his true course. Certainly he had had there was no denying. Religion, whatever value it may have with respect to it for a man, had no desires to live comfortably in this life.

He admitted that there were men to whom high ideals imparted supernatural, and such got along well enough. Of course, Jesus Christ was undeniably a figure of the highest character, and He was uncommonly full of kindness and pity. Jesus Christ was honest and sincere, but he had no idea of what to do with Him. He had moved among Pharisees without loss of character, dignity or self-respect, and had to be a hypocrite condone tyranny in others. He certainly was a wonderful man, this Nazarene carpenter, and His death in the prime and mysterious grandeur became Him. Small wonder, after all, that so many of the world have nothing to compare with the glory of serving Him!

But—well, Sherwin felt that he was not made after that pattern. He sighed as the half-open door through which he had for a brief moment caught a glimpse of the Infinite Good closed, leaving him face to face with Eric Hardcastle.

A few evenings afterwards, at the close of a pleasant chat, in which the two men recalled much of the past, the one, and filling the other's glass, Blake, Hands have as much character as face—perhaps even more. The Squire's hands were shapely enough, but mainly suggestive of tenacity. If the owner of such hands was clinging to a wreck, you would expect him to hold on when other men relaxed their grip and perished; and if by any chance those hands closed upon the throat of an enemy, you got the impression aspoi-

A NEW YEAR'S PARTY

"Oh, won't it be fun?" cried Tod, dancing around the room on one foot. "Won't it, Fran?" cried Frances, school by Belle and Frank and Jean.

"I've never been up until midnight in my life," Jean announced.

"Well, I've never seen the New Year in," declared Tod. "None of us have."

"Of course not, silly. There wasn't anything to see on the farm. Mother says the whistles in town and the bells ring and guns go off." Frances sighed in happy expectation.

"Aren't you glad mother said we could stay up?" Belle asked. "Of course with all that noise we would probably have awakened, but then that is lots more fun."

The three opened and their mother came in. "I've filled both theme bottles with cocoa," she said, "and there are lots of cookies in the pantry but don't eat before supper, you know. It isn't proper."

"Oh, mother, we won't," the cried. "I wish you would stay up it's going to be such fun."

But mother only shook her head. "I'm too sleepy," she said.

After their mother had left them the children played games until they were sleepy, then drawing their chairs up before the fire, they started to talk.

"See, I'm hungry!" declared Frank. "Let's eat. It must be nearly time." They examined his watch. "Why, it isn't ten yet," he cried in

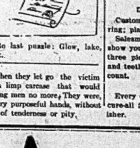
Boy Adventurers

THE ESCAPE OF DANIEL BOONE

Daniel Boone was one of the bravest of those early settlers of the British colonies in America who penetrated vast wilderness, fought with hostile Indians, and faced death daily. He was brought up amid the hardships of the frontier, when boys had to show a man's courage and do a man's work.

The new country at this time was full of trouble. There was bitter hostility between the English and French, the French being helped by the Indians. Braddock was making his campaign against the French, and the war seemed in the air everywhere.

Daniel Boone was a sturdy lad, strong for his age, and fond of his gun. He saw an opportunity to satisfy this desire by joining the army of Braddock, and he accordingly offered his services. They were accepted and he was made chief wagoner and blacksmith.



British Ambushed.

Braddock later was ambushed by hostile redskins fighting under the direction of French officers, and in the general route which followed a large number of British soldiers were killed. Many of the drivers who were trapped were shot. Daniel Boone, however, showed the courage and coolness that he had been taught by his father and by all of his friends. He escaped unhurt and reached the main body of the army.

When he was thirty-four, Boone, together with five companions, set out on an exploration trip to Kentucky. Boone was taken prisoner by the savages and they liked him so well that they wouldn't let him go, but finally he got away. If he had been unable to escape at the time Braddock's army was attacked, he, of course, never would have made the trip to Kentucky, and the development of the rich and productive lands when he opened up would have been delayed several years and the march of civilization hindered.

SNAPPY HOCKEY BY JUNIORS

Joe Freeman's Colts opened the season for hockey fans last evening when they clashed sticks with the Cobourg Juniors in the exhibition fixtures which drew about 600 enthusiasts to the arena. It was a grand opening number for Trenton to tally no. 1 to your credit, goes a long way boys in helping you on a successful career. The fact that so many turned out on the premier occasion, also gives a lot of encouragement to the hockey executive, the coach and the players. We were very pleased to see practically all the players in uniform and the fans were with the exception of "Peck" Shoniker who has graduated to the International ranks, absent. Peck, though, that is hardly possible, we had a good team last year and hard luck, we have heard you say, but learn this year and all we ask for it is the good luck (Capt.) Blakely had his forwards working fine. Some of the subs. are best as good as the regulars, only a little less experienced. We have good goods on the defence. Scarcely two minutes rolled by when Trenton notched their first goal. What precision! For Trenton, 2nd period 5-3, final score 7-4.

UNPRETENTIOUS

A certain orbiter is confined in an asylum. To persons who visit him, he says:

"Look at this! it is my latest master-piece."

They look, and see nothing but an expanse of bare canvas. They ask:

"What does that represent?"

"That, why, that represents the remains of the Israelites through the Red Sea."

"Beg pardon, but where is the sea?"

"It has been driven back."

"And where are the Israelites?"

"They have crossed over."

"And the Egyptians?"

"Will be here directly. That's the sort of painting I like—simple and unpretentious."—The Art Record. . . .

WAYS OF THE BOOTLEGGER

Extensive Smuggling Operations Carried Out Between Quebec and United States

In an article which appeared in the New York Herald recently dealing with the smuggling of liquor from Canada into the States, one American with of the line, some interesting information is brought to light.

Running for 200 miles across nearly every front line directly on the border there are paths leading from one United States village to another. There are hundreds of them. The country is flat and level, and now that the frontier is frozen it is a simple thing to dash across a field anywhere, jump the border, skirt the main road and then dash across for two or three miles and meet the Canadian trader with his cargo.

Officials say that probably 8 or 10 of the larger operators own farms which lie across the border line, partly in Canada and partly in the States. This makes it much harder for the American officials, for they cannot cross across the line. They must wait till in the house of Canadians who live there and keep up the pretense of being farmers. The farmers are supplied often deserted farms which have almost overnight become worth fortunes.

"For a five dollar bill paid to each of three or four farmers the bootlegger can have transportation ready to across the border without touching a highway. The routes are known to the operators. The farmers are supplied to pick up the extra money.

"The state troopers have been more active than usual of late. They have made several arrests and seized many loads. But at the best the officials get a small proportion of the bootleggers. One government official estimated today that probably a hundred runners cross the border line on that line on Friday and 20, 30 or 40 on average nights. One arrest a day is a big record for officials.

"There are as many individual tricks as there are cleverly bootleggers. Through a recent arrest it was found that one chain of bootleggers was operating with three sets of runners. They took an the border, averaging three trips a week and 30 or 40 cases a trip. Twenty or thirty miles inside the Canada border he met his wife, who always drove with two children, and transferred part of his cargo to her sedan. She continued to Watertown, where the third man picked up the cargo and continued into the central part of the state. The woman was not caught.

"The truth is that the government is almost prostrate as far as effective regulations of the traffic is concerned."

Boston, Dec. 29.—College men and women of Greater Boston have in prospect a club home, to be built at an estimated cost of $1,500,000 under plans of a committee headed by the University Club, the sponsor of the project. With the existing organization as a nucleus, the University Club is expected ultimately to have a membership of 5000.

There are known to be 28,000 persons alumni of 337 colleges and universities, resident within 30 miles of the city, who are eligible to membership. Separate organizations are now maintained by graduates of 71 of these institutions. The present University Club was organized in 1891 at the suggestion of Amherst men, whose idea was to form a luncheon club.

Specifications of the new structure call for a building in the Renaissance style, of limestone and brick. The basement will contain squash courts, swimming tank, billiard and pool room, barber shop and locker room. The two floors next above will include dining and grill rooms for both men and women, reception rooms, library, lounging and guest rooms. The third floor will be given over to women's use and the fourth and fifth floors will consist of sleeping quarters.

A youth who had accomplished a good deal in football, but little in his studies, was dropped from one preparatory school and immediately invited to enter another. He had been there but a few days when he met a member of the faculty. "Well," said the Professor, "how do you find it here?" "Pretty fair," said the boy. "That's good. Find it smooth going, eh?" The boy reflected. "Well, I wouldn't say that exactly," he finally remarked. "The field's sort of rough in places, sir."

QUOTATIONS FROM "OUR LITTLE LIFE"

Interesting Expressions From Novel by J. G. Sime

"Patience—that unrarried wife—is much more than a failure in virility. Youth goes full-lit against the windmills of life without a thought of the consequences. It is only when youth—never really a matter of years—departs and age stands hesitating before life's windmills that patience makes its appearance. You decide to bear—not to attack; you are old.

"Women living alone are constantly taken unawares—and they grow a sense of swiftness and certainty in everything but foot fingnas. You can knock at the door when women alone is in complete disbabille, and she will not hurry. She is not in her best clothes, having tidied up the place in the same instant of time, and she will hardly be conscious of having been kept waiting."

"Swearing is, after all, a confession of failure in itself. It is the expression of a weakness that fails to find adequate language for the consolation of its feelings."

"In Canada there is the real Middle Class, English attitude towards art of every kind: you pay your money to see and hear it and thank God when you can come away again."

"A human being, like a bulb, ought to pass a certain period in the cold darkness to give his roots time to get established and penetrate downwards. After he is rooted let him spread by all means; but until he has the power of growth in him let him be kept comfortably in his cellar and watered punctually and tended with all decency; and let those premature leaves which will prevent the healthy formation of the later blossom be ruthlessly repressed."

"Probably a friendship between a man and a woman never yet was a quite satisfactory thing; and probably the reason is that a friendship between a man and a woman never is a friendship."

"This McGee, in common with a good many other people, wherever she didn't understand a thing concluded that on that very account it must be fine."

"It is a nice question just how comfortable we need to be for the artist to do us justice to herself. Can you be artistic when the thermometer is 24 below and an icy wind is blowing and howling in the fire? Can you be artistic when you have a raging toothache? How did Shakespeare see the world when he had a headache?"

SIX INDIAN SKELETONS FOUD; SLAIN IN BATTLE CENTURY AGO

St. Thomas, Dec. 27.—Six human skeletons, believed to be of Indians slain in battle a century or more ago, were unearthed yesterday by Harry Bell of Dunwich Bayham township, while searching for a skunk that had holed in, in a woods about two miles east of Vienna.

The skeletons, which were well preserved, were under a small sand mound. A ragged hole through the top of one skull bore mute testimony of the manner in which its owner met death, while a smaller hole was found in the side of another skull.

A short distance from this mound were found aint traces o a log dwelling or stockade.

Berry was digging for the skunk when he came upon the skeletons. He continued until he found the animal, then notified the authorities of his other find. A more careful search of the mound and locality will be made by the latter.

CORNISH MINING ACTIVITIES RE-OPEN

London, Dec. 23. (By Canadian Press)—One of the human sides of the recent rise in the price of tin, which the metal markets expect will be sustained, is the possibility of reopening the famous Cornish tin mines. Since the days of the Phoenicians these mines have been constantly worked until now the total mist come from deep thin seams which proved unprofitable in competing with other fields when the recent slump came.

Thousands of miners with no other work to do faced utter destitution, while villages being deprived of their only means of income by the closing of the mines. Three thousand men and their families have been saved from starvation by the efforts of the local gentry who raised a great fund throughout the country. To this the King has just lanouged the distribution of another 100 pounds sterling and the Prince of Wales 50 pounds.

Nearly 1,000 miners already have emigrated but the promotors of the fund now believe that if they can pull through the winter many mines will be able to reopen in the spring and thus many picturesque Cornish mining villages will be saved. Unless the miners refrain from emigrating the mines may be unable to reopen on account of lack of labor skilled in the conditions peculiar to Cornish production.

WHY HERMIT CRAB FEEDS HIS PALS

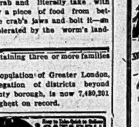
London, Dec. 28.—The mystery of the hermit crab, and the hermit crab, and the reason why he always lives with "messmates" of other species, has at last been cleared up.

Dr. J. H. Orton, of the Plymouth Marine Biological Laboratory, whose pet oyster became famous by revealing to science the power of the mollusc to change its sex, has studied the relationships of the common hermit crab to the anemone and certain aquatic worms which live communally with it.

The conclusions reached by Dr. Orton are that both animals are benefitted by their habits. The anemone derives advantages from the hermit crab by being dragged about with its tentacles on the ground, and being given opportunities for picking up food left or lost by the crab. The crab obtains protection from fish attacked owing to the unpleasantness of the nematodes as food.

In the case of the worm, one was observed to crawl along side the body of the crab and literally take with impunity a piece of food from between the crab's jaws and hold it—an action tolerated by the worm's landlord.

THE POPULATION OF LONDON



It is the Greatest on Record —More Females Than Males

London, Dec. 27.—Some effects of the Great War on the population and housing in London are indicated in that part of the County series of the last census devoted to the Metropolis, published recently. In the County-borough the present population is 4,464,822 made up of 2,071,679 males and 2,413,844 females. This is a decrease of 54,762 of the male population in the last ten years, and an increase of 17,690 in the female population.

The total number of widowers and divorced persons in the County of London is given at 74,290, fifteen of whom are recorded as being between the ages of 10 and 19, the total having remained practically stationary in the past decade. Among women, however, there is an increase of 25,922 widows. Over 11,000 widows are in the age group 30-39, and might therefore be directly associated with the war.

The proportion of females in the County to 1,000 males has risen from 1,127 in 1911 to 1,165 in 1921, the num erical excess of females now being 341,365—an increase of 72,343 over the figures for 1911. The ratio of unmarried females per 1,000 unmarried males has increased from 1,138 to 1,287 in the age group 15-29, and from 1,413 to 1,586 in the age grdup 30-39. While the number of private families has increased by 8.5 percent in ten years, the growth in the number of occupied dwellings has been only 4.1 percent. Of the 1,139,282 private families in the County only 38 per cent. (434,696) are in the single occupation of exclusively or separate dwellings; 32 percent. (360,753) are living two in a dwelling, while the balance of 30 per cent. (355,443) are housed in dwellings containing three or more families or spaces.

The population of Greater London, an aggregation of districts beyond the County borough, is now 7,480,201, the highest on record.

OUR FOREST WEALTH

Figures of the pulp and paper industry that should be pondered. Mr. Rioux of The Industry Summarized.

A few figures illustrating the magnitude of the pulp and paper industry in Canada may prove interesting. Reports show:

(a) The invested capital is $347,000,000—over half of which is invested in Quebec.

(b) Production capacity of newsprint—1,300,000 tons per annum.

(c) Canada produces ninety-five per cent of the newsprint imported by the U.S.A.

(d) Pulp and paper exports for the year ending April, 1932, amounted to $180,000,000 placing the industry third largest in Canada, being only exceeded by the exports of wheat and agricultural products.

Having shown pulp and paper to constitute our third largest industry let us add to it the lumbering industry which also depends on the forest for its existence. Combining these two great industries of the forest, they will be a close second to agriculture. Surely no further arguments will be required to convince us of the importance of our forests and how we are protecting these forests? Although much has been done in this direction, more still remains to be done before it otherwise, how could we have such conditions as the following:

(a) On the Transcontinental railway from Cochrane to LaTuque, a distance of 50 miles, are have taken out less than 1,000,000 cords of wood and at the same time we have burnt up more than 30,000,000 cords.

(b) Due to the destruction of the forests, the water level in the soil is falling three feet every ten years. This lowering is the vitality of the trees and they fall an easy prey to beetles and worms.

(c) In the Transcontinental railway from Cochrane to LaTuque, a distance of 50 miles, are have taken out less than 1,000,000 cords of wood and at the same time we have burnt up more than 30,000,000 cords.

(d) In New Brunswick 50 per cent. of the spruce has been destroyed by sawflies. In other provinces are, no doubt, equally affected.

(d) In the Trent valley the forest fires have been the chief way for farmers. Many deserted farms in that district today testify to the fact that forest land cannot profitably be transformed into agricultural lands.

Such facts are not pleasr nt to a limit, but we must face them squarely. The remedy them if the industry is to remain a permanent asset of our country.—G. W. Dickson.

SUGAR PRODUCED BY NEW PROCESS

London, Dec. 28.—Sugar may soon be obtained from wood, according to a secret process which Dorez, from wood pulp, according to Paris chemists who are keeping the process secret. Experiments have been conducted in many countries, especially in two British scientists who for twenty years have been conducting laboratory experiments with the idea of duplicating artificially the work done by plants in manufacturing sugar.

It always has been a scientific mystery how living plants build up the sugar necessary for their growth from the carbon dioxide in carbonic acid, a component part of the atmosphere, which they absorb, by mixing it with carbo-hydrates and the starch universally found in plants.

Their experiments now have been successful, according to Daily Express Professor Heilbron, that not only is it possible to produce formaldehyde from soda water by the action of wood wheat ware lenght light, by that it is also possible to produce formaldehyde with ordinary sunlight in the presence of malachite green, or other appropriate coloring matter.

Scientists, however, have a little further they succeeded, by acting upon soda water with carbo-listed rays, in building up the sugar formed from formaldehyde turns directly into sugar.

The yield of sugar may be increased by heightening the concentration of carbon dioxide with sodium carbonate.

Can Get Around Like a Young Man Since Taking Tanlac, Says Hansel Citizen

"You don't often see a man as spry as I am at seventy-two, but jogging from the way Tanlac has fixed me up, I'm sure it's fine for anybody," declared Thomas Palmer, Sr., well-known retired farmer of Hansel, Ont., while on a visit in London, Ont.

"At the time I got Tanlac I could hardly walk at all, and hadn't been down town without my walking stick since last September. But I have put away my old walking stick now, and last Thursday I went down town twice without it and got about as good as many a younger man. I suffered terribly with constipation the last ten years, had no appetite and was bothered a great deal with my kidneys. Sometimes every joint in my body ached, I was badly run down and seldom got a night's sleep.

"If I had Tanlac last Spring it would have saved me money, for I took medicine every Spring for relief to speak of. But Tanlac and the Tanlac Pills have put me in fine shape, and I stand ready to praise it to the limit."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists.

GRETA MATRIMONY A FAILURE

Is Matrimony a Failure? "Maybe it is, maybe it isn't," observes Roy Barnes, who plays one of the all star roles in the new Paramount special comedy, "Is Matrimony a Failure?" which is the feature attraction at Griffin's tomorrow to Saturday, with a matinee Saturday. "Be that as it may", continues the actor, there are many things which are twisted up in the books in red on the father's side of the account Stile brokers which buffet the matrimonial ship about in its stormy voyage and keep it from all shaken up.

A few of these disturbers according to Mr. Barnes might be listed as follows:

Using hubby's best razor to carve corns and open canned goods. Letting his socks go holey and forgetting to sew the buttons on his coat.

Interference by same during when the other chasties one of the offspring. This gets the parent's goat and spoils the child.

Too many "important business" appointments by hubby after business hours. Going through hubby's trousers pockets before he wakes up in the morning. A few of these are illustrated by the cast of this new picture, which includes in addition to Mr. Barnes, Lila Lee, Lois Wilson, Walter Hiers, Lillian Leighton and Tully Marshall.

"THE LONG CHANCE" POWERFUL STORY OF REAL WESTERN COUNTRY

"The Long Chance" produced Ralph Graves under the Universal banner at the Regent to-morrow to Saturday, matinee daily, is one of the most interesting portrayals of his talent and perhaps the performance most similar to the work he did for Griffith in "Scarlet Days" and "Dream Street." "The Long Chance" is an all-star picture from a Peter B. Kyne story of the West, Dingle is a vivid fashion, yet with enough role a distanct characterization. Henry B. Walthall, Marjorie Daw, Ralph Graves and a half dozen other celebrated players have the principal roles.

"Short Weight", a two-reel Bronco Wonder doe comedy, a new Vokevi Movies, Pathe News, and a Kinogram are also announced for presentation.

RALPH CONNOR'S "GOD'S CRUCIBLE" AT GRIFFIN'S

While it is no new thing for an author to endorse the picturized version of his story, it is rather unusual when an author who is at the same time a minister of the gospel, declares that the screen is an infinitely better medium for reaching the public than is the pulpit.

Yet that, according to Henry Alexander McRae, the well-known director, is exactly whit Ralph Connor has said. Ralph Connor, which is the pen name of the Reverend Dr. C. W. Gordon, wrote a very large number of novels, prominent among them "The Sky Pilot", "Black Rock", "The Prospector", "Canyon of the Royal Mounted" and "The Foreigner". The latter "Foreigner" was made into a picture by Director McRae and under its new title—"God's Crucible" is being exhibited at Griffin's new night for the last time, the rest includes Wilton Lackaye, Gaston Glass, Gladys Coburn, Bradley Barker, Kate Price and many other prominent players. Bee Turpin in a two-reel Sennett Bathing comedy titled "Home Made Movies", Fox News, and Mary Pickford and King Bagot in "Marking Straight," a real screen novelty produced in 1910 and showing the wonderful progress in the screen art since that period are being shown on the same program.

THRILLS ABOUND IN "A QUESTION OF HONOR"

A thrilling recree from a raging mountain torrent, a battle four hundred feet underground, a midnight race through the hills, the most beautiful scenery in America and the blowing up of a whole mountainside are a few of the attractions that compete with romance for the limelight in "A Question of Honor," a new Universal Jewel attraction at the Regent tonight.

Starring Anita Stewart, the picture is one of those rare combinations of drama and adventure that keeps one's interest on edge all the time. The story by Ruth Cross, ran as a serial in the People's Home Journal where it was followed by millions of readers as one of the most fascinating outdoor tales ever written.

"The Book Agent" a two-reel Sunshine comedy, a Travelogue, and a new chapter of the "Robinson Crusoe" serial are being exhibited on the same program.

NEW FRENCH PLAN OF WAR REPARATIONS

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, Jan. 2.—Premier Poincare of France offered at to-day's conference of the Allied Leaguers, a reduction of the German reparations to fifty billion gold marks. The French plan offers a two-year moratorium, but it exacts productive guarantees to insure resumption of payments later by the Germans. Under the French plan Class C bonds would be used to extinguish the later Allied Debts.

PICTON JUNIOR SIX DOWN BELLEVILLE

Fate Stood Crowd see Locals Beaten Only One Minute Before Final Gong—5-4 After Having Fought Tie From Behind—Hard Checking, Slashing Game Which Travelled Mile-a-Minute Gait.

Picton Junior O.H.A. hockey team defeated the Belleville Juniors here last night at the arena, coffee of the hardest fought games ever staged here, by the score of 5 to 4.

Although the visitors got away to the start early, and had the locals by 3 to 0 before the time, the locals never stopped trying, using their regular style of team work and then throwing their rules to carry on the good work. Picton had their share also very frequently also, and the pace that the boys kept up was certainly a dizzy one. The score was tied in the final frame, and the play around, and within four minutes of the finish Picton tying, and Belleville checked the game, and with a clever, big boy Hughes, who by the way scored four of their five goals, got possession of the puck, and with a clean shot bulged the twine for the tie breaking tally. It could not have been more than a minute to the second, when the final bell sounded, and the game was over.

The ice was in good condition, and both teams were also like the ice, in good condition. The way these boys worked was amazing, and how they stayed there until the sixty minutes had passed was amazing. Belleville had more condition that the visitors, and though Picton had the heavier team, they could not keep up the pace, and were so often that they began to weaken as the last stanza, and more than one of them were visibly played out.

Both net guardians proved that they were not for any means invincible, both Hughes and Boyle, the latter in the fourth period did make two or three great stops during the evening. The former Belleville star, Hughes, did further left defense man, who tallies four of the goals and nearly received the credit. If he was not watched closely he was very dangerous. He had a rough opponent in Belleville Horrets repeatedly stopped on his left, Boyle, their centre star centre man was well taken care of, and he had no opportunity of showing any bursts of speed during the evening.

Bill Cook, right defense man for the locals played a hard game, and was very useful. Wardraugh in though lacking condition, flashes. Hibbard, at right of the hardest workers in also one of the gamest. with the punch and went in poking they were as big as Scott and Jack Arnott were live players, Arnott alone was being the most aggressive ice. When this team were they made matters lively for ors.

When the first period was three minutes, Hughes drew for Picton with a clean shot twice a penalty. Pike cut some fine passes and Hibbard came through with tally for Belleville, the twine looked, shortly after, with a shot. Hughes got possession from of the Belleville net, pretty rush, went down to mouth, and though heavily was on him, scored on a instant shots of the evening drew a penalty. Jack Arnott real well in the second frame minute, jabked one by Yoo second tally. After seven Cook, Picton end.

LAKEFIELD SWAMPED BY PETERBORO

Peterboro, Jan. 2—Peterboro intermediates defeated the Lakefield team by 9 to 2 in the opening game of the O. H. A. schedule tonight. The Petes completely outclassed the visitors, whose only chance of strength was made in the second period, when they scored one goal and held the Petes to three, the final score when the local boys turned loose all their artillery and bombarded Hill from all parts of the ice, scoring ten tallies. "Shorty" Burgess, Collins, "Red" Legon and Parker in the local forward line showed some clever combination and Burgess and Jimmy McMartin from his defence position tore down the whole length of the ice on several occasions to score. Louis Sabatino was the lone star of the visitors and was responsible for both their scores. The teams were:

Peterboro—Goal, Dwyer; defence, Parker and McMartin; centre, Jackson; wings, Collips and Burgess, spares, Legon and Burgess.

PICTON JUNIOR SIX DOWN BELLEVILLE TEAM

Fair Sized Crowd see Locals Beaten Only One Minute before Final Gong—5-4 After Having Fought up to a Tie From Behind—Hard Checking, Slashing Game Which Travelled Mile-a-Minute Gait.

Picton Junior O.H.A. hockey team defeated the Belleville Juniors here last night at the annual outing of the bank. The fought games ever staged here, by the close margin of 5 to 4 goals.

Although the visitors got away to the best early, and load the locals by 3 to 0 for short time, the locals never stopped trying working their opponents off their feet when cornered, and then throwing in their attack, to good effect, by the good work. The visitors used their subs very frequently also, and the pace that the boys kept up was certainly a dizzy one. With the score tied in the final frame, and the play scrooned, and within four feet of the Picton goal, and Belleville checking the opposition off the puck, big Ivey Hughes, who by the way scored four of their five goals, got possession and on a lovely rush, and a good shot bulged the twine for the tie breaking tally. It could not have been more than a minute after he scored, when the final bell sounded, and the game was over.

The ice was in good condition, and both teams were also like the ice, in good condition. The fast, clean boys worked was amazing, and how they stayed there until the sixty minutes was up was also amazing. Belleville had more condition that the visitors, but though Picton had not the heavier team, they were so heavily backed and upset so often that they began to weaken as the last game, and more than one of them were visibly played out.

Both net guardians proved that they were entitled to the praise invariably both being beaten with clean cut shots, although Spader did make two or three good stops during the evening. The best man for Picton was Hughes. The latter left defence man, who tallies four out of five goals, and came near doing several other times. He was the king pin of the outfit and nearly received the limit. If he was not watched closely when receiving a pass, he was dangerous. He had a rough passage, for the Belleville Hornets were certainly engaged on his trail. Boyle, their left defence star centre man was well taken care of, and had no opportunity of showing any bursts of speed during the evening.

Bill Cook, right defence man for the locals played a hard game, and was very useful. Wardaugh is speedy, and though lacking condition, was there in flashes. Hibbard, at right-wing was one of the hardest workers in uniform, and also one of the gamest. He was there with the punch and went into them supposing they were as big as houses. Bill Strahan looked the twine first for the locals, shortly after, with a nice clean shot. Hughes got possession right in front of the Belleville net, and in a pretty rush, went down to the goal mouth, and though heavily checked by two men, scored with one of the prettiest shots of the evening. Church drew a penalty, Jack Arnott started real early in the second frame, and in a minute, picked one by Young for the second tally. After seven minutes of play, Church, Picton sub, took off the slab in with a nice clean shot.

In the third, Arnott drew a penalty, and goal minder Hunter was penalized for throwing the puck out instead of batting it out. Pye received a pass right near the goal, and slammed the rubber in for tally No. 3 Brooks was penalized, and Cook in a scramble in front of the Picton net, poked it in for Belleville's last counter. Wardaugh scored a rest as did Strahan. Then it was that Hughes came through with his spectacular soul saving rush and put the old game on ice, with but one minute to go.

Belleville—Goal, Hunter; defence, Pye and Cook; centre, Wardraugh; left wing, Bentley; right wing, Hibbard; subs, Strahan and J. Arnott.

TRENTON JUNIORS BEAT CAMPBELLFORD

Arena Filled to See Bear Cats Beaten 9-4 Trenton's Stonewall Defence Was Stumbling Block for Cats

Campbellford, Ont., Jan. 2.—In the first O. H. A. hockey match played in Campbellford since 1916 Trenton's junior team defeated the Bear Cats 9 to 4 before a crowd that filled the arena. The Bear Cats exceeded the expectations of their most ardent supporters and had their share of the puck, but could not penetrate the big Trenton defence most of their shots being from outside. The second period was faster, with the Bear Cats having the best of the play, and was scored Trenton 2 to 1. They were through on numerous occasions but lacked the finish around the nets. Brady, Archer and Smith were the best of a good little team, while R. Allore was the best boy on the ice and carried the brunt of the work for his team. The line-up:

Referee—Jack Carmichael, of Toronto.

SASKATOON SQUAD IN FREE-FOR-ALL

Newsy Lalonde's Crescents Beat Edmonton Eskimos 6-5 in Overtime Contest

Saskatoon, Sask., Jan. 2.—Newsy Lalonde's Saskatoon Crescents scored a double triumph in their Western Canada League game here last night—advanced into the first defeat of the season to the Edmonton Eskimos, 6 to 5, in an overtime contest, and pushed the Calgary Tigers, who lost to Regina yesterday, into the cellar berth of the league.

The game ended in a free-for-all fight, with hundreds of spectators milling with players on the ice. Excitement was at fever height when, three minutes after the opening of the overtime period, Helgy Bostrum apparently netted the puck for Edmonton. The goal umpire did not raise his hand, and claimed the rubber had not crossed the line, but the Eskimos were on their way to their dressing room by the gallery, when all so succeeded in rescuing most of the Crescent players before serious damage was done. Black eyes, bleeding noses and bruised heads were numerous, however.

Referee Higgins was incapable of quelling the storm which had been gathering during the game. He handed out only three penalties. At one time the crowd was so displeased with his work that cushions and oranges were thrown on the ice.

WINTER FIVE-PIN LEAGUE OPENS

Two Alley Records Broken

The new five pin league opened at (The Recreation Parlors) Domenyo's Alleys, last night between the G.T.R. Ball Team and the Wanderers, both teams rolling high scores. This is probably the first time that all members of both teams rolled over the 500 mark. Hill rolled a tidy 355 single and Bill Wallace Gerow the single 287. The wanderers set two new alley records when they rolled 1042 for one single game and 2780 for the three games. The summary:

MANAGERS WORRIED

Toronto, Dec. 30.—Roy Worters, Harold Cotton, Dukes, McCurry and Eddie Rodden are four O. H. A. senior players now performing in the Industrial League who have not yet made definite arrerseance of connection with local teams and some of the managers are worried. Worters and McCurry have signed and played for Argos, while Cotton has signed with Aura Lee and will play tonight in Hamilton. Players are allowed to play one game in O. H. A. but two bars them from playing in Industrial League.

INTERMEDIATES PLAY IN KINGSTON

Opening Game in Intermediate O.H.A. For Belleville Occurs To-night at Kingston

The 12.40 G.T.R. train today carried the members of the Belleville Intermediate hockey team down to Kingston, where they will meet the Kingston Frontenacs there tonight in the first game of the Intermediate series in which our local Intermediates have this year participated.

Possibly the old Province does not contain two hockey teams which are greater rivals than these two formidable squads, and to say the Kingston fans will tonight see a ding-dong struggle is indeed putting it mildly. Belleville want this opening game in the very worst way, as they wish to win their first game and more especially want to win from their old rivals.

Coach Jack Marks is taking down his strongest lineup, and they will make the Frontenac tribe step into town on the double. It is expected that a number of fans will accompany the team down to Kingston this evening. John Murray of Brockville will re'eree.

BENTON ELIGIBLE

Chicago, Dec. 29.—Rube Benton, former Giant pitcher, today was without fear that K. M. Landis, commissioner of baseball, would move to prevent his return to the National League this spring with the Cincinnati Reds, after a visit yesterday with Commissioner Landis. "So far as the records in my office show," Commissioner Landis said, "there is no reason to keep Benton out of the majors. Benton was released by the Giants in July, 1921, and went to the St. Paul club of the American Association."

PRESTON HOCKEYISTS BREAK GALT HOODOO

Preston, Ont., Jan. 2.—The Galt-Preston hoodoo was broken at the Arena here tonight when Preston defeated Galt by 5 to 2, in one of the fastest games seen here on home ice for some time. Galt scored first, a "Punch" George doing the trick. Galt scored twice the first period, while Preston went through for four counters. Galt scored their third goal in the second, while the locals only held scorelees. In the final period Preston added another for good measure, and put the game on ice. The last ten minutes of the final period the locals played a defensive game. The whole Galt team were brought into the attack, but their efforts were fruitless.

N. Hines and "Punch" George were the pick of the Galt forwards, while Wilkinson in goal turned in a good game, and saved his team from a much greater defeat. The Preston team was at its best, and every man on the local lineup played brilliant hockey. Blum in goal gave a wonderful exhibition. Over 2,000 fans were in attendance which included a number from the home of the defeated Terriers, Galt.

Galt—Goal, Wilkinson; defence, G. Hines and Alex. Watts; centre, N. Hines; wings, Oliver and "Punch" George; subs, Floyd George and Hoffman.

Preston—Goal, Blum; defence, Schigel and Skelley; centre, Arnott; wings, Keever and Clark; subs, Woodley and Hamilton.

ST. MARY'S WIN FROM ARGONAUTS

St. Mary's last period punch gave Frank Selke's team a 2 to 1 victory over Argonauts in the first half of last night's O.H.A. Junior double-header at the Arena. Argonauts gave the runners-up to Aura Lee for the 1922 Junior title a mighty struggle, but they did not have any finish to their attack, and the Double Blue lacked a right-handed shot, and that cost them goals and undoubtedly a chance to win the game.

St. Mary's did not show their usual Argonauts checking back like fiends, the Saints found themselves bottled up completely for two periods. The first goal did not come until the teams had battled 36 minutes, and Walter Adams gave the Argos the jump when he shot from outside the defence and then grabbed the rebound off Kelly pads to swipe the rubber between the posts St. Mary's, though they had two glorious chances to score, could not consistently break through the stiff checking of their opponents, and Clark played very strongly it is said.

HOW TO CONSTRUCT THE "VACANT LOT" SKATING RINK

Utilize Your Backyard for Convenience Sake and Skate in the Open

Under no circumstances should a rink be constructed with a fall of more than six to ten inches of frost in the ground—unless it is a natural rink.

The First Step—Before you begin, select a level piece of ground and sufficient bank to hold from four to six inches of water. The ground must be packed and tamped so that the frost flood will not soak through.

The Second Step—After you have six to ten inches of frost in the ground, with a small-sized hose provide a flood, with a sprinkle, to bank thoroughly, and wet the ground surface so that the water you put on will readily drink in. Let this stand for hours, sprinkle it over again, a little heavier this time. If the weather conditions cold, a third application is necessary and by this time you should have six feet out all over the banks as well as the base of the rink. You are now ready to put on about two inches of water. Let this freeze thoroughly, and it should require about 12 to 24 hours. Do not put in more than two inches of water. The first layer must stay.

For the finishing coat, or the glare, a garden hose sprinkling is desirable.

Caution—In the flooding of a rink, to stand in one place and pour the water on through a hose with good pressure is a mistake. You need sufficient hose to reach across the rink, pouring of the water, and backing up with the hose to the near side. In this way you are avoiding washing of ripples.

After the body is on, and the finishing coat, if the weather is such that it freezes properly, the only thing that is necessary after words is a little sprinkling to give you a start, after the skating has through and you have scraped the snow off.

"Many thanks. Looking forward to meeting.

CIVIC AFFAIRS—LOCAL CLUBS HAVE GREAT OPPORTUNITIES

In connection with the activities of the various organizations and clubs throughout the city, it would appear that sufficient interest has not been taken in the municipal elections to exemplify their respective ideas and ethics, coupled with the resolutions formulated and intentions prevailing relative to membership throughout the year.

It is generally understood that such splendid organizations as the Rotary, Lions, Kiwanis, Gyro and Rotarian Clubs are vitally interested in civic welfare, and therefore they should be particularly concerned in the nominations and the subsequent election of candidates for the various civic offices. By persistent efforts on the part of such clubs, younger blood and broadened into local politics and educated to take their part in civic matters. Possible usurpations of some chairs would be thus avoided. The coming generation would be instilled with more self-confidence if they understood that responsible effort was behind their officialdom and men of affairs would accept nomination in a manner of praiseworthy altruism and public spirit. Men of strong character and great administrative ability can easily be located in any municipality, but owing to indifference and public unconcern in civic elections, they decline the issue.

Such clubs as Rotary and Lions, which are locally represented with strong memberships, can, through persistent effort in showing growth of interest in municipal affairs, do much to erase that great reproach now prevalent, as was exemplified by the extremely light vote on Monday. The people should be educated to exercise their franchise and at the same time show discrimination in voting.

Many formidable obstacles will present themselves this year and it will be dangerous for those in office to endeavor to treat the electors in contempt. The people will approve sympathetically of good consistent government and if that is not forthcoming, those responsible can confidently look for rejection should they present themselves to The electors in the future.

In the meantime it behooves every citizen to extend hearty co-operation and support to those chosen and those who did not think it of sufficient importance to cast their vote, cannot expect to criticize, owing to their own laxity.

THE U.F.O. IN POLITICS

R. W. E. Burnaby, late president of the United Farmers, in an address before the recent annual convention in Toronto, declared, "It is not power we seek, but that rural thought and agriculture be adequately represented. I have never heard anyone express the opinion that as farmers we should elect enough members to control a Government."

Dr. R. C. Drury, after three years in office, thinks differently. He said at the same gathering that he thought it in the interest of the province that the Government be strengthened. J. J. Morrison has frankly intimated that in his opinion the government will not be returned at the general election. Perhaps these are various indications of the drift of the feeling of "adequate representation." It may be timely to recall once more that there never has been a time in the rural constituencies of Ontario, when the farmers had not the right and the power to name farmers as candidates at their own party conventions. Frequently those chosen are professional men or tradesmen of business standing, for reasons doubtless sufficient, but that was their own affair.

Since history has a habit of repeating itself, it may be of interest to note the conclusion of an encyclopedia article upon the Granger movement in the United States. After reciting certain useful work done by the Patrons of Industry, the Americans says: "The political element, however, was discrediting the whole movement by its excesses of party judgment, and finally took separate shape as the Farmers'-Alliance and the Populist Party, leaving the diminished Patrons of Husbandry to a useful and growing social and industrial influence."

The Patrons died out in Canada, too, notwithstanding the energetic support of such stalwarts as Duncan Marshall, M.P., later a Liberal minister of agriculture, and now Liberal commissioner. The U.F.O. is now doubtless on the eve of returning to its original sphere of "social and industrial influence," but not before the Government of its creation has set close against class and section against section. It remained for a farmer government to see the birth of a new party movement aiming at separate identity for New Ontario, as announced in press dispatches recently.

The electors of Toronto and Hamilton are appreciative not at the "Beck," and call of everyone.

HERE AND THERE

SAFED THE SAGE AND THE CLEAN SHEET

Safed the Sage unto the Editor who sitteth Nigh unto the Printing Press, Sendeth Greeting:

A New Year Dawneth, and men will hang up New Calendars, and spend two or threedays in trying to remember to write 1923, and in joking about Christmas Resolutions. But I joke not about Good Resolutions, for I believe in them, and make them, and some of them do I keep.

Now there came unto me a man, and he said, "This business of making New Year's Resolutions is All Bunk. For one day is the same as another day, and there is no more Reason for Good Resolutions upon the date of the New Year than upon any other day."

And I said unto him, "Of what thou hast said, I believe Not a Word. One day is most unlike another day. There is a time for all things, even as Solomon said."

And he said, "Tell why should a man make Good Resolutions upon the day of the New Year?"

And I said, "Upon what other day dost thou make thine?"

And he said, "I have no day for it; and of the Ten Good Resolutions that my neighbor made a year ago, he broke Nine within Thirty Days, and I am not sure that the tenth lasted the year out."

And I said unto him, "If my neighbor made ten Good Resolutions and broke them all by Thirty Days, and thou didst make none, he is so far forth more than ten times as good a man as thou. And if he made one that lasted him an Whole Year, behold he hath added a cubit unto his spiritual stature, while thou hast Stood Pat and Shrunk."

And I said, "There were two men, equally good, and so far as I know, equally bad. And one of them said, 'I desire to be a better man.' And the latter forgot his Resolution in One Day. But by the measure of that one Day's effort to be better, he gained in his spiritual stature; and by so much, he was a better man than the other. Yet the other smiled at him, and said, 'Behold, I made no Resolutions and broke none.' But his pride was without foundation."

And I said, "In my childhood I had little Paper in school, but I had a Slate, I wrote upon it, and did many sums in it, and I was blamed so that even when I essayed to clear a spot that I might write something new, the old marks showed through, and the pure was in the hopeless. But once in a very long time, I took the Slate unto the School-House Pump, and washed it clean, and started anew; and that Clean Slate was an inspiration unto me to do My best, and albeit it remained clean not very long, but got Dummed Up and Marked up again, yet was the Pump a Good Friend unto me and unto my Slate. Such be Good Resolutions, and I will not let a year end, which is so large a fraction of a life even the Oldest Man, and make no Good Resolution."

And he said, "I had not thought of it on this wise, and it is Worth Thinking About."

Peace be unto thee, and unto all who read this Parable.

Thus writeth Safed the Sage.—"Association Men."

EAT APPLES.

Fresh and cooked apples hold a unique place in the diet. Too often fruit is considered a luxury for occasional rather than daily use, but the judicious use of both fresh and preserved apples, means better health for each member of the family. The potash soda salts and other mineral compounds, in which apples abound, are needed to keep the blood clear, the acids as an agreeable and wholesome solvent of fibrous portions in food; while the fibrous portions give bulk and tend to promote a healthy action of the intestines; moreover, nothing is better for the teeth and gums than a crisp raw apple.

The apple contains a larger percentage of phosphorus than any other fruit or vegetable. Phosphorus is admirably adapted for renewing the essential nervous matter in the brain and spinal cord. The acids of the apple are of signal use for people of sedentary habits, whose livers are sluggish in action, those acids serving to eliminate from the body noxious matters which, if retained, would make the brain heavy and dull or bring about disease of the eruption and other troubles. Some such experience must have led to the custom of taking apple sauce with roast pork, rich goose and like dishes.

PRESS OPINIONS

IS THIS OUR ASSISTANCE

(London Advertiser)

Only a few weeks ago this district was deluged with mail matter telling how to make a fortune in Austrian kronen.

It was to be a simple matter to cash in on the financial agony of the Austrian people.

Many thousands over there do not know where the next meal is coming from.

But of course that is none of our business—we're quite sure of three squares a day.

Our reply to the appeal of the Austrians to help them get their feet on the way to a decent living was to be that we should sneak out and buy certain of their securities at the fraction of a cent on the dollar.

Now this same company comes again, telling us how to cash in on the necks of the German people and take blood from stones.

Turkey makes a law which will send to prison for a term of years any man who gets drunk. Thanks to Kemal Pasha Turkey shares with us the distinction of being the world's only prohibition nation. DON'T WAIT TO RESOLVE

(Daily British Whig)

Now comes the time of resolutions As regularly as New Year's season brings down the old calendar and puts up the new, so regularly does the average man take down old habits and put up new resolves.

The habit of annually restoring fallen standards or raising higher goals is a good one. The habit of breaking, or forgetting, or neglecting our aspirations is one of our bad habits. But falling into the habit of not having any resolves, or ambitions, or goals or aspirations is the worst habit of all.

Don't wait to resolve. It's better to try and fail than not to try.

Do not fear to resolve to attempt a goal of conduct that seems unattainable. The great ocean of your character may be broader and deeper than you have dreamed. You will never fathom its depth by reaching from the shore with a yardstick. Swim out. Better to get over your head in good intent than lie desparing in the foreground of resignation.

Do not fear that you may weaken your will by failing to keep faith with your resolutions. Your will needs exercise. It will become flabby only if you do not make it work. Working with high resolves tones mental and spiritual fat into mental and spiritual muscle.

Above all, if you break your good resolution, do not wait for another year to roll around to supply a new one. Pick up the old and fix its fragments with the cement of determination. It will be stronger than ever.

SOUTHERN POLITENESS

Miss Mildred Melville Mallison, the anti-vice worker, said in an address in Pittsburg:

"The freedom now granted to women is pain, but it is also a loss.

"In the old days of political campaigns, I put up at a New Orleans hotel. Entering the breakfast room next morning, I found that two men established there, each with a newspaper and a black cigar. Of course, the room was filled with smoke.

"While waiting for my breakfast, I coughed several times, but nobody took the hint, so I said, at last, to myself:

"'Hem! I always understood that Southern men were models of French politeness.'

"The three fat men were on their feet in an instant, smiling and bowing and scraping like so many monkeys.

"'Pardon me, madam,' they said in chorus, and each opened and extended to me courteously a cigar-case full of black cigars."

FOR THE PRINCE OF WALES' RANCH.

"E. P.", meaning "Edward Prince," and when he bought the ranch during his tour of Canada he rode the range of his prairie "dominion beyond the seas," with the Alberta cowboys, and decided that its proper moniker was "E. P. Ranch." Now it has been "E. P. Ranch," for a large flock of Shropshire sheep, Dartmoor ponies, thoroughbred cattle, descended from Cromwell, St. Simon and Bend Or and shorthorn bulls and cows from his Cornwall, England, stock farm to the Alberta ranch. The purchase of the Shropshire grade of champion was made by the Prince's representative, Prof. W. L. Carlyle, of Calgary, who attended the Chicago International Live Stock Exposition in quest of the best Shropshire ram exhibited. This ram, which weighs 250 pounds, was exhibited by J. G. Andrews, West Point, Ind., a director of the International.

HERE'S the grand champion Shropshire ram bought for $500 by the Prince of Wales at the recent International Live Stock Exposition, Chicago, for the "E. P. Ranch," overlooking about 3,000 acres in Alberta, Canada, 60 miles south of Calgary, owned by the Prince of Wales, and which will be the future home of the great Shropshire sire. I JES' FETEND.

(Roselle Mercier Montgomery.)

I jes 'pretend my dad's alive,
An' Mama doesn't have to work,
An' she can stay at home all day,
An' doesn't have to go an' clerk
In 'at ol' store—I jes' pretend!

An' I p'tend 'at we all live
In a big house in a fine street,
An' we have a big big car, a
An' lots of 'licious things to eat
An' lots of clo'—I jes' p'tend!

I jes' p'tend the kids at school
Don't laugh at my ol' clothes an' shoes,
An' 'at they like me—a lot—
'At sometimes in the games they choose
Me, too, to play—I jes 'p'tend!

An' after school, I jes' p'tend
When I go home again an' cook
An' sweep an' dust till Mama comes,
An' I'm a princess in a book!
It's lots of fun jes' to p'tend!

An' me an' Mama, we p'tend
'At we are eatin' off gold plater,
'At we have turkey an' ice cream,
An' cake an' raisins, nuts an' dates—
An', oh, yes—butter!—we p'tend!

An' when I go to bed at night
I jes' p'tend I'm not
So awful cold, I snuggle down
An' make believe 'at I'm too hot—
Sometimes all night, I jes' p'tend!

An' when I hear the kids all talk
'Bout Santa Claus an' his reindeer,
An' all the things he's goin' to bring,
I jes' p'tend 'at he'll stop here!—
I wish he knew how I p'tended!

For maybe, then, he'll bring to soul
Some thing to us—like I p'tend it

WHEN SWEEPING.

To prevent dust from flying when sweeping carpets, moisten a piece of newspaper and scatter it with the brush that though the dust is instantly removed, from the carpet, it is not allowed to rise.

In the first place, no sweeping should be undertaken without a sweeping cap, which can be bought for a few cents, and should be worn. Then, instead of sweeping the dust and shaken out, they must be carried in paper, otherwise they will rise again.

All doors and windows must be closed.

If there is any one portion of the room more than another that is dirty, it should be swept first, and the rest of the room swept gradually towards that.

If really urgent, one must be taken to sweep against the pile, but with a gentle sweep without banging the broom hard on the floor. Each portion of the carpet should be brushed until no more dust piece out of it. If dust is scattered over the room, it is a sign that the carpet should be shaken outside and then brushed.

If there are any moth or visible which have taken root during the winter, they must be sponged, etc., have been put down.

Never open the door or window until all the dust has settled, as the room should look as fine moments after sweeping.

After sweeping, if a linen cloth dipped in cold water (to which a tablespoonful of vinegar has been added), is passed over the woodwork, the colors will be freshened.

Mines.

Somewhat impressive buying at Hollinger was noticed this morning, while both Dome and McIntyre sold well above the day's low level. Interest is expressed on the street that the outlook for all three mines is good. The McIntyre figures for the last three months of the year are also shortly, and should be materially above those of the previous quarter. Some people think that Dome will do something in the way of a cash distribution in the next quarter, while shareholders in Hollinger are wondering what is to be done with that company's huge cash reserve.

The mining market as a whole remains quiet, but no selling is in evidence, and many out east of the members of the Standard Exchange look for a material strengthening in all but the cats and dogs during the next two months.

Wheat Will Go Higher, According to Grain Men.

Views of prominent grain men analyzing the grain industry, point to sharp advance for the hundred million bushels of wheat held by prairie farmers because of the known wheat shortage. They expect at least $1.40 before March 1.

The cost of production was less in 1922 than in the later years of the war [illegible] but greater than in pre-war days. Wages [illegible] for example, in pre-war days cost 10 cents a bushel. This season it has been about 15 cents. The total bill for threshing must have run close to $40,000,000. Nobody accuses the threshing of making excessive profits, but the toll taken by the thresher greatly exceeds that taken by country elevators, terminal elevators and the grain trade combined. The cost of production of course varies on every farm and it is impossible to state it. A well-known grain man, who himself farms extensively and keeps a very systematic set of books, figures it at 75 cents a bushel for an average crop.

Market Opinions.

This morning's comments from New York Stock Exchange houses as received over the direct private wires of F. R. D. Harper & Co., Hotel Quinte Bldg.

(Logan & Bryan)

The street is paying marked attention to the advice touching on the European political situation, and the news regarding the same is expected to have much to do with shaping the price movement in the near future.

(Miller & Co.)

A further forward movement is probable but is not likely to be spectacular. Moderate profits shaping for a time at least.

(Post, Flagg & Co.)

No particular news; everything seems to await upwards. Looks as if market would go higher.

(Harper & Co.)

In New York this morning there is impressive buying of motor stocks. Traders should remember the fact that it is traditional to buy motor shares just previous to motor shows, and such purchases usually result in good profit. Otherwise the market seems quiet.

THE NEWER CANADA, FARTHER NORTH

1—A farm in the Peace River country. 2—Vegetables and children grow well in the newer north. 3—Vermilion Landing on the Peace River. 4—A Peace River potato patch.

So far as known, the first grain crop ever grown in what is now the Province of Alberta, was in the Peace River country. This was in 1909. Daniel W. Harmon, in charge of the North-west Company's post at Dunvegan, records in his diary that the first year on July 21st, he cut his barley.

"I think it is the finest," he wrote, "that I have ever seen in any country. The soil on the points of land along this river are excellent."

Harmon's opinion as to the possibilities of the country was supported by traders and travellers who followed. Professor John Macoun was the first scientific explorer to study it thoroughly, in a book published in 1882 he stated that "the vegetation throughout the whole Peace River valley is of the most luxuriant character, and it seems more like that of the tropics than that of a region drawing near the Arctic circle." But even the Peace River district was not formed, ninety-six years after Harmon made the above entry from his diary, there was less than five hundred acres under crop in the whole area of 115,000 square miles, included in the drainage basin of the river.

The Edmonton Dauvegan and British Columbia and Central Canada railways were built in the early years of the European war. The railway from Edmonton to the town of Peace River is 311 and to Grande Prairie 367. But it was not until 1920, when the C.P.R. took over the operation of the lines, that a satisfactory service was assured, and the settlers were given sufficient confidence to enlarge their operations.

In that year, according to the figures of the Alberta Department of Agriculture, there were produced in the provincial constituency of Peace River the following quantities of grain: Spring wheat, 4,695,600 bushels, an average yield per acre of 20.34; winter wheat, 15,107, an average of 16.26; oats, 4,334,400, an average of 46.22; barley, 213,400, an average of 22.42; rye, 40,096, an average of 42.81. Harmon's judgment was then well vindicated after 311 years.

It should not be forgotten that its mineral and timber wealth may yet be shown to equal its agricultural. For over a century it has been a rich fur producer and many farmers add considerably to their revenue by trapping in their spare time.

Dr. G. M. Dawson, when assistant director of the geological survey, made an estimate that in the Peace River territory there "was at least 23,000 square miles of land available to agriculture. The acreage soon to various parts of it 1920 in the country immediately tributary to the river was under 175,000. Estimates that have been made since have not reduced his figure, as it is evident that there is plenty of opportunity for new settlement. He continued that "if all the land available for cultivation were sown to wheat and yielded twenty bushels to the acre (ten bushels less than the average yield for 1920) the production would be 300,800,000 bushels — more than all Canada produced in a single year in 1921. As high as 69 bushels of oats per acre have been grown and obtained as far north as Fort Vermilion, 250 miles north of Peace River, and 500 beyond Edmonton. The thermometer does go away down at times in these areas, but it is doubtful if anyone has ever pulled out on that account. The worst winter experiences of Fort Vermilion is but a few degrees lower than that of Winnipeg.

In the growing season the frost danger is not great. In thirty years at the Fort Vermilion farm, only twice has there been frost damage, and then the loss was far from complete. The display of flowers and vegetables at that far northern point can be equalled at few points in the Canadian west.

The long days hasten everything to maturity, and harvest begins about the middle of August. The average precipitation is between twelve and thirteen inches, and as most of it occurs in June and July, it proves ample.

It is expected that the country possessed for all who traversed it in the days when it was still the "great northland," the title which Sir William Butler gave it in the seventies, still holds for those who peruse more seriously tasks than his. To journey by the river, from where it bursts from the mountain canyon, west of Hudson's Hope, to the vermilion Chutes, seven hundred miles downstream—there being no obstacle to navigation between the points—is an experience never to be forgotten. At Dunvegan the banks are similar to those of the fertile valley bearing as the river broadens. All the Chutes is is close to a mile and a half across.

It is a waterway along which a very large population must soon depend for prosperity and consistency. What has been accomplished in the last few years makes it certain that that "some day" is not now so far off as it seemed to be during the long period when Peace River development was only a dream.

Lucky Royal Servants.

The festive season costs King George at least £6,000.

Each of the four hundred and fifty servants employed in the royal palaces receives a present valued at about three pounds. In addition, there are eight hundred pensioners, Royes at Windsor, Balmoral, and Sandringham, and all of them receive a gift varying from one pound to five pounds in value.

A short time before Christmas His Majesty makes a list of his charities to which he wishes to send donations, and about £1,000 is spent in this way.

An enormous amount of food, consisting of beef, currants, raisins, and flour, is distributed to the poor from the royal kitchens at this festive season.

The royal family spend Christmas very quietly. Many of the servants are allowed to go to their homes, and about ten days, the King paying their expenses.

Lunar Photographs.

A recent report of the moon presented by the British Astronomical Association dwells on the important additions that have been made to the map of the moon by recent photographs taken with the great 100-inch reflector at Mount Wilson, and suggests that a complete photographic atlas of the moon such as the 60-inch instrument would be a magnificent achievement. Photographs taken with the Mt. Wilson photographs depicts the whole of the Mare Imbrium, a rough count of the craters and crevices appearing in this region gives a total of more than 700, of which about 200 are not found on any existing map. Even as an object for an observer, using a powerful telescope, several years is required to study any of these minute details, which have been recorded by the camera in less than two seconds.

MURDER IN TORONTO TO-DAY

Woman Shoots Her Husband While He Was in His Bed

Toronto, Jan. 3.—For the alleged reason that she was fearful for her life and for the safety of her child, Pearl Levine, aged 30, shot and killed Peter Hookoluk, her second husband, in her apartments here last night. Hookoluk was killed in bed while he had run away from Mrs. Levine following a quarrel when he was started to smash up the bedroom chairs.

EX CHEAPER

These materials from part of the surplus, that passed through the Disposals Board. An Italian syndicate made an offer some time ago which was accepted, but the contract was not completed and the goods have now been forfeited.

LATEST NEWS FROM TRENTON

Very pleasant 500ac party was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Powers, Dundas street, on New Year's Day, when they were hostess and host to a number of friends and relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Foster, Queen street, spent the holiday with Mr. and Mrs. Foster, Miss Maude Foster, and Mr. and Mrs. R. B. MacFarlane and son Colin.

Mr. Rob G. Weddell was host to a number of friends and relatives at his home on Division street during the week end.

Conductor Jos Berry was able to make his usual run on Saturday, for the first time in about two weeks, since becoming "a Shriner.:. No, it wasn't a complete knockout, but we believe the goat had rather heavily on his feet. Anyway he was permitted to receive the degree and passed out a full fledged Shriner.

We learn with a great deal of satisfaction that Mrs. Thompson, Quin st street, does not require an operation, but that her son, Henry, who went to the General Hospital, Toronto, on Thursday last, suffering from appendicitis, was operated on on Friday morning and is doing nicely. Rather a sad coincidence that Mr. Thompson, Sr., should have his wife lying critically ill, and his oldest son be taken to hospital the same time. We are glad the reports are so favorable.

Mr. Arthur Roberts of the Benellet Frontier staff, spent the week end in Buffalo and Rochester.

Mrs. W. B. Curry goes to Belleville for the winter to visit her son, Dr. F W. Curry.

We were privileged to watch the In termediates defeat the Intermediate A's by a friendly contest with the Smith Falls sextette. We might almost say septette. Mr. Sutherland, the referee of play, although not really against us, was far from being with us. Any way, on New Year's night a splendid crowd greeted our boys with three hearty cheers (at least). The way they men behaved before they we had hoped for. Not a fast sheet of ice but one could always find the rubber and the rubber found the Smith's Falls net four times, while the same on only went past "Brownie", Trenton's goalie, those times. Not being a scheduled game, subs were used freely, partly owing to the heavy going and then principally as try-outs As usual, Rupert Schenael has a powerful lot of speed and does find the net in good style. But why waste so much energy, old boy. You can't get that pace all the time. Remember your forward line has two other players. "Peak" Shoniker was as good as ever, but he certainly does like fast company with him, and opportuning him. In fact the whole line-up showed up, we believe, to expects from, for an opening game. Of course some changes in the O.H.A regulations this season make the hockey hockey. Perhaps not as much fun for the spectator, but certainly a whole lot easier on the constitution of the players. We are not kicking, but expect to come back alive after going the full length of the rink. We believe both teams deserve a hand. The brand of hockey was fast ice. Referee Burtt is some ice official. We'll hear more from him during the season. Line-up:

Referee, R. Burtt; judge of play, E Sutherland.

JOLLY HOUSE DANCE LAST NIGHT

At the residence of Mr. and Mrs Fred. Quick, John Street, last evening a jolly little dance was given by their son "Bud" and daughter, Dorothy to about fifty of their friends. Al. Wil son's orchestra furnished the splendid excellent music for dancing. During the evening dainty refreshments were served.

Mrs. Quick received the guests at the door.

By just squeezing a few drops of lemon juice into the food chopper before grinding raisins or other sticky substances, the fruit will not stick to the grinder.

Take care of your eyes, they are your most precious possession. You are too apt to neglect your vision, and the consequences are not to be risked. Anyway he was permitted to receive the degree and passed out a full fledged Shriner.

THE CAUSE OF WARBLES SUCCESS AND FAILURE

How the Pest Operates—Effects and Losses Described—Prevention and Treatment of Warbles — Weeds Versus Wheat.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

The name "warbles" is applied to a rather common condition affecting cattle which is characterized by the appearance of small lumps along the back and loins. The lumps are gradually develop during the late winter months, and as spring approaches the skin along the back and loins is noticed to be covered with small rounded swellings about the size of a small walnut. The lumps are quite tender at first, and when they become fully developed a round hole, surrounded by a little fleshy matter, becomes noticeable in the centre of each little swelling. Through each of these little openings in the skin a grub or warble finally emerges. The explanation of the occurrence and development of warbles in cattle is rather interesting.

The Gad Fly Is Responsible For the Injury.

The primary cause is the "Gad Fly," of which there are a number of species technically termed the Hypoderma bovis and the Hypoderma lineata. These flies attack cattle while at pasture during the warm summer season, and are seldom troublesome during cold damp weather. They make a buzzing sound when in flight, and cattle when attacked by them become terrified to such an extent as to cause them to stampede, which is commonly known as "gadding." The flies attack the lower parts of the body and the legs. They deposit their eggs in the hairs close to the skin, and in such a manner that the eggs are firmly attached to the hairs. After a time the eggs are hatched and the larva or young insect passes down the hair follicles, finally working into the tissues. Further development of the larva takes back these tissues, and finally they succeed in making their way to the region of the back, which they appear to select for the last stage of their development, and form little lumps in the skin, in each of which a grub or "warble" is present, which in time emerges. Finally the grub bores its way out through the skin and falls to the ground, where it passes through the chrysalis or caterpillar stage, spinning in a cocoon or shell-like covering, and transforming into a pupa which in about a month becomes fully developed and emerges as the mature adult gad fly.

Losses and Loss Sustained.

The effects produced by gad flies and warbles are chiefly economic losses, which the first cause by worrying cattle while at pasture during the summer time, thus reducing milk production, and the damage which the warbles inflict upon the skin thus lessening the value of hides for tanning purposes. The extent of the injury done to hides through warbles is considerable, and it is conservatively estimated that seventy-five per cent. of cattle hides are thus damaged each year. Tanners and leather dealers do not want warbled hides as the user is put to much loss and cost to are limited, and as a result they are graded low and reduced in price.

Prevention and Treatment.

Various preparations have been recommended and used as repellants to ward off the attacks of gad flies and prevent them laying eggs on cattle during the summer season, but the treatment of the backs of cattle with a mixture of sulphur, oil of tar and train oil is popular, but it would appear to be of little real benefit. It is now generally considered that the best method to treat warbles are troublesome that the best method to be adopted is to keep the cattle under shelter or in the barn at night during the heat of the day in summer in order to prevent them being attacked by the flies as far as possible. During the winter months the cattle should be examined every week, and if any of them are found to be affected with warbles the grubs should be squeezed out of the lumps, every few weeks or at least once a month. By doing so the removal and destruction of the grubs before they escape in the spring during the heat of the day in summer. Whenever this method or simple measures were carried out the cattle owners each winter the occurrence of warbles would be largely overcome, and a needless loss avoided which in the aggregate is very considerable as it involves loss of cow-fitting, connected with grubs and damage to the hides.—C. D. McGillivray, Principal Ontario Veterinary College, Toronto.

Weeds Versus Wheat.

Harvest returns from the soil 14.6 pounds of nitrogen and 2.2 pounds of phosphoric acid for each on of weeds, while the 30 bushels of wheat in grain and straw removed only 17.2 pounds of nitrogen and 7.2 pounds of phosphoric acid. One ton of such weeds is equivalent to 7 bushel crop.

In Feeding Young Pigs for Real Profit.

Pithy Paragraphs Full of Facts About Feeding Them — Fertilizers for Fall Wheat — Pregnant Ewes Require the Best of Care.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

Causes of failure and success in the feeding of young pigs are points only put in the following article:

Causes of Failure in Feeding Young Pigs.

1. No one on hand to see that everything is right when pigs are born.

2. Excess of fat in mother's milk.

3. Cold, damp, uncomfortable quarters.

4. Intestinal parasites.

5. Shortage of sweet skim milk at weaning time.

6. Ration out of balance.

7. Ration composed of unsuitable grains.

8. Lack of mineral matter in food.

9. Housing conditions unsuitable.

10. Exposure—hog cholera, etc.

11. Neglect to alter male pigs at proper time.

12.—Neglect to supply ample feed for proper development, regularly.

13. Working with poor stock.

14. Spoiling the pig as a good scavenger.

Success In Feeding Young Pigs.

1. Mother's milk normal.

2. Clean, dry, bright, comfortable quarters.

3. Practice of disease preventive methods.

5. Ample yard room, protection from hot sun and flies.

6. Ample clean drinking water and wallow, during hot weather.

7. Proper feeding for conditions supplied during winter when on the dry lot conditions are not favorable.

8. Working with well bred, vigorous stock.

9. Ample supply of green forage, such as alfalfa, red clover, sweet clover, rape and blue grass.—L. Stevenson, Sec. Dept. of Agriculture, Toronto.

Fertilizers for Fall Wheat.

Fall wheat must have a strong well-rooted plant to withstand the winter. To insure this there should be an abundance of all kinds of available plant food in the soil. The soil constituents the wheat plant has the greatest difficulty in obtaining is the soil are nitrogen and phosphorus. The plant food costs money and summer followed, or, if a clover sod has been ploughed into a spring which will probably be no need of purchasing a further supply of nitrogen, and an application of acid phosphate alone will probably be sufficient. If, on the other hand, the wheat is to follow corn, it will have to stay four times the plants will not develop a good top, then some form of readily available nitrogen should be liberally used to advantage.

Clover sods have little difficulty in getting their supply of potash, therefore, there will rarely be any purchase a fertilizer containing this constituent by application on a sod land to be sown to wheat.

Prof. H. H. Hilton, Chemistry at the Ontario Agricultural College has found each year's application of from 200 to 400 pounds of acid phosphate per acre 100 pounds of muriate of potash per acre has very much increased the yield of wheat on the clay soils predominating in the Niagara fruit district and in the area lying along the north shore of Lake Erie. It is probable, however, that when the soil is worked up to a high state of fertility matter, enough to furnish sufficient potash, this latter constituent may be omitted.—Chemistry Dept., Ontario Agricultural College.

Pregnant Ewes Need Best of Feed and Care.

Lambing time is perhaps the most important period in the year for the sheepherd. A successful lambing period means it makes a successful shearing year, it then behooves every sheepherd to have a big percentage of good strong, healthy lambs as possible. The lambs, and perhaps here and there a ewe, will be the result of the good feed and care will amply repay you.

If the ewes are to lamb before they go on pasture they should receive some grain about one month before little openings in the skin and loins of cattle owners each winter the occurrence of warbles would be largely overcome, and a needless loss avoided which in the aggregate is very considerable as it involves loss of cow-fitting, connected with grubs and damage to the hides.—C. D. McGillivray, Principal Ontario Veterinary College, Toronto.

Eastern Ontario Dairymen

cent years. Other speakers, will, understand, deal with the same subject we shall improve the quality of both our butter and cheese if we are to hold our own in the markets of the world.

Home Conditions
What then are the prospects of our being able to affect the improvement in home conditions which the world market conditions make imperative. In some respects they have never been as bright as to-day. This year, for the first time in our history, the Dominion Government is going to insist that all our cheese and butter that is exported shall be government graded before it is shipped. This means that definite grades which have hitherto been approved by our dairy authorities and adopted by the government, will be established in connection with the industry and that our cheese and butter will be sold according to its quality. I do not wish to imply unnecessarily on the cheese board system of selling, but the fact remains that this system has never practically recognized grades for cheese and that a large percentage of inferior cheese has often been sold at the same price as cheese of higher quality. From now on we may expect that this condition will be remedied and that a great incentive will thus be given to factories to improve the quality of their product in order to ensure their receiving the highest possible grading.
While it may be too soon to anticipate what this change will mean, it seems destined tomorrow our cheese and butter will be gathered at central points, graded and sold according to grade.

Dairy Standards Act
In Ontario during the past year, the Dairy Standards Act has been enforced for the first time. While some objection has been expressed to the Act, particularly in the case of certain districts, it is evident now that the objection was not as general or as strong as was generally supposed, that the Act as a whole, has given satisfaction and that it is here to stay. It is a question as to why we may not suffer through the dairy instructors being required to give so much of their time to the testing of milk instead of to the work of instruction as hitherto. If so, steps should be taken to adjust the situation. How that cheese will be sold according to grade, it should be possible for the instructors to visit without delay, also every factory which the government graders report to be having difficulty with its grades. If this is done, a very quick and permanent improvement should result in the quality of our cheese.

The Co-operative Movement
One of the most striking characteristics of the war has been the rapid development of the co-operative movement, not only in Canada, but in the United States. Just what the final outcome of this movement may be, it is too early to predict. For years the largest and most successful sales agency in the province of Quebec for cheese and butter, has been the Quebec Co-operative Central which sells the cheese and butter of a number of cheese factories and creameries. In Ontario in 1920 there was organized United Dairymen's Co-operative, Limited, which has conducted large and increasingly successful sales of government graded cheese and butter at Montreal. This company has announced its intention to establish a similar sale this coming year at Belleville for the central Ontario district and a third sale in western Ontario. This company of producers, in nearly two and a half years has sold nearly 94,000,000 worth of dairy products, a record of which it has just reason to be proud.
During the past year there has been organized also the Ontario Co-operative Dairy Products, Ltd., a company which is aiming to secure the marketing of about 25 per cent. of cheese produced in Ontario and of 20 per cent. of the creameries, on the basis of what has been accomplished has proved successful with other farm products in certain districts of the United States.
Still more recently, I understand, there has been formed another co-operative company in Ontario, which hopes to play an important part in the marketing of whole milk and cream in our towns and cities. These such movements as these in our province indicate that our dairy farmers are reaching out after new and improved methods of marketing their dairy products.
We have certain problems in connection with our dairy industry, which hitherto have proved difficult of solution and which apparently our producers must largely work out for themselves. In the more eastern part of the province, we have to many small cheese factories without proper curing facilities and which are unable to pay the salaries required to ensure the employment of competent cheese makers. This condition has been a serious detriment to the industry. There are signs however, that as improvement may soon be expected. The grading of cheese will reveal the incompetent cheese makers and improperly equipped factories and thus will help to bring about needed reforms. The improvement which is taking place on our roads will make it possible for some of the smaller factories in those sections where bad roads have been a serious detriment, to unite in the erection of larger and better plants. The investigation which was conducted during the past year by the Ontario Department of Agriculture, has shown the excessive costs of manufacture in many factories as compared with larger and better equipped factories. This information, as it becomes better known, will also tend to effect changes for the better.
Many of the subjects upon which I have touched, are to be discussed at this convention. Our Conferences have long been the meeting house where those interested in all aspects of the dairy industry have been able to discuss and exchange their views each year. I trust that this year we will all join heartily in the discussion of these important problems and that the wide grasp of the whole of the home helpful and interesting conference in the history of our association.
The speakers at this afternoon's session were Prof. Leitch and Prof. A. E. Archibald. A cheese grading and scoring contest was conducted by Geo. H. Barr and Joseph Burgess of the Dairy and Cold Storage Branch, Ottawa.
This evening's session will be presided over by Mayor Hanna and the speakers will be Miss Helen Campbell, Hon. Manning Doherty and Mr. S. T. Stonehouse. The addresses will be interesting ones to home and the general public is cordially invited to attend.
Tomorrow will be cheese and butter makers day—address by nationally known dairy experts will be delivered at all these sessions.

CIVIC AFFAIRS—LOCAL CLUBS HAVE GREAT OPPORTUNITIES

In connection with the activities of the various organizations and clubs throughout the city, it would appear that a sufficient interest has not been taken in the municipal elections to exemplify their respective aims and ethics, coupled with the resolutions formulated and intentions prevailing relative to membership throughout the year.

It is generally understood that such splendid organizations as the Rotary, Lions, Kiwanis, Gyro and Kinsmen Clubs are vitally interested in civic welfare, and therefore they should be particularly concerned in the nominations and the subsequent election of candidates for the various civic offices. By permitting effects on the part of such civic organizations they may be transformed into local politics and educated to take their part in civic matters. Possible usurpations of terms chairs would be thus avoided. The coming municipal election will be inaugurated in due course, if they understood that responsible effort was behind their officialdom and men of affairs would accept nonstealthful in a degree of spontaneous affirmism and public spirit. Men of strong character and progressive ability can easily be located in any municipality, but owing to indifference and public unconcern in civic elections, they decline the honor.

Such clubs as Rotary and Lions, which are locally represented with strong memberships, can, through persistent effort in showing growth of interest in municipal affairs, do much to offset the apathy and aimlessness now prevalent, as was exemplified by the extremely light vote on Monday. The people should be encouraged to be individualistic and at the same time show discrimination in voting.

Many formidable obstacles will present themselves this year and it will be dangerous for those in office to endeavor to trust the electors in connection. The people will approve emphatically of good consistent government and if that is not forthcoming, those responsible can confidently look for rejection should they presume themselves to be masters in the future.

In the meantime it behooves every citizen to extend hearty co-operation and support to those chosen to direct the civic affairs of the city, and if important to cast their vote, cannot expect to criticize, owing to their own laxity.

THE U.F.O. IN POLITICS

R. W. E. Burnaby, late president of the United Farmers, in an address before the fourth annual convention in Toronto, declared, "It is not power we seek but that rural thought and agriculture be adequately represented. I have never heard anyone express the opinion that the farmers we should elect experts members to control a Government."

Hon. E. C. Drury, after three years in office, thinks differently. He said at the same gathering that he thought it in the interests of the province that his Government should be returned. J. J. Morrison has frankly intimated that in his opinion the government will not be returned at the forthcoming election. Perhaps there are various distinct views as to the precise meaning of "adequate representation." It may be timely to recall once more that there never has been a time in the rural constituencies of Ontario when the Farmers had not the right and the power to name farmers as candidates at their own party conventions. Frequently such chosen are generally returned to the ranks of business standing, for reasons doubtless sufficient, but that was their own affair.

Since history has a habit of repeating itself, it may be of interest to note the conclusion of a once despondia article upon the Granger movement in the United States. After reciting certain useful work done by the Patrons of Industry, the Americans says: "The political element, however, was discrediting the whole movement by its excesses and ill judgment, and finally took separate shape as the Farmers' Alliance and the Populist Party, leaving the legitimate field Patrons of Husbandry to a useful and growing social and industrial influence."

The Patrons died out in Canada, too, notwithstanding the generous support of such stalwarts as Duncan Marshall, later a Liberal minister of agriculture, and now federal commissioner. The U.F.O. is now doubtless on the eve of entering the political sphere of "social and industrial influence," but not before the Government of its creation has set about against class and section against section. It refrained for a former government to see the birth of a new party movement, aiming at separate identity for New Ontario, as announced in press despatches recently.

The electors of Toronto and Hamilton are cogitantly not at the "Beck" and call of everyone.

HERE AND THERE

SAFED THE SAGE AND THE CLEAN SHEET

Safed the Sage unto the Editor who sitteth Nigh unto the Printing Press, tendeth Greeting:

A New Year is with us, and we will hang up New Calendars, and spend two or threedays in trying to remember to write 1922, and in joking about Christmas Boxes that have been and Good Resolutions that are to be. But believe in them, and make them, and some of them do keep.

Now there came unto me a man, and he said, "This business of making New Year's Resolutions is All Bunk. For one day is the same as another day, and there is no more Reason for Good Resolutions upon the First of the New Year than upon any other day."

And I said unto him, "Of what then hast said, I believe Not. A thing is not wrong in most unlike another day. There is a time for all things, even as Solomon said."

And he said, "But why should a man make Good Resolutions, any more than any of the Rest?"

And I said, "Upon what other day dost thou make thine?"

And he said, "I have no day for it; and of the Ten Good Resolutions that my neighbor made a year ago, he broke Nine within Thirty Days, and I am not sure that the Tenth lasted Sixty days out."

And I said unto him, "If thy neighbor made ten Good Resolutions and kept them all for Thirty Days, and then didst make none, he is no farther from Grace than he was as good a man as thou. And if he made one that lasted him an Whole Year, behold he hath added a cubit unto his spiritual stature, and also has lived Three hundred days."

And I said, "There were two men, equally good, and as far as I know, equally bad. An one of them said, 'I will strive to be a better man.' And he joined the Resolution in One Day. But by the m-asure of that one Day's effort to be better, he gained in his spiritual possibility, and by so much, he was a better man than before. Yet the other smiled at him, and said, 'Behold, I made no Resolutions and broke none.' But his pride was without foundation."

And I said, "In my childhood I had little Paper in school, but I had a Slate. I wrote upon it, and did same things with it, and it was not that even when I scraped it clear a spot that I might write something new, the old marks showed through, and the gum was in the holders. And once in a while I took the Slate unto the School-House Pump, and washed it clean, and started anew; and that Clean Slate was an inventive unto me to do my best, and while it remained clean it was Perfect, but got Gummed Up and Marked up again, yet was the Pump a Good Friend unto me and unto my Slate. Such be the Good Resolutions that will not in a year end, which is to large a fraction of a life of even the Oldest Man, and make no Good Resolution."

And he said, "I had not yet thought of it on this wise, and it is Worth Thinking About."

Peace be unto thee, and unto all who read this Parable.

Thus writeth Safed the Sage.—"Association Men."

EAT APPLES.

Fresh and cooked apples hold a unique place in the diet. Too often fruit is considered a luxury for occasional rather than daily use, but the judicious use of both fresh and preserved apples means better health for each member of the family. The potash soda salts and other mineral compounds, in which apples abound, are needed to keep the blood pure and to make it alkaline and wholesome solvent of fibrous portions in food; while the fibrous portions give bulk and tend to promote a healthy condition of the intestinal canal, making it easier for the teeth and gums than a crisp raw apple.

The apple contains a larger percentage of phosphorus than any other fruit or vegetable. Phosphorus is admirably adapted for renewing the essential nervous matter in the brain and spinal cord. The acids of the apple are of great use for people of sedentary habits, whose livers are sluggish in action, those acids serving to eliminate from the body noxious matters which, if retained, would make the brain heavy and dull or bring about jaundice or skin eruption and other troubles. Some such experience must have led to the custom of taking apple sauce with roast pork, rich goose and like dishes.

Only a few weeks ago this district was debating with mail matter telling how to make a fortune in Austrian krones.

Our regret is the appeal of the Austrians to help them get their feet on the way to a decent living was to be that we should sneak out and buy some of their securities—at the fraction of a cent on the dollar.

DON'T FEAR TO RESOLVE

(Daily British Whig)

Now comes the time of resolutions! As regularly as the first day of January brings down the old calendar and puts up the new, so regularly does the new year bring down old habits and put up new resolves.

This habit of annually restoring fallen standards and setting higher goals is a good one. The habit of breaking, or forgetting, or neglecting our resolutions is not a good one. But failing into the habit of not having any resolves, or ambitions, or goals and aspirations is the worst habit of all.

Do not fear to resolve. It's better to try and fail than not to try.

Do not fear to resolve to attempt a goal of conduct that seems unattainable. Your failure will make of your character may be broader and deeper than you have dreamed. You will have failed in the depth by moving from the shore with a yardstick. Swim out, attempt to get over your head in good intent than lie-despairing in the frogpond of resignation.

Do not fear to resolve. Weigh well your will by failing to keep faith with your resolution. Your will needs exercise. It will become flabby and deformed if you do not make it work. Working with high resolves turns mental and spiritual fat into mental and spiritual muscle.

Above all, if you break your good resolution, do not wait for the coming year to roll around to apply a new one. Pick up the old and fix its fragments into a new resolve of determination. It will be stronger than ever.

"'Hm! I always understood that New Orleans people were models of French politeness.'

"'Pardon me, madam,' they said in chorus, and each opened and extended to me courteously a cigar-case full of black cigars."

THE CAUSE OF WARBLES

How the Pest Operates—Effects and Losses Described—Prevention and Treatment of Warbles — Weak Verms Wheat.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto).

The name "warbles" is applied to a rather common condition affecting cattle which is characterized by the appearance in the skin, principally the back and loins. The lumps gradually develop during the late winter and spring months, as a rule appearing in the skin along the back and loins is noticed to be covered with small round swellings about the size of a small walnut. The lumps are quite tender at first, and when the skin is under tight tension, as a round hole, surrounded by a little reddish matter, becomes noticeable in the centre of each little swelling. Through each of these little openings in the skin a grub or warble finally emerges. The explanation of the occurrence and development of warbles in cattle is rather interesting.

The Gad Fly Is Responsible For the Injury.

The primary cause is the "Gad fly," of which there are two varieties technically termed the Hypoderma ovis and H. lineata, known also as these flies attack cattle while at pasture during the warm summer season, and are seldom troublesome during the cold camp weather. They make a piercing sound as they fly through the still when attacked by them become excited to such an extent that they run from the pasture, which is commonly known as "gadding." The fly attack the lower portion of the body and the legs. They deposit their eggs at the hairs of the legs. The eggs are in such a manner that the eggs are firmly attached to the hairs. About a time the eggs are hatched, and the young grubs or larvae pass down the hair follicle, through the skin, and into the tissues. Further development of the larva takes place in the tissues, and as the grub grows in size making their way to the region of the back, which they appear to select for the last stage of their development, and form little lumps in the skin, in each of which a grub may be found at present, which is the mature larva. Finally the grub leaves the cyst through the skin and falls to the ground, where it passes through the chrysalis or caterpillar stage encased in a cocoon, from which the perfect fly and is transformed into a pupa which in about a month's time the fully developed and emerges as the mature adult gad fly.

Effects and Loss Sustained.

The effects produced by gad flies and warbles on cattle are considerable losses, which the flies cause by irritating the animals and preventing the summer time and lessening milk production, and the damage which the warbles inflict to the skin, thus lessening the value of hides for leather purposes. Warbles cause the injury done to hides through warbles is considerable. It has been conservatively estimated that twenty-five per cent. of the hides of cattle are damaged each year. Tanners and hide buyers do not want hides affected, as the user a grubby hide can be put to such a small use that the price they are graded low and reduced in price.

Prevention and Treatment.

Various preparations have been recommended for the destruction of warbles to ward off the attacks of gad flies and prevent their laying eggs on cattle during the summer season. Local applications of oil to the backs of cattle, a mixture of sulphur, oil of tar and train oil is popular, but it would be difficult to apply to all cattle, as it is now generally considered that the application of these would cause troublesome that the best course is to dress the hides over. In the fall after shelter or the shade of trees and the flies have left for the year, the grubs may be enlarge a little with a sharp knife, and by squeezing the little lodeform-caseless ointment applied. This treatment is composed of one part of lodoform and five parts of vaseline, and is very successful in killing the grubs. The grubs can be readily squeezed out of the lumps at the proper time and should be destroyed by burning, to check further development and thus lessen the number of flies for the coming summer. All these grubs should be destroyed as soon as removed.

Weeds Verms Wheat.

Engraved removes from the south 14.6 pounds of nitrogen and three pounds of phosphoric acid. One ton of weeds, while the same weight of wheat, oat straw removes only 12.3 pounds of nitrogen and 2.2 pounds of phosphoric acid. One ton of such wheat is equivalent to a 13 bushel crop.

GAS ATTACKS

The gas attacks our boys went through in France put a severe strain on the lungs.

The gas attacks from which you suffer are below the floor of the lungs, that is below the diaphragm.

These attacks are very common and very painful. They were given a very common, low-down name at one time, but now you refer to them as a touch of Ptomaine poisoning.

What really is the matter? Most frequently you have not chewed your food; you have allowed it to slip down into the stomach with too little or to a bite instead of twenty-two. The stomach hasn't any teeth and as a lot of work which should have been done in the mouth was not done therefore gases which should have escaped from the mouth or have been taken care of by the saliva, are produced in the stomach. The stomach dilates, a gas ball is formed, and you have the real pain and pressure of a gas attack.

It is an interesting sight, with the aid of the fluoroscope to watch this ball of gas at the top of the stomach. By means of bending and twisting exercises the ball of gas is dislodged and expelled through either of the openings in the stomach. Many gas attacks are due to fermentation. Your stomach action is very slow, fermentation begins and the pressure of gas gives that severe pain that is almost unbearable.

A very simple mechanical method is now being used by many people with great success. About four hours after each meal you simply lie down on the right side for about ten minutes and any food lying in the stomach is syphoned into the intestines and your stomach gets a little rest before the next meal. Simple, isn't it?

IS THAT ALL?

cent years Other speakers, will, I understand, deal with this subject we shall improve the quality of both our butter and cheese if we are to hold our own in the world markets.

Home Conditions ✓

What then are the prospects of our being able to effect the improvement in home conditions which the world market conditions make imperative. In some respects, they have never been as bright as to-day. This year, for the first time in our history, the Dominion Government is going to insist that all our cheese and butter that is exported shall be government graded before it is exported. This means that definite grades which have already been approved by our dairy authorities and adopted by the government, will be established in connection with the industry so that our cheese and butter will be sold according to its quality. I do not wish to reflect unnecessarily on the cheese board system of selling, but the fact remains that this system has never established responsible grades for cheese and that a large percentage of inferior cheese has often been sold at the same price as cheese of higher quality. From now on we may expect that this condition will be changed and that a certain incentive will thus be given to factories to improve the quality of their product in order to ensure their receiving the highest possible grading.

While it may be too soon to anticipate what this change will mean, it seems destined to ensure our cheese and butter being gathered at central points, graded and sold according to grade.

Dairy Standards Act

In Ontario during the past year, the Dairy Standards Act has been enforced for the first time. While some objection has been expressed to this Act, particularly in a few certain districts, it is evident now that the objection was not as general or as strong as was generally supposed, that the Act as a whole, has given satisfaction and that it is here to stay. It is a question if we may not suffer through the dairy instructors being required to give so much of their time to the enforcement of this instead of to the work of instruction as hitherto. If so, steps should be taken to adjust this matter. Now that cheese will be sold according to grade, it should be possible for the instructors to work without delay every factory which the government graders report to be having difficulty with its grading. If this is done, a very quick and permanent improvement should result in the quality of our cheese.

The Co-operative Movement

One of the most striking aftermaths of the war has been the rapid development in the co-operative movement all over Canada, as well as the United States. Just what the final outcome of this movement may be, it is too early to predict. For years the largest and most successful sales agency for the producers of Quebec for cheese and butter, has been the Quebec Co-operative Central which sells the cheese and butter for hundreds of cheese factories and creameries. In Ontario in 1920 there was organized the Dairy Farmers Co-operative, Limited, which has conducted large and increasingly successful sales of government graded cheese and butter at Montreal. This company has announced its intention to establish a similar sale this coming year in Belleville for the central Ontario district and a third sale in western Ontario. This company of producers, in nearly two and a half years has sold nearly $4,000,000 worth of dairy products, a record of which it has just reason to be proud.

During the past year there has been organized also the Ontario Co-operative Dairy Products, Ltd., a company which is similar to, except control of 50 per cent. of the total cheese produced in Ontario and of 30 per cent. of the creameries, on the pooling plan which we understand has proved successful with other farm products in certain districts of the United States.

Still more recently, I understand, there has been formed another co-operative company in Ontario, which hopes to play an important part in the marketing of whole milk, cream and cream in our towns and cities. Three such movements as these in our province indicate that our dairy farmers are reaching out after new and improved methods of marketing their dairy products.

We have certain problems in connection with our dairy industry which hitherto have proved difficult of solution and which apparently our producers must largely work out for themselves. In the more eastern part of the province, we have too many small cheese factories without proper curing facilities and which are unable to pay the salaries required to ensure the employment of experienced cheesemakers. This condition has been a serious detriment to the industry. There are signs however, that an improvement may soon be expected. The grading of cheese will reveal the incompetent cheese makers and improperly equipped factories and thus will help to bring about needed reforms. The improvement which is taking place in our roads will make it possible for some of the smaller factories in those sections where bad roads have been a serious detriment, to unite in the erection of larger and better plants. The investigation which was conducted during the past year by the Ontario Department of Agriculture, has shown the excessive costs of manufacture in small factories as compared with larger and better equipped factories. This information, as it becomes widely known, will also tend to effect changes for the better.

Many of the subjects upon which I have touched, are to be discussed at this convention. Our Conferences have long been the closing houses where those interested in all aspects of the dairy industry have been able to meet and exchange their views each year. I trust that this year we will all join heartily in the discussion of these important problems and that this will prove to be one of the most helpful and interesting conferences in the history of our associations.

The speakers at this afternoon's session were Prof. Leitch and Prof. A. E. Archibald. A cheese and butter judging contest was conducted by Geo. H. Barr and Joseph Burgoyne of the Dairy and Cold Storage Branch, Ottawa.

This evening's session will be presided over by Mayor Ellens and the speakers will be Miss Helen Campbell, Hon. Manning Doherty and Mr. E. H. Stenhouse. The addresses will be interspersed with music and the general public is cordially invited to attend.

Tomorrow the cheese and butter makers day—address by nationally known dairy experts will be delivered at all three sessions.

WOMAN CHARGED WITH MURDER

COURT CROWDED

At Sudbury Mrs. Connaughton is Committed for Trial —Accused Pale But Composed

Sudbury, Dec. 28.—Clad in a long fur coat and black felt sailor hat, and accompanied by her husband who sat by her side constantly and travelled with her to and from the jail, Mrs. Sadie Connaughton, of Chapleau, was this morning committed by Magistrate Goodhart to stand her trial at the next court of competent jurisdiction on the charge that she did wilfully slay Mrs. Jane McKee at Chapleau on or about December 16 last.

Although pallid and plainly distressed Mrs. Connaughton's carriage was graceful, and except when a few tense portions of the evidence was given, she held her head erect.

The court room and corridors were crowded with humanity surging through the hallways of the court house for admission to the court. A large number of those present were women, and at one o'clock, when the court adjourned for the noon hour, the court was comfortably filled.

Evidence of Provincial Officer Jorgensen was the same as that given at the inquest in which he told of plaster secured on the street and of her words that she had killed Jane McKee because there was another woman in the home. Mrs.

The young officer, at the dying man's request, unfastened the curiously constructed belt we know and removed it from the grey man. Beneath it his body lay, was satisfied, and with a sigh of contentment sank exhausted, breathing as though he had suddenly come to a deep like a tired child.

A very slight examination convinced Ayrsworth of the importance of the truth placed in his hands and its value to himself. It was all so unexpected, so sudden, so overwhelming, that he trembled with the joy and wonder of this new-born hope. He had devoted his life to the search for his father and the possession of proof that would set him right in the eyes of his fellow-men; and now it was brought to him in this extraordinary manner, when he had almost ceased to expect success.

He knelt and gently kissed the old man's hand, sobbing out his thanks like a child.

"Good father, I am that stranger's son," he said; "you have yourself fulfilled your mission."

"Ah!" the priest said, with a quiet note of satisfaction, escaping himself; "is it even so?- The saints be praised! I should not have been mistrustful, my son, but I was permitted to take a human view for some wise end, no doubt. But how the light has come. God ;s Light ay son; God's Light" and breaking into Ayrsworth's eyes with a strange wild fulness, which he remembered long afterwards, he added, "God is merciful and Mercy- Yes, God is Mercy; and blessed are the merciful for—"

"It was not given to him for further strength, and he relapsed into serene unconsciousness and lay like one dead, unaware that Ayrsworth thought he was dead.

Soon the doctor came in; he had on hope of saving the old man's life from the first, still he continued to do all he could to alleviate his sufferings.

He had stood under the doctor's skilful care, and was again asking for a priest, when two of Ayrsworth men entered, bringing one with them. He was a stranger, a Frenchman, and almost in a state of collapse from sheer terror. The poor man knew no English, and the soldiers knew no French, so that the worthy man was left in a state of torturing suspense as to what was going to happen to him. As the men understood that his presence was required, they tied the terrified prisoner to the cavalry charger that was by no means steady under his weight, and, in an excellent rotador, and never had village parson a better ride. A few words from the doctor were sufficient to allay his apprehension for his personal safety, but it was not quite so easy to take the sobs out of his bones; and the memory of that cross-country gallop long remained with the worthy man as a heroic tale of danger and daring in the midst of the fierce troopers of Wellington.

Ayrsworth never saw Father Francis again. Before daybreak he had started with military despatches for London and it was some years before he revisited those wild scenes of his youth. When he came again, Napoleon was chafining against his fate in his island prison; many regard expressed sorrow there; the peasantry had settled down to their usual toil; the birds sang joyfully in the forests; young girls and maidens were rejoicing in the fulness of life where thousands of brave men had fallen, gone down green grass or stretched upon the battle-field; it is private feud and political crimes that leave long echoes of bitterness and hatred behind them.

He started on the journey like a man in a dream; or rather, perhaps, like a man who had been asleep and suddenly aroused to a sense of the real world and realities around him. He had been chosen to carry despatches by Sir Thomas Graham, it is give him an immediate excuse for returning home: a favour it is doubtful if he would have asked for, even under the terrible pressure of the moment.

He read and re-read the story to his father had written with such minute care and burning passion, read with an absorbing interest that even the wild mechanical monde of the Bay of Biscay could not disturb.

Slowly, bit by bit, the magnitude of his father's power opened his eyes and out flooded his whole being with the keenest anguish. The weather was foul and threatening, but that was not nearing home, and the sailors were running out matches of lowe-some lurid; not even the thunder of angry seas breaking over the deck, nor the yoice of the gale calling in the rigging, could stay their music. At times a half-crazed fear that foul gleams upon the troubled waters; but no gleam, and no suggestion of home or calm, touched the mind of the young man who was battling alone with the fiercest passions that can rend and torture a human mind.

"God in Heaven,' he cried in lily bitterness to the night and the storm, "is it possible? Can it be true that a man could plan and execute such a hellish scheme against a trusting friend, and repeating friend entangle a man of honour by legal artifice, strip him bare of his lands and wealth, and forten upon him a charge of murder of the foulest and most heartless kind, and yet continue to live and prosper a midst the very scenes of his successful villainy?"

The thought was maddening. The wild strain in his blood clamoured for vengeance, vengeance—swift, terrible, deep—vengeance to fit the crime—vengeance pitiless, remorseless, is lark as hell. He stretched out his arms as though he would grasp the phantom of his hate; his face raised to the darkened sky, when suddenly a line of light left the thick black; a cool moonbeam breaking through the storm-clouds and illuminating the face of white light, a ghostly shadow, with sublime calm upon the seaving ship and tossing billows.

He shivered as though all at once chilled to the bone, and folding his arms tightly he held himself as though to prevent his passion escaping, that it might not be torn from him; for with that line of light came the memory of Father Francis and his dying words: God is Light, my son; God is Mercy."

"What! he cried out hoarsely to the storm; 'must a man forego his part of vengeance? Must such human vermin live, and go in and out among men at their ease? Must I, the chief and direct agent know of the measure of a man's mind into whose soul the iron had entered? What human power could be have of be unspeakable misery of thwarted plans through long years, the humiliating conditions of his life, the galling limitations to his just ambition, the odious ghosts of every shape and hue that must have crowded and crowded on his soul every conscious day of his existence since early boyhood? What could such as he do? What could he have? Nothing! nothing, absolutely nothing!

Then the memory of such things through a rift in the clouds, and the young man's arms dropped as swiftly as they had risen, and he stood there the same amazing child accused to freeze him to the marrow, until he shuddered with the consciousness of Ayrsworth's unconscious mental perception, which held him as it were suspended between heaven and earth. The breath came in gasps, like a man who had been running for his life and was near enough to the goal to see the tape in front space.

"Neither Father Francis nor any other," he whispered hoarsely, 'can sound the depths of Ayrsworth's wickedness; and yet—and yet—if there be a God that Divine Being must be the fountain of Mercy. No man can know so much and the noblest known no French, so that he who

The magnificent ship was tied up about 4 p.m. and a battalion of travellers got all the silk in the store and out of the yards at 7 p.m., nearly ahead of a similar cargo on board the President Madison, which left Yokohama the same day as the Empress of Canada.

Montreal—Calls at Belfast on both the eastbound and westbound trips of Canadian Pacific liners sailing between Montreal and Glasgow, instead of only on the westbound trips as at present, and more extensive use of Southampton as a port of call for passenger traffic, are inventions planned by the Canadian Pacific Steamships, Limited, for the 1923 season.

The calls at Belfast on eastbound trips are an inauguration of a new passenger service from Canada to Ireland. This service will be established by the steamships Metagama, Marburn and Marloch, and will combine the valley facilities of the steamers from Montreal, bound for Belfast and Glasgow, on May 5, which will be the first Canadian Pacific sailing from that port in 1923.

The coal mined is of excellent quality for domestic use and should remove any danger of coal shortages in the west this winter, Mr. Murphy states.

Evidently the farmers of the district are in accord with the railroad problem, for Mr. Murphy, while travelling through the district, watched farmers filling their wagons with coal free of charge.

Lethbridge—Jurisdiction of the Lethbridge division, Alberta district, Canadian Pacific lines, will be extended far inside the western boundary of Saskatchewan when the Lethbridge operating department of the railway takes over on December 1 the operation of the newly constructed portion of the Lethbridge-Weyburn line. The Lethbridge division now extends to the town of Shaunavon, 200 miles, half way between Lethbridge and Weyburn, 122 miles east of Shaunavon, which has been the end of the steel on the west, and the territory of the Lethbridge division now covers 725 miles of line from Crowsnest Pass, Shaunavon and from Calgary to the border.

Six years ago Mr. Lee was the winner of the Roadmaster's prize.

The latter, realizing that one of the south gates was liable to be similarly treated at the specified motorist, raised the gates at a considerable speed, being just quick enough to make a passage for the speeding machine. Mines.

Somewhat impressive buying of Hollinger was noticed this morning, while both Dome and McIntyre sold about a point lower. The belief is expressed on the street that the outlook for all three mines is good. The McIntyre figures for the last three months of the year are due shortly, and should be materially above those of the previous quarter. Some people think that Dome will do something in the way of a cash distribution in the near future and that the dividend on Hollinger are wondering what is to be done with that company's huge cash reserve.

The mining market as a whole remains quiet, but no selling is in evidence, and ninety per cent of the members of the Standard Exchange look for a material strengthening in the list the end of the year and does during the next two months.

Wheat Will Go Higher, According to Grain Men.

Views of prominent grain men anticipating the price of wheat, point to sharp advance for the hundred million bushels of wheat held by prairie farmers because of the threatened shortage. They expect at least $1.60 before March 1.

The yield of production was less in 1922 than in the later years of the war by one bushel per acre in pre-war days. What threatens for example, in pre-war days cost 16 cents a bushel. This season it has been about 15 cents. The total bill for threshing must have run close to $60,000,000. Nobody accuses the thresher of making excessive profits, but the toll taken by the thresher greatly exceeds that taken by country elevators, terminal elevators and the grain trade combined. The cost of production of coarse varies on every farm and is impossible to state it. A well-known grain man, who himself farms extensively and keeps a very systematic set of books, figures it at 75 cents a bushel for an average crop.

Market Opinions.

This morning's comments from New York Stock Exchange houses as received over the direct private wires of F. R. D. Harper & Co., Hotel Quinte Building.

(Logan & Bryan)

The street is paying marked attention to the advice touching on the European political situation, and the news regarding the same is expected to have much to do with shaping the price movement in the near future.

(Miller & Co.)

A further forward movement is probable but is not likely to be spectacular. Moderate profits shaping for a time at least.

(Post, Flagg & Co.)

No particular news; everything seems to point upwards. Looks as if market would go higher.

(Harper & Co.)

In New York this morning there is impressive buying of motor stocks. Traders should remember the fact that it is traditional to buy motor shares just previous to motor shows, and such purchases usually result in good profit. Otherwise the market seems quiet.

THE NEWER CANADA, FARTHER NORTH

1—A farm in the Peace River country. 2—Vegetables and flowers grow well in the newest north. 3—Wagon Loading on the Peace River Flats. 4—Peace River potato patch.

SO far as known, the first grain crop ever grown in what is now the Province of Alberta, was in the Peace River country. This was in 1899. Daniel W. Harmon, in charge of the Northwest Company's post at Dunvegan, records in his diary that on that year on July 21st, he cut his barley.

"I think it is the finest," he wrote, "that I have ever seen in my country." The soil on the points of land along this river are excellent.

Harmon's opinion as to the possibilities of the country was supported by traders and travellers who followed. Professor John Macoun was the first scientific explorer to study it thoroughly. In a book published in 1882 he stated that "the vegetation throughout the whole Peace River valley is of the most luxuriant character, and it seems more like that of the tropics than of a country drawing near the Arctic circle." But when the Province of Alberta was formed, ninety-six years after Harmon made the entry quoted from his diary, there was little more than hundred acres under crop in the whole area of 115,000 square miles, included in the drainage basin of the river.

Edmonton Dunvegan and British Columbia and Central Canada railways were built in the early years of the European war. The mileage from Edmonton to the town of Peace River is 311 and to Grande Prairie 360. But it was not till 1920, when the C.P.R. took over the operation of these lines, that a satisfactory service was assured, and the settlers were given sufficient confidence to enlarge their operations.

In that year, according to the figures of the Alberta Department of Agriculture, there were produced in the provincial constituency of Peace River the following quantities of grain: Spring wheat, 1,495,000 bushels, an average yield per acre of 20.34; winter wheat, 11,097, an average of 16.26; oats, 3,847,000 bushels, an average of 39.22; barley, 223,000, an average of 22.42; rye, 40,092, an average of 15.31. Hardly a settlement was established more than fifteen years ago.

It should also be forgotten that its mineral and timber wealth may yet be shown to equal its agricultural. For over a century it has been a field for producer and many farmers add considerably to their revenue by trapping in their spare time.

Dr. G. M. Dawson, when assistant director of the geological survey, made an estimate that in the Peace River territory there was at least 250,000 square miles of land available to agriculture. The acreage sown to various grains in 1922 is only a very immediately tributary to the river valley. Of the 1,495,000 bushels of wheat here made since have not reduced his figure, so it is evident that nearly ninety of equipment of the new settlement. He calculated that if all the land in the river valley were sown to wheat and yielded twenty bushels to the acre (ten bushels less than the average yield for 1922) the total production would be 300,000,000 bushels — more than all Canada's crop in the best year wheat in 1921. As high as 69 bushels of Marquis wheat per acre has been obtained as far north as Fort Vermilion, 250 miles north of Peace River, and 500 beyond Edmonton. The thermometer does go many degrees in winter in these areas, but it is doubtful if anyone has ever pulled out on that account. The most winter temperature of Fort Vermilion is but a few degrees lower than that of Winnipeg.

In the growing season the frost danger is not great. In thirty years in the Fort Vermilion district, only twice has there been frost in August, and then the loss was far from complete. The display of flowers and vegetables at that far northern point can be equalled at fair points in the Canadian west. The long days hasten everything to maturity, and harvest begins about the middle of August. The average precipitation is between twelve and thirteen inches, and as most of it occurs in June and July, it proves ample.

The farm which the country possessed for all who crave rest in the open air. It was all "free wild northland," the title which Sir William Butler gave it in the seventies, still holds for those who pursue more than mere sport. To journey by the river, from where it bursts through the mountain ranges, west of Hudson's Hope, to the vermilion Cliffs, many hundred miles downstream—there being no obstacle to navigation between the points—is an experience for the hardiest sports. At Dunvegan the banks are steep, but from there to the mouth level, ing as the river broadens. At the Chutes it is close to a mile and a half across.

There is a waterway along which a very large population must some day find its support and contentment. What has been accomplished in the last few years makes it certain that that "some day" is not now as far off as it seemed to be during the long period when Peace River development was only a dream.

FOR THE PRINCE OF WALES' RANCH.

HERE'S the grand champion Shorthorn shire ram bought for $500 by the Prince of Wales at the recent International Live Stock Exposition, Chicago, for the "E. P. Ranch," owned by the Prince in Alberta, Canada, 50 miles south of Calgary, owned by the Prince of Wales, and which will be the future home of the great Shorthorn sire. The Prince says himself: "E. P." meaning "Edward Prince," and when he bought the ranch during his tour of Canada he made the range "a present to the dominion beyond the seas," with the Alberta cowboys, and decided that its proper moniker was "E. P. Ranch." Since then the Prince has added a flock of Dorset Horned sheep, Dartmoor ponies, thoroughbred Hereford cattle from Ormonde, Earl Simon and Bend Or and shorthorn bulls and cows from his Cornwall, England, stock farm to the Alberta ranch. The purchase of the Shropshire grand champion was made by the Prince's representative, Prof. Alex. Galbraith, of Calgary, who attended the Chicago Exposition in quest of the best Shropshire ram exhibited. This ram, which weighs 250 pounds, was exhibited by J. Buttar, of Ilderton, West Perth, Ont., a director of the International.

TRENTON JUNIORS BEAT CAMPBELLFORD

Arena Filled to See Bear Cats Beaten 9-4 Trenton's Stonewall Defence Was Stumbling Block for Cats

Campbellford, Ont., Jan. 2.—In the first O. H. A. hocker match played to Campbellford since 1914 Trenton's junior team defeated the Bear Cats 9 to 4 before a crowd that filled the arena. The Bear Cats exceeded the puck, but could not penetrate the big expectations or their most ardent supporters and had their share of the Trenton defence most of their shots being from outside. The second period was faster, with the Bear Cats having the best of the play, and outscored Trenton 2 to 1. They were through on numerous occasions but lacked the finish around the nets. Brady, Archer and Smith were the best of a good little team, while E. Allore was the best boy on the ice and carried the brunt of the work for the Bear Cats.

Referee—Jack Carmichael, of Toronto.

Winnipeg, Jan. 3—Kicht or nine new industries with a total capitalization of well over twenty million dollars and giving employment to several thousand men will be established here this year, according to a statement of a prominent citizen last night. The concerns represent British American and Canadian capital,

ROBERTS GOES TO PRISON

Montreal Editor Taken to Quebec Jail to Serve His Sentence

ONE YEAR IN PRISON

Bill Committing Him Sanctioned by Lieut-Gov. On Friday Last

MUCH DISCUSSED CASE

The fourth session of the Fifteenth Legislature of the Province of Quebec was prorogued Friday night shortly after half past ten.

Contrary to many persistent rumors which had been going the rounds for the last few days in Quebec, the Lieutenant-Governor, Sir Charles Fitzpatrick, gave his sanction to all the bills which had been passed during the session, including the bill sentencing John H. Roberts to one year in the Quebec jail.

Immediately after the Lieutenant-Governor had sanctioned the bill sentencing the editor of The Axe, Roberts was handed over to the chief of the Quebec Provincial Police by the Sergeant-at-Arms of the Legislative Assembly and taken to the Quebec jail where he is to remain for twelve months from this date.

Mr. Roberts was found guilty by the Assembly early in November last year, of having violated the dignity and honor of the Legislature by publishing an article in his paper in which he referred to two members of the Legislature in connection with the murder of Blanche Garrow in 1920.

Mr. Roberts had been detained until Friday in the quarters of the Quebec Provincial Police in the Parliamentary buildings.

In three of the Wards of the city there were contests for Public School Trustees, namely Bleecker, Foster and Murney Wards. In the two former Wards the contest was close and in Murney Ward Mr. Geo. T. Woodley who has been a member of the Board for some time was re-elected by a substantial majority. Messrs. W. H. Gilbert and Frank Potter are new members. The results were as follows:

SPECTACULAR AND SPIRITED MUNICIPAL CONTESTS IN TORONTO AND HAMILTON YESTERDAY

HEAVIEST VOTE IN TORONTO'S HISTORY

Maguire Re-elected Mayor Over Flemig—Three Hydro Men and One Anti-Hydro Man Comprise New Board of Control—New Council Evenly Divided On the Issue

HYDRO RADIAL BY-LAWS DEFEATED

Toronto and Hamilton Say "No" to the Grab—Sir Adam Beck Expressed Regret but Says "We Shall Fight On"

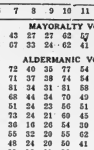
Pro Radial Mayor Wins at Hamilton—St. Catharines Carries the By-Law Overwhelmingly—Contradictory and Surprising Verdicts Rendered

Following the most strenuous battle ever waged in municipal history, the Hydro Radials and the principle of public ownership received a temporary set back yesterday.

The Hydro radial entrance agreement, termed "The Grab," by its opponents was beaten by 5,139 votes in Toronto, viz. For 23,129, Against 28,268. However a peculiar position now obtains in that city, as while the Hydro entrance agreement was disapproved, the majority of the successful City Council candidates are pledged to hydro-radials and ran on such a platform.

Mayor Maguire, for the Radials and a strong supporter of Hydro was re-elected for the second term over R. J. Fleming by a majority of 840, viz: Maguire 40,491, Fleming 39,651.

For Board of Control, Foster, Hella Gibbons, and Singer were elected, and Burgess, Nesbitt and Sam McBride, the veteran campaigner, were listed among the fallen.



The total vote on the Mayoralty was 80,142, while the total vote on the Hydro-radial agreement was 51,454, the latter having been confined to property owners. The total electorate in Toronto numbers about 187,000, and the property-owners are estimated at about 90,000.

In 1921, when T. L. Church, K. C. M.P., beat Sam McBride by nearly 16,000 for the Mayoralty, the total Mayoralty vote was 55,925. The total vote on the Hydro change in the same election was 39,472, alongside of 51,454 yesterday, which is indicative of the intense interest taken in the issue.

For days the Hydro-radial entrance or the numerous and varied ramifications incident to it, practically held a monopoly of discussion in the homes, in the clubs, in the streets and in places of business. One heard it everywhere. Dozens of meetings were held nightly. The views of each side were

MAYOR ELECT

GEORGE A. BENNETT

SPEECH DAY AT ROTARY

Mayor Elect Bennett and Councillors Guests At Rotary Luncheon To-day

After luncheon at the Rotary Club today, President "Bill" Deacon, expended the compliments of the season to everyone present.

Members of the new City Council of Belleville were present as guests of honor of the Rotarians, after receiving the congrats. of President Bill Deacon Geo. A. Bennett was called upon for a speech.

Aldermen Greenleaf was also congratulated on fathering the Park By-law, which received a "Bill" Labelette and H. Branscombe, newly appointed baseball players for Grand Trunk 1922 nine, were guests of the Club and cheered to the echo.

MAYOR BENNETT.

Expressed pleasure at being present and stated that he would handle the business of the city in a business-like way, and solicited the help of all citizens in general. "There will be difficulties to overcome this year," said Mayor Bennett, who lauded anyone who wished to come to council and air their grievances from time to time. I propose to clean out the river and make Belleville more healthy.

Ald. H. Thompson expressed appreciation of citizens in placing him at the head of the poles. I was born to the instrumental in securing the services of the new city engineer, who is one of the best in Ontario.

Ald. H. Greenleaf: "I have tried to give you service and I believe you appreciate that I have tried to do my best." The carrying of the Park By-law by such a handsome majority marks a new era in the history of this city. This result makes a bigger and better Belleville and will keep our boys in their home town and possibly attract old boys back to the city. In 1923 Belleville will have doubled her population, under this scheme. In 1923 there will be an exhibition park, grandstand, and all necessities of an amusement park. Swimming pool, rink, drives, beauty spots, and Zwicky's Island, a beautiful park with new filtration plant. We hope to have a new depot for "Canada's own" railway system.

Every level in the city will be available parcel. Porter's bathing beach and elimination of the frog pond, and

EX-ALD. BENNETT WILL PRESIDE OVER CITY COUNCIL

Elected to the Mayor's Chair by a Substantial Majority—Eight Members of Last Year's Council Who Sought Re-election Are Returned—Four New Faces Will be Seen in Aldermanic Seats—Parks By-Law Carried by 739 Majority—Small Vote Recorded

The civic election for 1922 were held Friday, and the poll but this year by the New Year's Day and being was considered by Ald. Thompson for a holiday it was suggested that this be the best position. It was however, a close vote recorded would be a large one, but the vote polled not to be the case. At the against 1100 for Ald. French. Ald. Thompson then put forward the name for Mayor Robinson and Public school Trustees in 1920 were the three of the Wards, the vote recorded Bennett, the city this year there will be 12 Aldermen in the Council as against 9 as a result 60 per cent of the vote upon last year. The four new members the city has, last year when Mayor are Messrs. S. H. Trevetton, M. J. Lynch, Bleecker and Ald. Thompson, Ald. Ald. Adams and D. Ketcheson. Of Robinson would be a large one, but the these Messrs. Trevetton and Adams had contest was close. At the against previously been members of the city 1100 for Ald. French. Ald. Greenleaf council, and by proceedings will not be Bennett received 995 and Ald. Ostrom new to them. The council of 1923 will 819. This shows a decrease of 513 votes be composed of Mayor Bennett; Alderover that of last year. Mr. Bennett's men Thompson, French, Patterson, McMajority was 176 over his opponent.

ALDERMANIC CONTEST.

One unfortunate feature of the contest for Alderman was the fact that the old members of last year's Council failed to get re-elected. Four of the eight retired were well up in the list. It is generally announced that the four of last year would be between Ald. Thompson and Ald. French and such proved to be the case. Last year Ald. Bleecker and Ald. Ostrom were elected.

PARKS BYLAW.

It was generally expected that the Parks By-Law would receive a majority for the management of the parks in the city would be supported by the electors and they did so in no uncertain manner. There were recorded 1129 votes for the bylaw and only 390 against it.

Last night at the City Hall, subsequent to the municipal election results being announced, many candidates addressed the electors. The auditorium was packed with people and if the same interest had been manifested in the polling during the day as was apparent in the auditorium prevalent at the public meeting afterwards, it is difficult to determine just what the final results might have been. Mayor Hanna presided and announced the results of the ballotings. He first called upon Mayor-elect George A. Bennett, who came to the platform amid vociferous cheering. His address was as follows:

"I thank you for what you have done for me. You have placed a great responsibility upon my shoulders and I will try to do my duty. I will do everything I can for the advancement of the city of Belleville. There is one thing, however, that does not seem right, and that is to see the votes that were polled today. Belleville cannot expect their representatives to do everything for them if they will not cast their vote. I would like to see everyone poll their vote. I am sure I am proud to be your representative, I am grateful you will be well pleased that you have put me at the head of the poll. We have had a hard fight and my opponent and I are the best of friends, and always will be that. I am tired from the hard day's work and will not say any more, but my actions, rather than words, will tell."

Ald. Ostrom, the defeated mayoralty candidate, was then called upon.

Ald. Ostrom:

"You can hardly expect any words from me. I appreciate the vote of all who supported me and think kindly of those who have not. I have given you four years of faithful service and you have not rewarded me with the same number of years. I think as a candidate defeated, I would like to have finished with full municipal honors, but this is not your wish. I am grateful to you for past favors and will always try to boost the town. I have no grudge against anyone. I am sorry to see that some people whom I indirectly helped did not see fit to support me at the polls. They say that I tried to deprive the laboring men of their livelihood. I have never tried to do any such thing, and you will live to see that I am a different man than you think me. I think, however, that you have given me a favor. I can now remain at home and attend to my work."

Ald. Thompson: "I have led the field in the aldermanic race, was then called to the platform.

Ald. Thompson:

"If you were in my place tonight I do not know what you would say there but you have placed me at the head of the poll, and as I am the youngest man in the Council, I appreciate it more than ever before. I am the only reason I know is that when I was crossing the lower bridge today, Ald. French was crossing the upper one and is still going, and that is the reason I beat him out. The one thing I have to say is that I will endeavor to support the same as in the past. I will do everything to the best of my ability, thanking you again, and wishing you the compliments of the season."

Ald. French:

"I thank you for your hearty support, which proves to me that I have done my duty for the two years I have served the city, and I will try to do the same next year. Harry Greenleaf has worked a little harder, I have been today. Again I wish to thank you for placing me second on the list. Last year you put me at the head."

Ald. Greenleaf:

"I assure you that I am much

NEW YEAR'S FESTIVITIES; QUIET IN CITY

Few Holiday Visitors—Special Music in the City Churches Sunday

The holiday yesterday was exceptionally quiet in the city. The municipal elections seemed to create little interest and of course the inclement weather interfered to a large extent with the sport programmes. The curling bonspiel scheduled for the day was postponed owing to the condition of the ice, but the hockey game in the Bay of Quinte League was played as arranged, in the evening. The music in the churches yesterday was in keeping with the season's festivities. Appropriate sermons were delivered and special music was rendered in the city churches on Sunday and many of the churches will after they the ringing of the bells signified the ringing out of 1922 and the advent of a new year. Owing to inclement weather ings were in vogue at many residences, but generally a quiet atmosphere prevailed.

FIRE RAGING AT ESSEX GARAGE

Just at the hour of going to press, dense clouds of smoke were seen issuing from the vicinity of Stephenson's Y.M.C.A. building. The fire department made a quick response and after 4 alarms were sent in fighting the flames. It was ascertained that the Essex Garage was the scene of the conflagration.

The garage will be totally destroyed, together with a number of locally owned valuable cars, which could not be removed. Adjoining buildings are becoming ignited and great damage is also being done by water. As the gasoline tank at the garage was recently removed this is not considered to be a factor in the cause of the fire.

WAYS OF THE BOOTLEGGER

Extensive Smuggling Operations Carried Out Between Quebec and United States

In an article which appeared in the New York Herald recently, dealing with the smuggling of liquor from Valleyfield, Que., to the American side of the line, some interesting information is brought to light.

The article states that across nearly every farm that lies directly on the border there are paths leading from the United States into Canada. There are hundreds of them. The country is flat, and "sloughs" and low lands run around in front it is a simple thing to dash across a field anywhere, jump a fence, alight in the main road and the customs officer for two or three miles and meet the Canadian trader with his cargo.

Officials say that probably 8 or 10 of the larger "operators" own farms which lie across the border line, partly in each country. In those cases the operation is greatly simplified. The barn on the Canadian side is used for storage. A constant supply of hundreds of cases is kept buried in the manure pile. There the rum and gin are out of the way places.

The Canadian Government forbids exportation, but the fact is that the provincial government is eager to keep the liquor moving and make allowance no effort to stop these operations places. It is much harder for the American officials, for they cannot cross across the line. These farms are all in the names of Canadians who live there and keep up the pretense of farming. Many of the smuggling places often deserted farms which have almost overnight become worth fortunes.

"For a five dollar bill paid to each of three or four farmers the booze can pass in comparative safety across the border without touching a bigger. The money is paid to the operator. The farmers are glad to pick up the extra money.

"The small troopers have been more active that usual of late. They have made several arrests and seized many loads. But the best the officials can do is a small proportion or the bootleggers. One government official estimated today that probably a tenth part of the booze cross the border line on the busy nights and 30, 20 or 40 on average nights. Even a week day. It's big record for officials.

"There are as many individual tricks as there are clever bootleggers. Through a recent arrest it was found that one chain of bootleggers was operating with three sets of runners. The boss ran the border, averaging three trips a week and 36 or 40 cases a trip. Another of the miles inside of the state border he met his wife, who always drove with two children, and brushwood in part of the cargo in the motor. She continued to Watertown. Where the third man picked up the cases and completed the journey to the part of the state. The woman was caught.

"The truth is that the government is almost prostrate as far as effective regulations of the traffic is concerned."

Quebec, Dec. 29.—College men and women of Greater Boston have the prospect a club home, to be built at an estimated cost of $1,500,000 under plans of a committee of the Harvard University Club, the sponsor of the project. With the existing organization as a nucleus, the Harvard Club is expected ultimately to have a membership of 5,000.

There are to be 25,000 persons, alumni of 237 colleges and universities, resident within 20 miles of the city, who are eligible to membership. Separate organizations are now maintained by graduates of all these institutions. The present University Club was organized in 1892 at the suggestion of Harvard men, those who were to form a luncheon club.

A youth who had accomplished a good deal in football, but little in his studies, was dropped from one preparatory school and immediately invited by the master to enter another. He had been there but a few days when he met a member of the faculty. "Well," said the Professor, "how do you find it here?" "Pretty fair," said the boy. "That's good. Find it smooth going, eh?" "No, boy replied, "I don't see why I shouldn't like to say that exactly," he remarked. "The field's sort of rough and in places, sir."

QUOTATIONS FROM "OUR LITTLE LIFE"

Interesting Expressions From Novel by J. G. Sime

"Patience—that overrated virtue—is not much more than a failure in vitality. Youth goes fulfilling against the windmills of life without a thought of the consequences. It is only when one can knock at the door when woman alone is in complete dishabille, and she can stand there with her hair in her best clothes, having tidied up the place in the same instant of time, as you will hardly be conscious of it, ing keen kept waiting."

"Swearing is, after all, a confession of failure in itself. It is the expression of a weakness that fails to find adequate language for the outcome of its feelings."

"In Canada there is the real Middle Class, English attitude towards art or anything kind; you pay your money to see and hear it and thank God when you can come away again."

"Love is a thing like a bulb, ought to pass a certain period in the cool darkness to give his roots time to get strength and to penetrate downwards After he is rooted let him spread by all means; but until he has the power of growth in him let him be kept comfortably in his cellar and watered passionately and tended with all due care; and let those premature leaves which will prevent the healthy formation of the later bloom be pulled off ruthlessly remorseful."

"Probably a friendship between a man and a woman never yet was quite satisfactory things; and probably the reason is that a friendship between a man and a woman never is friendship."

"Miss McGee, is certain with a good many other people, always did. She didn't understand a thing excluded that on that very account it must be fine."

"It is a nice question just how unfortunate we need to be for the natural pleasure of life."

"Even when the thermometer is 24 below and we live we will a thawing pull out haven't a fur coat? Can you describe when the thermometer is 24 below and we live we will a thawing pull out haven't a fur coat? Can you describe when you have a raging 105 and the doctor has forbidden ice the world when he had a toothache?"

CORNISH MINING ACTIVITIES RE-OPEN

London, Dec. 23. (The Canadian Press)—One of the human sides of the Cornish tin industry which the commercial markets expect will be sustained, is the possibility of reopening the famous mines which for over the days of the Phoenicians these mines have been constantly worked until now the tin mail must come from deep 'dish seam' which proved unprofitable in competition with other fields when the recent slump came.

Thousands of miners with no other work to do faced utter destitution, whole villages being deprived of their only means of income by the closing of the mines. Three thousand men and their families have been saved from starvation by the efforts of the local committees, and a great fund throughout the country. To this the King has just announced the distribution of another £10,000 for feeding and the Prince of Wales 50 pounds.

Nearly 1,000 miners already have contracted but the promoters of the fund now believe that if they can pull through the winter many mines will be able to reopen in the spring and thus many picturesque Cornish mining villages will be saved. Unless the miners refrain from organizing they will not be able to reopen on account of lack of labor skilled in the conditions peculiar to Cornish production.

THE PORT OF LONDON

Early Records Date Back to A.D. 61—Modern Docks Planned in 1799

London, Dec. 28.—The origin of the city of London has not been authentically traced by the historians. One of the oldest, Geoffrey of Monmouth, a writer of the founding the city to Brutus, who called it New Troy, but the earliest authentic record is that of Tacitus, who, writing in A. D. 61, described London as a place "copia negotiatorum at commeatuum maxime celebre"—rendered, literally, "much frequented by a number of merchants and trading vessels."

London's position, strategically in land, at the head of navigation of a deep tidal river, gave to it commanding advantages as a centre of distribution. To the end of the eighteenth century its trade was carried on either at moorings in the stream, by the aid of barges and lighters, or at wharves constructed on the river-side.

There were no enclosed docks in that period, with warehouses where valuable cargoes might be stored in security. Losses by theft and damage became so serious that public opinion was aroused in the City of London, and a scheme was promoted and the money guaranteed by the leading merchants for constructing enclosed docks. As a result a bill was passed by Parliament in 1799 authorizing the construction of the West India Docks. The buildings of the modern dock system as it is today. The foundation stone was laid with great ceremony in the presence of Premier Pitt and his Cabinet in 1800, and the docks were completed and opened to shipping in 1802.

So successful was this first venture that what would be called today a "boom" in dock-creating enterprise ensued, and further schemes in the Port of London were promoted and sanctioned by Parliament at short intervals. Prior to 1909, when the Port Authority was created, the provision of facilities and accomodation was in the hands of private dock undertakings, which had become impoverished by unwise competition one against the other, and consequently lacked the means to carry out the requirements necessary to keep the port abreast of the times. A state of inaction had existed for nearly thirty years, and this was becoming a menace to London's position as the world's centre of commerce. Then a Royal Commission was appointed to administer all the various dock undertakings on the River Thames.

Lloyd George was then President of the Board of Trade and put through Parliament a Government bill creating the Port of London Authority, 1908, and this came into effect in 1909. The beautiful Port of London Authority Administration Building, which was formally opened by a short time before Lloyd George resigned the Premiership, is a monument of which the Port Authority and the citizens of London generally have reason to be proud. It cost £10,000,000, and is considered to be one of the most beautiful buildings in London.

COPPERFIELD LIBRARY CHANGES HANDS

London, Dec. 28 (The Canadian Press) —The David Copperfield Library now belongs to the Children of St. Pancras London, it having been presented to the Borough of St. Pancras by the Children's Country Movement. This new Library for children is in memory of the novelist, Charles Dickens, and is appropriately named after one of the chief works of the English master of fiction. It is located in the house where Charles Dickens lived as a boy, No. 13 Johnson street, Somers Town, and which Dickens immortalizes in "David Copperfield" as the residence of William Micawber, who was always waiting "for something to turn up." This house with two adjacent buildings, is the gift of Councillor A. Davis, of St. Pancras. The David Copperfield Library is in the slums of Somers Town. Its windows were bleared, its chimney pots grotesque, and its outer front grubby as a sweep, for it was built 150 years ago, but it has been renovated and made habitable for its new use. Once in a career of this house a little lad lay at night by a pile of old books reading by candlelight. Some of those books were the works of famous writers, yet this boy, unknown at that time, illclad and illnourished, came to be prouder than the authors of the books he was reading, to be known as Charles Dickens.

In this house now there are books in every room, crowds and crowds of books, all arranged as in a shop. The floors are stools and tables, covered with illustrated books, the latest and best books for children, and in the evenings when the rebook are over for the day little boys and girls come into the house with their cash put on their counters. Then they wander around the miniature shelves until each has found a suitable book, upon which they sit down and read. They wander around the miniature shelves until each has found a suitable book, upon which they sit down and read from the most elementary picture tales for babes to a shelf of graciously-bound French classics, in a manifesto Republic. Many of the books have been given by famous London folk. There are also Dutch books in the library, presented by the Leyden Burgomaster, Professor Van Leyden, master, of Leyden, Holland, was one of the honored guests at the formal opening recently.

Ethel—Did you hear about Gladys? She has a position as director in one of the big department stores.

Clara—Well, I don't envy her. I don't see how being known as a plain clothes floorwalker.

WHY HERMIT CRAB FEEDS HIS PALS

London, Dec. 28.—The mystery of the hermit crab, and the hermit crab, and the reason why he always lives with "movements" of other species, has at last been cleared up.

Dr. J. H. Orton, of the Plymouth Marine Biological Laboratory, whose researches have been famous by revealing to science the power of the mollusc to change its sex, has studied the relationships of the common hermit crab to the anemone and certain tunicate worms which live communally with it.

The conclusions reached by Dr. Orton are that both animals are benefitted by their habits. The anemone derives advantages from the hermit crab by being dragged about with his tentacles on the ground, and being given opportunities for picking up food left or lost by the crab. The crab obtains protection from fish attacks owing to the unpleasantness of the anemone as food.

In the case of the worm, one was observed to crawl alongside the body of the crab and, without doubt, the community a piece of food from between the crab's jaws and bolt it—an action tolerated by the worm's benefactor.

OUR FOREST WEALTH

Figures of the pulp and paper industry timber should be preserved. Extent of The Industry Summarized (A) In four figures illustrating the magnitude of the pulp and paper industry in Canada may prove interesting. Reports show:

(a) The invested capital is $317,000,000—over half of which is invested in Quebec.

(b) Production capacity of newsprint—1,200,000 tons per annum.

(c) Canada produces ninety-five per cent of the newsprint imported by the U.S.A.

(d) Pulp and paper exports for the year ending April, 1922, amounted to $180,000,000 placing the industry third largest in Canada, being only exceeded by the exports of wheat and agricultural products.

Having made a pulp and paper it constitute our third largest industry it is safe to let the lumbering industry which also depends on the forest for its existence. Combining these two great industries of the forest, the importance of our forests. And how are we protecting these forests? Although much has been done in this direction more still remains to be done; were it otherwise, how could we have such devastation as the following:

(a) On the Transcontinental railway from Cochrane to LaTuque, a distance of 150 miles, there are more than 1,000,000 cords of wood and at the same time we have burnt up more than 2,000,000 cords.

(b) Due to the destruction of the forests, the water level in the soil is falling there fort every ten years. This is lowering the vitality of the trees and they fall an easy prey to beetle and insects.

(c) In New Brunswick 50 per cent. of the spruce has been destroyed by the budworm. Other provinces are no doubt, equally affected.

(d) In Lake Temiskaming the forest era cut down to make way for farm. Many deserted farms is what is left today testify to the fact that forest and cannot invariably be transformed into agricultural lands.

Such facts are not pleasant to a man, but we must face them and we must remedy them if the industry is to remain a permanent asset of our country.—G. W. Dickson.

TELEPHONE OFFICIAL IS PRESENTED

Last evening at the Quinte Cafe, a dinner was given by the employees of the local exchange, in honor of Mr. E. L. Mooney of the staff, who is being moved from the Belleville offices to the Kingston exchange, and who leaves in the near future for the Limestone city, to take up residence.

Some eighteen members of the staff were present, and after the meal, Mr. Mooney was presented with an address and a fine ring. The address was read by Mr. W. B. Doolittle, and the presentation was made by Mr. James Mc-Donald. Mr. James Cohen, District Manager of the Exchange, also made a short address, speaking in the highest terms of the services given to the company by the official who they were about to lose. Mr. Mooney made a very appreciative reply, thanking his fellow workers for their kindness and wishing them well.

SUGAR PRODUCED BY NEW PROCESS

London, Dec. 25.—Sugar may today be obtained from soda water, the scientific discovery which flows from nickel plated faucets in thousands of drug and candy stores throughout the country, according to two, English scientists who for nearly three years have been conducting laboratory experiments with the idea of duplicating artificially the work done by plants in self-nourishment.

It always has been a scientific mystery how living plants build up the sugar, necessary for their growth, from the carbon dioxide or carbonic acid, a component part of the atmosphere, which they absorb, by mixing it with carbo-hydrates and the starch universally found in plants.

Their experiments convinced the scientists, Professor E. C. Dairy and Professor Heilbron, that not only is it possible to produce formaldehyde from soda water by the action of very short wave length light, ty that it is also possible to produce formaldehyde with ordinary sunlight in the presence of malachite green, or other appropriate coloring matter.

Carrying their investigation a little farther they succeeded, by acting upon soda water with ultra-violet rays, in building up sugar. They found that formaldehyde turns directly into sugar.

The yield of sugar may be increased by heightening the concentration of carbon dioxide with sodium carbonate.

SIX INDIAN SKELETONS FOUD; SLAIN IN BATTLE CENTURY AGO

St. Thomas, Dec. 27.—Six human skeletons, believed to be of Indians slain in battle a century or more ago, were unearthed recently by Mr. Albert Berry of Bayham township, when searching for a skunk that had holed in, in a woods about two miles east of Vienna.

The skeletons, which were well preserved, were found in a small mound. A ragged hole through the top of one skull bore mute testimony to the manner in which the victim met death, while a similar hole was found in the side of another skull.

Relics found in the mound were found: stint traces of a log dwelling or stockade.

Berry was digging for the skunk when he came upon the skeletons. He continued until he found the animal, but was satisfied to let it and his other find. A more careful search of the mound and locality will be made later.

THE POPULATION OF LONDON

London, Dec. 23.—Some effects of the Great War upon the population and housing in London are indicated in that part of the County series of the census returns devoted to London, just published recently. In the County-borough the present population is estimated at 3,021,334, of whom 1,418,597 and 1,413,944 females. This is a decrease of 54,743 of the male population and 54,591 of the female population, of 17,400 in the female population.

The total number of widowers and divorced persons in the County of London is given at 74,390, fifteen of whom are recorded as being between the ages of 15 and 20 and 1,100 as having remained practically stationary in the past decade. Among women, however, the figures developed a total of 282,000 widows. Over 11,000 widows are in the age group 20-29, and might therefore be described as married with the war.

The proportion of females in the County to 1,000 males has risen from 1,137 in 1911 to 1,145 in 1921, the mean number of females now being 541,345—an increase of 72,345 over the figures for 1911. The ratio of unmarried females over 15 to 1,000 unmarried males has increased from 1,138 to 1,227 in the age group 30-39, and from 1,000 to 1,045 in the age group 30-35. While the number of single females has increased by 8.5 percent in ten years, the number of the married or occupied dwellings has been only 4 percent. Of the 1,120,837 private families in the County, only 38 per cent. (426,536) are in the single occupancy or strapturally separate dwellings; 23 percent. (260,764) are living two in a dwelling, while the balance of 30 percent. containing three or more families apiece.

The population of Greater London, an aggregation of districts beyond the County, is given as now 7,490,261, —the highest on record.

Woman's Sphere

NO ROOM FOR HATE

We have room for the man with an honest glean,
With a heart on fire and his eyes undim'd,
We have room for the man with a purpose firm,
Who comes to our shores to start life anew;
But we won't an inch of space for him,
Who proves to plot against life and limb.

We have room for the man who will learn our ways,
Who will stand by our Flag in its troubled days;
We have room for the man who will till the soil,
Who will give his hands to a fair day's toil,
But we have no room for hate,
For the breeder of hatred and black despair.

We have room for the man who will neighbor here,
Who will keep his hands and his conscience clear,
We have room for the man who'll respect our laws,
And pledge himself to our country's cause,
But we haven't an inch of land to give,
To the man who comes and trouble brings.

CHIVALRY A TRAIT FOR WOMEN

Why should not chivalry be a feminine as well as a masculine trait? asks Mary Johnson in one of her happiness talks.

"For what is chivalry but the generous consideration and courtesy of the stronger toward the weaker?

"If men are courteous to women gorgeous toward them in their weakness, why should not women be especially generous toward men in their?

"If it be right for men to protect and shield women because they possess greater strength and courage than women, have not women a similar obligation toward men because of their superior moral strength?

"This superiority in the realm of morals always has been conceded to women.

"Ask a young girl who is carrying on a dating flirtation if she is not rather too censorious, and more than likely she will reply:

"Don't worry, I know what I am doing—I can take care of myself."

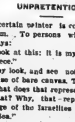
"Perhaps she can take care of herself; girls of today often are amazingly self-sufficient—but what about her taking care of the man who is the object of her choice wins?

"Does she feel no sense of womanly chivalry toward him?

"May it not occur to her that even at the expense of her vanity she must at times make it easier for some men to be gentlemen?

"The spirit of the heart hunter is not unlike that of the savage Indian brave who decorated his belt with the scalps of his enemies. He was a hero in his forest, the warrior. And she is outraged at the very suggestion that she could have dead wood among.

"Those who condemn her, who see anything in her flirtatious but innocent amusement, in the lavish attentions of men and their costly gifts anything but a proper tribute of wealth to youth and beauty, are unjust and cruel censurers in her relations with men the chivalrous woman expresses something of the mother-instinct, the protective instinct which is an element in woman's love for her mate.



"Deeply rooted in the innermost life warfare and happiness. She longs for no protection of love on which to feel her vanity—only that which she can sincerely return.

"She finds almost as great a happiness in inspiring men as in loving them and being loved. She delights without debasing. Where she charms, it is not to destroy.

Since women are having more opportunities to meet with them than formerly, there is all the more need for their cultivating sex chivalry, all the more reason for their refraining from that thrilling game of matching their wits against men's appetites."

SNAPPY HOCKEY BY JUNIORS

Joe Freeman's Colts opened the season for hockey fans last evening when they clashed sticks with the Cobourg juniors in an exhibition fixture which drew about 500 enthusiasts to the arena. It was a grand opening number for Trenton to tally on. It to your credit, goes a long way boys to helping you to a successful career. The fact that so many turned out on the premier occasion, also gives a lot of encouragement to the hockey executives, the coach and the players. We were very pleased to see practically last year's junior lineup on the ice, with the exception of "Peck" Shoucker who has graduated to the Intermediates. PRINCE OF WALES INVESTED WITH HIGH OFFICE IN A.F. of A.M

London, Dec. 28. (By Canadian Press) —In a setting of great splendor and amid the midst of what is believed to have been the largest Masonic assembly ever gathered under one roof, His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales was recently invested in Albert Hall here as Senior Grand Warden of the United Grand Lodge of England. Nine thousand Freemasons, drawn from all parts of the English Jurisdiction, representing lodges all over the world, as well as of representative deputations from the sister Grand Lodges of England and Scotland and of some of the Dominions beyond the seas, were present at the investiture. Over 15,000 applications for the ticketes of admission had to be disappointed, and more than 1,000 of those favored had to stand throughout the ceremony, which was conducted by the Duke of Connaught as Grand Master.

There was a stately procession of the High Officers, whose approach was heralded by a silvery fanfare of trumpets from quarters of the Grenadier Guards' Band, followed by a distant roll of drums. The High Officers preceded the Deputy Grand Master Right Hon. Sir Thomas Halsey, towards the Grand Throne. It was a scene of splendor. Purple and gold predominated on the dias and in the front belt of seats in the arena. Behind was a further belt in which crimson was the prevailing tone, and in the vast background came the pale blue and white regalia of the rank and file of the Masonic craft.

When the Grand Lodge had been opened the trumpets sounded again, and a second procession was formed, this time by officers of the Grand Master, with Lord Ampthill, pro-Grand Master, and Viscount Birkenhead, Junior Grand Warden, in the van. The Duke of Connaught was greeted with cheer after cheer.

While the enthusiasm was at its height a slim young man in morning dress, with a simple blue collar of the Masonic order, stepped unobtrusively in, and sat in the front row of the body of the hall—the Prince of Wales, looking unusually grave, but in no way nervous. He was accompanied by the Duke of York.

After reading a message sent to the King expressing the assembly's loyal devotion to the Throne, and his Majesty's acknowledgment of "another proof of the close association between Freemasonry and my House," the Grand Master began the investiture of the Prince. The Duke recalled that this was the second time in the course of about fifty years that the Heir to the Throne had taken upon himself high office in the Grand Lodge of England. The Grand Master placed around the Prince's neck a collar of royal blue with the edging of Gold—the badge of his office as Senior Grand Warden.

There was tremendous cheering, and then followed the Prince reply, which was a brief expression of his appreciation for the honor conferred upon him and for the warm welcome he had received. When the new Senior Grand Warden was conducted to his appointed place the assembly expressed in its first and cheered again and again. This was followed by the unveiling, by Lord Ampthill, of a portrait of the Grand Master, painted by Sir Arthur Cope.

The Prince of Wales entered the Masonic order three years ago, when he was initiated in the Navy Lodge, No. 2,612, which he joined in May 1919. He was then an officer in the Brigade of Guards, being followed by afterwards his brother the Duke of York also became a Mason, he being initiated in the Lodge, No. 2,614. Both brothers became in turn Warden and Master of their respective mother lodges.

UNPRETENTIOUS

A certain winter is confined in an asylum. To persons who visit him, he says:

"Lend a this: It is my latest master-piece."

They look, and see nothing but an expanse of bare canvas. They ask:

"What does that represent?"

"That? Why, that represents the passage of the Israelites through the Red Sea."

"Beg pardon, but where is the sea?"

"It has been driven back."

"And where are the Israelites?"

"They have come over."

"And the Egyptians?"

"Would be here directly. That's the sort of painting I like—simple and unpretentious."—The Art Record.

That Body of Yours

By James W. Barton, M.D.

OVERWEIGHT

A stout lady came into my office some years ago and wanted to know, she said, me regarding her excessive weight. Before I had a chance to outline the simple fundamental methods necessary to reduction, she said:

"Now Doctor, I don't want to take any exercise because I just hate it."

I said again, "No?"

"And I don't want you to eat anything with my rest, because I don't get up until afternoon any day."

I said still again, "No?. Well then, there are three absolute essentials to reduction, and you have cut them all away before I get to know it. I can do nothing for you."

Now that woman weighed 227 lbs., and she went away grieved.

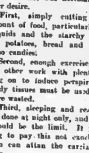
And yet after all I think she thought a little work, and a little self-denial was all that was necessary to attain her desire.

First, simply cutting down the amount of food, particularly "fat" like liquids and foods containing fat, such as potatoes, bread and pastry, and also sugar.

Second, enough exercise, housework or other work with plenty of cloth-ing to induce perspiration. The body tissues must be used and therefore wasted.

Third, sleeping and resting should be done at night only, and eight hours should be the limit. If you're willing to pay this not exorbitant price you can attain the carriage you desire.

HISTORY IS THE STORY OF HEROES



"Pa, where was Babe Ruth born?"

There seemed to be no objections surprise.

"Not ten. Then it's over two hours.

BELLEVILLE CLUB CHRISTMAS TREE

One of the most enjoyable functions that the Belleville Club has had for many years was the Christmas Tree function held last evening. The rooms were most tastefully decorated with evergreen streamers, crimson red bells and other appropriate and seasonable articles, both in Holly and mistletoe. The Christmas Tree which was electrically illuminated in colored lights stood, most, in the centre, bedecked with gifts. The large crate fire was merrily burning and the whole scene was extremely suggestive of the Yuletide spirit.

The guests to the number of about 100 began to arrive early in the evening and cards were in order for a couple of hours, during which time many pretty prizes were awarded on the victoria. About ten-thirty Mr. A. Gillen heralded the arrival of Santa Claus, who was by stress unusually heavy a drum. Sandy arrived and proceeded to distribute the numerous gifts. Many valuable gifts were received and some of the married ladies appeared to have been selected for the night. Santa later was the recipient of a very cute little monkey that persistently climbed up his coat and back and the generous guest produced an accordeon and a hat was soon forthcoming, then Mr. Claus was left standing with an Indian street musician. The hat receipts were all that could be desired, there being sufficient funds collected to pay the first installment on a ton of coal.

The gifts were the source of much merriment to all, and it would be difficult to recount the hundreds of little amusing incidents that took place.

Dainty refreshments were served after the distribution of the Christmas tree gifts, at the conclusion of which Christmas crackers were frequently passed around. Soon the popping of the crackers filled the air, and then, as if by magic, all the company appeared in the most fantastic of head gear. Dancing followed, the music being supplied by willing pianists and by the victrola. The party did not break up till the wee small hours of the morning.

The whole affair was unique and provided an evening that will go down in the history of the club as being one of its most successful affairs.

"A NEW YEAR'S PARTY

"Oh, won't it be fun!" cried Ted dancing around the room at one foot. "Won't it, just!" cried Frances, echoed by Bella and Frank and Jean.

"I've never been up until midnight in my life," Jean announced.

"Well, I've never seen a New Year in," declared Ted. "None of us have."

"Of course not, silly. There wasn't anything to see on the farm. Mother says the whistles all blow and the bells ring and guns go off." Frances sighed in happy expectation.

"Aren't you glad mother said we could stay up?" Belle asked. "Of course with all that noise we would probably have awakened, but then this is more fun."

The door opened and their mother came in. "I've filled both thermos bottles with cocoa," she said, "and there are lots of cookies in the pantry, but don't eat before twelve, you know, it isn't proper."

"Don't worry, we won't," they cried. "I wish you would stay up! It is going to be such fun."

But mother only shook her head. "I'm too sleepy," she said.

After their mother had left them the children played games until they were sleepy, then, drawing their chairs up before the fire, they started to wait:

"Gee, I'm hungry!" declared Frank. "Let's eat. It must be nearly time." Ted examined his watch. "Why, it isn't ten yet," he cried in

Boy Adventurers

THE ESCAPE OF DANIEL BOONE

Daniel Boone was one of the bravest of those early settlers of the British colonies in America who penetrated vast wilderness, fought with hostile Indians, and faced death daily. He was brought up amid the hardships of the frontier, when boys had to show a man's courage and do a man's work.

The new country at this time was full of trouble. There was bitter hostility between the English and French. The French being helped by the Indians. Braddock was making his campaign against the French, and they war seemed in the air everywhere.

Daniel Boone was a sturdy lad, strong for his age, and fond of adventure. He saw an opportunity to satisfy this desire by joining the army of Braddock, and he was accordingly offered his service. They were accepted and he was made chief sauger and blacksmith.

British Ambushed.

I can't wait. I'm starving."

"Well, two hours is an awful long time. Let's do eat. No one will know the difference."

So they all helped themselves to the cocoa and cookies and in a very short time their refreshments were all gone. The warm cocoa made them sleepier than ever. Little Jean curled up in her big chair and was soon fast asleep. They decided not to disturb her. Two hours was a long time to wait.

The other children sat in silence gazing into the fire. After what seemed to Frank a generous two hours, he asked, "What time is it now?"

Ted consulted his watch. "Only ten," he groaned.

"Only ten?" Frank echoed. "Then I guess I'll take a little nap. I'm was already asleep. "Call me three hours, he said.

At midnight the shrieks of the whistles, and the clanging of the bells awoke Mr. Fisher. She lay listening until all was silent again, and wonder why the children are so quiet and surprised. Slipping quietly to stairs she discovered the party fast asleep.

Bradock later was ambushed hostile redskins fighting under direction of French officers, and the general route which followed a large number of British rabble were killed. Many of the drivers of were trapped were slain. Daniel Boone by all managed to cut the traces of team, and escaped from the battle covered by a hail of shot and arrows.

When he was thirty-four, Boone together with five companions set out on an exploration trip to Kentucky. Boone was taken prisoner by the savages and they liked him so well that they wouldn't let him go, but finally he got away. If he had been unable to escape at this time Braddock's army was attacked he, of course, never would have made the trip to Kentucky, and the development of the rich and productive lands when he opened up to have been delayed several years, the march of civilization hindered.

HIS REASONS STATED

King and Crerar Still Piling "Put and Take"

Another Ontario Progressive has of the House of Commons has decided to join the ranks of the Liberals and coming session been Colonel Sidney Fisher, M.P. Prescott, in That Hastings Conservative has change of party allegiance, and his reasons for doing so the following two paragraphs taken from his statement:

"During the last session under the leadership of Hon. T. A. Crerar, I have watched carefully the course pursued, and though I did not make any brilliant speeches I served you faithfully by voting according to the best of my ability by watchfulness and careful attention.

"Under the direction of my leader I was true and loyal to him, but when I see the leaders deserting the army that is so successful, and going off to form something and report to you. Therefore I believe it is my duty to you, the Liberal party under the able and distinguished leadership of Rt. Hon. Mackenzie King. In the interest of the people of our Dominion and the people of Prescott I have decided to support the progressive policy of the Liberal party.

"Not only does Mr. Beattie speak of the resignation of Mr. Crerar from the leadership of the Progressives party as an evidence of "somethings wrong" with Mr. Burnaby from the Presidency of the U.F.O. and the resignation of the Premier Drury and the rest of them, are indications that the latter are built on sand."

Rube Benton Charged With Knowing that 1919 Series Was "Framed"

Chicago, December 30.—Pitcher "Rube" Benton was formally questioned by the Cincinnati Nationals from St. Paul, will be barred from baseball if investigation served Friday by Judge Landis in the crooked world's series of 1919, Commissioner Landis announced last night.

Commissioner Landis is investigating the reports that Benton was a large sum of money betting on a fix that Cincinnati would win the series.

Benton, who called on the commissioner on Thursday to inquire into his status, was told that there was nothing in the Commissioner's records to justify him from playing organized baseball.

The commissioner however had begun investigating reports that Benton had knowledge of the "fixing" of the 1919 world's series and when informed last night that Presidents Heydler of the National League had taken steps to bar Benton as an undesirable the Commissioner said he would continue his inquiry, and probably would have a report before the season opens.

President Johnson, of the American League, previously had declared baseball could not be permitted to play in his league. He said that two players had made affidavits that Benton had told them he had won a large sum on the 1919 series having received advance information that the series had been fixed.

This information Benton was a figure in the 1919 baseball scandal from Bill Burns and Jean Dubuc. Since then Benton had said that he had lost more than he had won on the...

...Benton was dropped by the New York Nationals in 1921, ostensibly for failure to observe training rules. After he joined the St. Paul Club, Benton pitched winning ball, but surprised baseball fans Friday by asking him (Benton) to throw ball games.

Having denied the charge. After President Heydler conducted an investigation and he was dropped, Benton was a obedient to baseball and given his unconditional release.

TURNED DOWN BID

OFFER FOR GAME

Kingston, Dec. 31.—It is generally known that the management of Queen's senior rugby team has turned down the Dominion Rugby Championship, refused the sum of $10,000 to play a game with one of the big rugby teams in the United States. The Americans were willing to sum if the Queen's authorities decided that way.

After considering this attractive offer, Queen's authorities decided that they would not be the greatest business in the rugby season, which lasted only two months, and decided to stick to asking the students to give up another hour, especially in view of the fact that the examinations were on hand.

TORONTO BALL PLAYER PASSED AWAY MONDAY

New York, Jan. 1.—William H. "Wee Willie" Keeler, one of baseball's famous old-time baseball players, died today of heart disease at his home in Brooklyn. He was one of the greatest batsmen of all time. He first became noted as a great hitter while playing in the outfield of the Baltimore baseball club, one of the nineties. Several of the records he set while with that organization, three a year and once with the old Baltimore League, remain unbroken. Other of his 19 years in the majors were spent with the New York and Brooklyn Nationals and the New York Americans.

He was not a batsman of the slugging type, and is best remembered for his "Pop" Anson, but was a pioneer in the art of place-hitting, the philosophy of which he summed up in the words: "Keep now famous utterance, "hit 'em where they ain't."

While with Baltimore, Keeler twice led the National League in batting, in each case hitting for an average above .380. He finished with .432 in baseball annals and in 1896 with .379. His greatest record was that of his career, consisting of 109 one-base blows and hitting safely in 44 consecutive games, both of which still stand as records in baseball annals. His total hits that year, 243, also stood past season, when Rogers Hornsby, great second baseman of the St. Louis Nationals, established a new standard with 250. The nearest approach to his consecutive hitting streak was that of Joe Jackson, the George Sisler, of the St. Louis Browns, who reached 41 before going hitless.

KITCHENER SENIORS DEFEAT PADDLERS

Kitchener, Ont., Jan. 2.—The game played the Paddlers' Canoe Club hung on grimly against the Kitchener seniors tonight, but then the locals shook them off and at the end of the game the green shirts were winners, 5 to 1, and won easily by that margin. The ice was very soft and in this going the visitors were able, for a time, to give the locals a battle, but they could not stand the pace. Kitchener showed very effectively in the first period, while the forward's back checking helped not a little in their work. In fact, take their body work and there would be nothing else left, for they displayed no individual ability. Parkdale got 7 of the 11 penalties.

THE LONGED-FOR APPLE

Zony Checked, Thick Skinned and Well Flavored.

Fruit Eaters Will Welcome It — It May Be Growing To-day In Some Ontario Farmer Row—Includes Interesting Factory.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

Somewhere on a farm in the apple growing districts of Ontario there are now two red seedling apples, seedling apples that may have characters that would make them valuable commercial varieties. If such could be introduced to the public. True, there are thousands of worthless seedlings, but some fence row or orchard acre is now growing a tree or trees that produce a superior fruit.

The Packing Apples at a Premium.

Ontario needs an apple suited to box packing, and it may be from an unknown seedling that such would be supplied. If those having really good seedling apples would write down to Right so that their qualities might be judged by those competent to do so, an apple worth while might be unearthed and introduced to the public. Western apples shipped in boxes have invaded the Ontario markets because of their better packing and pleasing quality. The bright red color of the Jonathan and such like apples preserves the good appearance of the individual.

Thick Skins Most Desirable.

Thin skinned Ontario varieties will not stand the shipping and long exposure in the retail stores to the public eye. Hence, it is the eastern, thick skinned apples. Western apples may be pasty and mealy when over ripe but still look well, as the exterior will stand abuse. Ontario needs a good box pack apple, something rosy red, of good quality, and a good thick protective coat.

Where, Oh Where, Is It To-day?

Perhaps somewhere in the new red south an apple may now be found. The Baldwin, "that have you," the Stevenson, Sec., Dept. of Agriculture, Toronto.

RUNNING AN ECO-FACTORY

Valuable Hints as to How to Make Best Use of the Hen.

Every flock of hens is an egg factory. Like any other factory the aim can be given the best materials in the world to work on and still fail to produce enough to pay for running the plant. Good feed in sufficient quantity is necessary for a large production, but the ability to manufacture eggs from that feed comes first.

It pays to cull out the poor layers any time, to save the feed and labor they eat, but to make a profit on them it is best to cull in late summer or early fall, before the rush of spring chickens lowers the market price of old hens.

Shut up all the hens and pullets you intend to keep over winter, provide just how many can be readily kept during the coming year without crowding, for this is necessary for a hurt egg production and increase the danger of disease. Do not overstep the flock is ready to be culled.

Points Officers received word to visit an apartment on Front street, north end, where it was said an investigation that the family living on one side of the hall, were not extending New Year's greetings to their next door neighbors across the hallway, in the adjacent apartment.

1. Poor layers and all old hens.
2. Cripples, and hens with broken-down feet, legs or crooked toes.
3. The sick, quiet, inactive hens that spend much time on the roost.
4. All "crow heads" with long, thin beaks and faces.
5. The large, coarse-headed hens with sunken eyes.
6. All very short, stubby hens with thick, coarse pelvic bones, poor layers, no breed.
7. All late-hatched immature pullets and those that are early hatched but show poor development.
8. All hens that molt before August 1.
9. The persistent sitter.
10. All hens with solid, fat abdomens.
11. All hens having bad habits (Quarrelsome, feather eaters, egg eaters).
12. All cockerels not needed for breeding purposes.

Keep

1. Strong, healthy, vigorous hens with short, neat heads and strong beaks.
2. The hens with long, deep, rectangular bodies and wide pelvic bone openings.
3. The hens with large, bright eye, active appearance and short, clean shanks.
4. The hens with dusty, worn feathers, showing they were well workers, but having a bright, healthy look.
5. The hens with full, round crops.
6. The noisy, happy, friendly hens.
7. The early risers and those late to roost.
8. The vigorous hens with the full abdomens for the size of body.
9. The hens with the soft, pliable abdominal skin.
10. The hens with the thin pelvic bones (open to wide apart.
11. The early-hatched, well-grown pullets.
12. Large, strong, active, quick mature cockerels of desirable breed type and high-producing mothers.

There are five points to consider in profitable poultry production—breeding, caring, feeding, housing, and care. These are the fundamentals. Good Trench baseball nine turn out for their first practice, they will be on the flagpole.

Onions once frozen should remain frozen until time to use them.

If you have a leaky, badly plastered in your hothouse or greenhouse, you should have it repaired at once and make tall, sprinkling, weak plants.

Don't attempt to raise chickens in a dark or reading circle in your community. Lots of enjoyment, as well as profit, may be obtained from an organization of this sort.

HE LOVES THE BIRDS

JACK MINER IS A UNIQUE CHARACTER PERSONALITY.

Story of the Miss Whose Life Work For His Winged Friends Become Famous In Every Part of the Continent—Lives in Low Moor Kingsville.

It's a difficult task to describe in words so unusual a personality as Jack Miner. Many people have already made the wild geese famous, but few may hear him speak. Then, by turns, he makes you laugh and cry, and thrills or impresses you with his tremendous sincerity. He grips your attention almost immediately, and then is so keenly interested in his message to feel concerned, either about the audience or about himself.

The story of Jack Miner has been told and re-told till it is familiar to most Canadians. But it will bear telling.

Jack Miner of to-day is a big, outstanding man of 54—an out-of-doors man essentially, with life out-of-doors habits of hard working and close thinking. As a boy he came to Essex County, Ont. The "mast" of the Miner family, got little education and went to work early. "A child born because of the necessities of those days; so Jack said of himself. His father hunted for the family, and sent them in the "cooler" to the Detroit River Station. They induced their father to attend the child services, and long ago the little folks taught him. He is the same little boy now, as a hunter for the market—and then some—but marvelous activities that have made Jack Miner famous have changed his sentiment.

The wild geese and wild ducks, well known him as an enemy. Now, says he, thought of them as a hunter, I know a friend if they had sense." Jack Miner has come to regard them as friends with the wild things.

Who knows? "But have you been to be, and men are wild. Sidney Smith Hall, Bloor St. West, Toronto, bit of Miner philosophy.

Jack's campaign of publicities the instinct of the wild geese to fly north two ventured upon his notice. He studied his birds and found that the reason there came a large congregation of birds about Kingsville each year. Now in March and April, says Jack, the wild geese fly north in flocks of hundreds and thousands. The principal flight is over the Great Lakes, the lakes of North Carolina. Starting from the Gulf of Mexico, Kingsville is the spot in America is dedicated to the wild geese. And the geese are not slow.

It took four years to locate the birds' summer home. Flight instinct was the first visitors. Last year 10,000 birds arrived in Kingsville, and 1,400 bushels of corn for their use. Of this total 1,000 were given by South Carolina and Hudson Bay.

The Miner Bird Sanctuary.

Miner has proved that. Among the thousands of birds that visit Kingsville in spring at the famous goose year Kingsville are many wounded. Danger of disease. Jack Miner has decorated them in preserve's year with a pond, with suitable food, and so to Jack Miner from points as far as Hudson Bay. As for the ducks, they have returned to the Miner Bird sanctuary and the surrounding territories, the farthest south the span of territory east and west reaching from Long Point, Lake Erie, to Ringsfield, Sask. Four million speckled ducks of territory—yet, large flight that will come back in the same spot.

Jack knew.

It's an interesting sight to watch Jack Miner entertain a party. Instead of six hundred or more wild geese and thousands of ducks, he has them in their own language—he has studied their habits, and has their vocabulary—and bosses them about with authority. Here, a wild goose, and there a duck, comes Setback for a Year.

The result is very serious the Hydro-radial project for at least a ...time. The "big interests" have won ...a temporary advantage of delay. In Toronto the non-property-owning vote elected a Hydro-radial Council. The property-owning vote has smashed the Hydro-radial agreement, and the downtown business wards elected the anti-radial candidates. However, the "big interests," having been successful in defeating the entrance agreement, will be unable to put into effect any unseen policies they may have in the face of a City Council the majority of whose members are pledged to Hydro-radials.

The first returns gave a little hope that the Hydro-radial agreement would be approved, but after a dozen polls had been heard from this hope was dissipated. Majority rendering the agreement mounted slowly but steadily until more than 8,000 was reached. The issue, so far as the agreement was concerned, did not hang in the balance for any length of time. ... (Concluded).

Mayor's Hopes Rise and Fall

Mayor Maguire's majority ror and-fall for two hours remained One summary, with more than half the polls heard from, gave him few or than 600 majority, but this was soon augmented. It must be conceded the R. J. There was always considerable doubt concerning the reception of the agreement, but few of those who work ed in its interest ever dreamed that it would be beaten by such a majo rity.

The Herald was in clined to be critical of the Hydro radial idea, though not vigorous ly condemnatory. Both papers, how ever, gave extensive accounts o Hydro meetings.

Sir Henry's Announcement

The announcement by Hon. Henr Thornton, President of the Nationa Railways that he intended havin an inquiry into the possibility of ele trification of the lines in this distric had a big effect on the vote in Ham ilton.

Sir Henry Thornton's promise, in definite as it was, that the G. T. R will be electrified no doubt plays a no small part in the by-law's defeat Indeed, it might well be said to have been the direct cause, for the ma jority in the Hydro contest was largel "duplication or no duplication."

"I am sorry to see Gibbons defeated but I'm behind Bennett all the time now."

Ald. W. Patterson thanked the electors for supporting him.

Ald. W. McCreary congratulated the defeated not be disheartened. He will give you as good service as possible. Thanking you and wishing you a prosperous New Year."

Ald. Foster:

"You have placed me in Council this year. The only thing I regret is know it to give me a chance to do something this year to justify the votes given me today. I wish you all a happy New Year."

Ald. Ketcheson:

"I wish to extend to you my sincere thanks for the excellent support given me today. I will do everything in my power for the welfare of Bellevill."

Alderman-elect M. J. Lynch: (Loud cheering.)

"I never stood on a platform before (some one: "not too old yet), I am going to finish like it did. Thanking you for putting me here tonight, I am proud to stand on this platform tonight. Thanking you again."

Alderman-elect Treverton:

"I wish to thank all those who supported me today, especially Foster Ward. I will try to do everything I can for the city's interests. I was chairman of Public Works last year, and did not survive as well as the present chairman. The public works department never received better service than last year. I used to give four or five hours daily when I was chairman of Public Works. I will give all the compliments of the season."

This concluded the speaking and the crowd dispersed about 8.30 p.m. It is significant that every member of last year's Council was returned at the polls. The defeated citizens of those elected will doubtless be watchful with much interest this year and it remains for those returned to loyally support their pre-election slogans of "the best of service for Belleville."

BRIG.-GEN. McCUAIG RESIGNS COMMISSION

Distinguished Officer Retires From Montreal Highlanders

Montreal, Dec. 30.—When the Royal Highlanders of Canada hold their customary New Year's parade on Monday next at their armory on Bleury street, the ceremony will assume the form of a farewell to the present commanding officer, Brig.-General D. Eric McCuaig, C.M.G., D.S.O., who will take that occasion to announce his impending retirement from the command. Although Brig.-General McCuaig's retirement will not be effective for some time yet, until it has been accepted by Military Headquarters at Ottawa the fact of his resigning that he was forwarding his resignation to Ottawa, with a request to be transferred to the Reserve of Officers.

It is understood that Brig.-General McCuaig will be succeeded as officer commanding the Royal Highlanders by Lt.-Col. Royal L. H. Ewing, D.S. O., M.C., another officer of the Highlanders, who has a distinguished career as Major-General Sir Frederick Stamp and others of high distinction.

He was wounded twice, "at the first battle of Ypres, in 1915, and again at Ypres in 1916, but has remained with only serious enough to put him out of action for comparatively brief periods. He was first awarded the D.S.O., and then created C.M.G. for distinguished services throughout the war.

London, Dec. 29.—Society girls and debutantes are warned that they must cut out at the age of twenty formed the theme of a lecture given by Dr. James F. K. Savill, of the London Skin Hospital and of the Skin Department of the South London Hospital for Women, to the Institute of Hygiene here recently. Her subject was, "The Dangers of Society to Health."

Speaking to the society life of girls, Dr. Savill said that a girl who left school for business life might expect to be required to get up in the girl who went to a University was liable to be unready, so to study all day and to indulge in social functions till late at night, while the girl who could command the respect of her parents' wealth, left school for a life of continual excitement, which resulted in mental and physical exhaustion.

"Nowadays," Dr. Savill said, "the girl dispenses with a chaperon, and part of the attraction the old-fashioned of chastity her mind too often becomes poisoned, and when she marries the standard of her relationship to her husband, home and children is not a high one."

Continuing, Dr. Savill said: "I have seen some of these girls after a few years of society life aged by ter years, with lines in the face, quite worn out and nerve-tired as if they were forty. The hectic life of continual excitement, the absence of leisure, all time for meditation, he perpetual change, the cigarette smoking, irregular and unwholesome meals, are no wonder these girls become the prey of disease. And though the physical consequences are disastrous, even of greater importance is the evil effect of this life upon the character.

"Many people find that there is a greater nerve strain involved in keeping up a conversation of small talk than in discussing a serious topic, or in the more connected conversations of intimate friends. They cannot help their brains and mental equipment adjusted to this level of scrappy conversation early in life, and it spoils their subsequent development and their capacity to reach a better level of intellectual growth.

"Society life is responsible for deficient sleep and the consequent debilitation of the entire nervous system. It encourages the pernicious habit of the too-frequent cigarette, it encourages the late supper, the late night and whiskies-and-sodas, which ruin their digestion, impair their livers, and destroy the balance of the nervous system, and it encourages them to take rich foods, which upset the rythm of the body."

BRITAIN NOT TO SURRENDER TERRITORY

Despatch States That Canada Would Be Interested If Island-Possessions in West Indies were Surrendered

Might Deal For North-Eastern New England Ceded In the Past

(Canadian Press Despatch)

New York, Jan 2.—According to a special despatch from Washington to the New York Tribune the British Government has flatly rejected the proposal from the United States prohibition leaders that she should surrender her island possessions in the West Indies to the United States in payment for her war debt.

A high British official is said to have received the plan with the remark, "We will never sell our citizens and subjects into slavery by prohibition. We are not in the real estate business. If America is really anxious to discuss territorial adjustments I am sure that the Dominion of Canada would be interested in obtaining part of the State of Maine with the object of using and developing certain parts there. So that if the United States seriously wants to discuss obtaining some of our territory in the Carribean in exchange for the northeastern corner of New England, I have no doubt that a satisfactory deal could be arranged.

EVENTS OF THE WORLD IN PICTURES

RUINS OF THE FIRESWEPT QUEBEC BASILICA.

The top picture shows the tower of the historic edifice, containing the magnificent chimes, after it had crashed into the street. A great throng of people witnessed the burning of the cathedral and the dramatic episodes connected with its destruction. The bottom picture shows the bare walls, all that remains of what was one of the finest churches in Canada, dating back nearly three centuries. Already over $100,000 has been subscribed towards the work of rebuilding. The property loss alone was estimated at a million dollars.

QUEBEC IN WINTER TIME

(1)—The Chateau Frontenac stands sentinel over Old Quebec. (2)—The Toboggan slide on Dufferin Terrace, Quebec. (3)—Rebobsleighing is a popular sport at Quebec. (4)—Quebec falling maid pauses to take in the beauty of her environment.

OVER all the world there's not another place like Quebec. Its beauty and its old-world charm have made it famous everywhere. Three hundred years have passed since first it began to be, and each one of those years has left its mark upon the town until it has become a storehouse of Canadian history. It is a place for all the world to visit, and yet it is, perhaps, less well known to Canadians than it is to Americans who every year come north to see it when summer sun bathes its bold outlines, or when winter snows crown the lofty citadel and the town's many spires. It is in winter that Quebec is at its best. At no other time is it so characteristically Canadian or so typically French and it is in winter that Quebec most enthusiastically throws open its doors to invite the world to see how joyously splendid winter in Canada can be.

Sitting high upon the famous rock and overlooking the wide sweep of the St. Lawrence, and the snow covered Laurentian hills the Chateau Frontenac, always a fitting crown to the splendid scene is now made still more so by the addition of a town that will double the accommodation of this famous hotel. On a winter night there is no more perfect scene. The thousand lights of the upper and lower town glint on the snow and above them all hang the graceful outlines of the Chateau, every lighted window telling of the comfort and gayety that waits within.

The interior of the Chateau is in perfect keeping with the picturesque of the ancient city, while its appointments and cuisine are the last word in comfort and modern excellence. It was of these places where home comforts are combined with the conveniences of the up-to-date high class hotel.

Arrangements have been completed for Quebec's program of winter sports and as the season has set in with plenty of snow the program may be said to be already under way. A triple chute toboggan slide has been erected to extend from the top of citadel rock down to the terrace and along to the main entrance of the Chateau, and night after night it is crowded with happy parties of tobogganers. The skating rink on the terrace with its warm dressing rooms is a constant source of delight to guests and not a few of the men have already begun the winter's program of curling on the covered rink. The snowshoe and skiing clubs of the city have their programs of events well under way, and there are endless opportunities for the guests to participate in the outdoor sports. Snowshoe tramps, sleigh events, and sleigh driving are daily occurrences and these are organized under the direction of a sports-master whose business it is to see that visitors to the city have every opportunity of taking an active part in the sports if they so desire. Curling will be a special feature this winter, partly as a result of its visit to the city of the visiting Scotch Curlers early in January and on the night of January 31st a parade of snowshoers and a fireworks display will form a standing event.

DAIRYMEN'S CONVENTION STILL IN SESSION

DAIRYMEN IN SESSION YESTERDAY AFTERNOON

GEO. W. MUIR SPOKE

A Cheese Grading and Scoring Contest Conducted

Resolution to Bar Oleo is Adopted

At Wednesday's afternoon session of the Dairymen's Convention the City Hall was well filled and this is partly due to the fact that the weather was anything but pleasant. The session proved to be interesting and profitable and was presided over by Mr. M. N. Empey, president.

MR. MUIR.

Mr. George W. Muir, of the Ontario Experimental Farm, was the chief speaker and in his opening remarks stated that he would review the work of the farm relative to dairy cattle. A large herd is kept at the farm consisting of about 50 head of Holstein, Ayrshire, Jersey and French Canadian breeds. One of the experiments conducted was the feeding of dry beet pulp, which food is much sought for by dairymen in some of the states of the neighboring republic. The results obtained in the experiment were gratifying. Dry beet pulp was also fed to some of the animals. The pulp ration showed that it was characteristic of milk flow from the animals which were so fed. It also proved a cheaper ration than the dry grain feed. The beet pulp ration also proved to be satisfactory in the quality of milk produced. Roots are fairly costly in production and are rather a costly feed, compared to ensilage and other feeds. A knowledge is necessary and beet pulp can be used to advantage. Dry beet pulp was found to be a feed that was not of a bulky nature to feed, and when used would be soaked thoroughly and a little molasses added. In recent years sunflowers have been quite extensively grown for ensilage feed, and as compared with corn ensilage are very favorable. Sunflower ensilage has even a little higher value in some respects for feed over corn ensilage. In this it does a little less milk but it increases the fat in the milk to a slight extent. It is however, not as palatable a feed as corn ensilage. He would however, recommend corn ensilage as a food, but if corn cannot be successfully raised then sunflower can be used as a good substitute. Mr. Muir also spoke of feed for calves for veal production, and the experiment at the farm showed that there was no profits to the farm in the test made, skim milk and whole milk was found to be fairly profitable feed with a little calf meal added. The farm was handicapped by the fact that it had no good pasture field for the cattle.

ELIMINATE OLEO.

Mr. Alex McGeer, of Brinston's Corners, asked permission of the President to introduce a resolution which was as follows. "That this convention request the Government to prohibit the importation and sale of oleomargarine in Canada.

Mr. S. Baker, of Corbyville, seconded the resolution and spoke briefly relative to it, stating that oleomargarine was being sold without twine in tubs.

Mr. Thompson, of Almonte, stated that Hon. Geo. E. Foster had promised a deputation that all importation and sale of oleomargarine would be stopped when the war ended. We should make an effort to have the sale of it stamped out.

The motion was unanimously adopted.

Mr. Geores H. Barr and Mr. Joseph Burgess, of the dairy and cold storage branch, Ottawa, explained a cheese grading and scoring contest.

Mr. Barr stated that all should be interested in cheese grading as it will become law. All concerned should get together and make this thing a success. We must do all we can to get Canada to hold our cheese and butter markets in the old country. We should be able to get cheese in the right grade and that is the motive at the present time.

Mr. Burgess spoke in a similar strain after which the testing was carried out by several theese being sampled.

There was some discussion as to the proposed legislation to have cheese graded at central places rather than at the factory as at present is carried on.

Mr. Mitchell, of Corbyville, said that we do object to taking cheese out of our factories before it is graded. Why not have the grading done at the factory? It does make a difference where the grading takes place. It would be more satisfactory to have the grading done at the factory.

The discussion was then adjourned until Thursday's session.

"There was a large vote polled was there not," said the Minister.

Aspiring reeves and councillors appealing to the electorate on the Morrison platform were beaten for the most part.

Chief interest in the U. F. O. versus Farmer contest centred in Oliver Township, where T. Hughes was returned by a heavy majority over his U. F. O. opponent. All councillors representing U. F. O. sentiment, with one exception, were denied places.

DAIRYMEN'S THURSDAY MORNING SESSION

Superintendent of Kingston Dairy School Makes His Report—New Building to Open There Shortly

Convention Closes To-night

At this morning's session of the E. O. D. A., Mr. W. J. Newman of Lowville, presided in the absence of President Empey.

Mr. J. A. Zufelt, Superintendent of the Dairy School at Kingston presented his report as follows:—

I beg to submit the following report on the instruction work among the creameries of Eastern Ontario for the season 1922.

No. of Creameries in operation for entire season	55
No. of new creameries started in early fall	2
No. of new creameries under construction	2

Butter values remained fairly constant for the entire season with a range of 3c. to 4cts which would not the creameries an average for the whole season of about 36 to 37c.

All but two of the creameries are equipped with modern pasteurizing machinery but owing to limited water supply a few of these were forced to discontinue pasterization of the cream for part of the season.

The expansion of the dairy industry this year was so great and unlooked for that many creameries which heretofore had ample capacity to take care of any normal increase were entirely swamped and were forced to double their staffs and work night and day. This was especially true of the section from Belleville east. The Creameries West of this reported very little increase in output over the previous season.

In regard to quality Eastern Ontario has nothing to feel ashamed of. In fact the butter of Eastern Ontario could be all eathered together and placed along side of that produced in any other section of the dominion I feel sure that the comparison would not be altogether unfavorable to Eastern Ontario. One of the reasons why the butter of Eastern Ontario has not been more widely and favorably known to the trade largely to the fact that each creamery acts as its own distributing agent and very little of the butter finds its way into the hands of the large distributors at Toronto or Montreal, otherwise, I feel sure this section of Ontario would be more favorable commented on.

As you all know six creameries were chosen from the various provinces to send one sample from each province for each of the six months, to different creamery associations for the different months. Ontario was represented by two creameries from Eastern Ontario and four from Western Ontario. The Eastern Ontario creameries were asked to supply the months for July and August and were not favored in any way by the time of year as July and August are the two best months months for high grade butter. The highest average score for Perfrees was made by British Columbia with four creameries via., flavor 41.37 and total score 91. 90, so that the first prize went to creameries with an average of 41.50

THE CAUSE OF THE RECENT SNOW STORM

Originated in the South and Moved Northward

Cold Spell in the West Likely to Travel This Way

The weatherman explained last night regarding the cause and extent of yesterday's storm, and the weather outlook. He said the storm had originated in the vicinity of Mississippi in a heavy downpour of rain, but moving northward had turned into snow. It had been general throughout Iowa, Ontario, but had moved eastward and was now moving off into the Atlantic, after which the Maritime Provinces with a blanket of white. While there may be a few scattered falls of snow today and to-morrow they will be of a very light nature, the weather generally being fair and the temperature very moderate, in the neighborhood of about twenty degrees above zero. Lower citizens become too optimistic, it might be well to add, however, that the weather man mentioned a severe cold spell which was being felt in Saskatchewan and which might be expected to arrive here about the end of the week unless something unexpected occurs in the meantime to divert it from this course. Country travel is not seriously interfered with, however, and the railways are running fairly on time.

COLLAPSE OF ALLIED CONFERENCE IS PREDICTED

British Premier Will Make No Change in His Reparation Plan

Paris, Jan. 4.—The Reparations Conference broke up here shortly before 7 o'clock this evening.

Paris, Jan. 4.—Premier Poincare of the reparations conference, perhaps this afternoon, was generally foreseen today, planned to set up half of the high preparing a memorandum for distribution among the delegations, but apparently this plan was only an advance to Premier Poincare's objections to the British plan, advancing at the same time fresh British objections. It is stated this added features immensely, but then everyone present had not yet studied these amazing documents, otherwise they would have recognized the veteran who has officiated in like exchanges, for general enjoyment, for many years.

Miss Campbell's Address.

I am glad to meet the dairymen of Eastern Ontario again and appreciate the opportunity your convention offers to tell you a little of what has been accomplished by the Dominion Dairy Branch in co-operative work and interest in the food value of dairy products. At the time of your last convention, work along this line had just begun, but now we feel that we have to our credit a year of earnest endeavour and some splendid achievement. We realize that this work has a bearing on public health and we have sincerely striven to make it a real contribution toward this cause—to make it count for better health and to bring about a clearer realization of the importance of a greater consumption of dairy products as a means of keeping fit. CONVENTION OF DAIRYMEN HOLDING THREE SESSIONS DAILY

Interesting Meeting Last Night—Dairy Standards Act, Co-operative Marketing and Cheese Grading Among The Subjects Discussed—President Empey Presided

HON. MANNING DOHERTY ADDRESSED MEETING

Miss Helen Campbell of Dominion Department of Agriculture Gave Forceful Message—Large Attendance Despite Bad Weather—Music by Bridge Street Orchestra—Wm. Coo in Lighter Vein

When the Dairymen resumed their activities, some very successful and splendid campaigns had been conducted by City Hall, a representative crowd attended in addition to the official delegates. A sprinkling of women was noticed and many farmers were present despite the stormy weather. They wer well repaid for any inconvenience suffered through the actions of the elements.

Mayor Hanna officially welcomed the Association in its deliberations in this city, and assured the members that Belleville would do everything possible to make the affair a success.

President Empey invited several prominent gentlemen to the platform, and first called upon Miss Helen Campbell, Lecturer in Dairy Dietetics, Dairy and Cold Storage Branch, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, to address the meeting. Miss Campbell proved to be a forceful speaker, with exceptional charms in enunciation and possessing an easy and comfortable platform manner. She spoke on "The Federal Milk Dilination Service."

The Hon. Manning Doherty, Minister of Agriculture for the Province of Ontario, delivered a very comprehensive address dealing fully with his ideas of the grading of cheese, co-operative marketing schemes, ritzel credits, and the Dairy Standards Act. The Provincial government gave a very lucid explanation of these different matters and was accorded very close attention during his remarks. The Minister seems to be sincere in his personal convictions.

Warden Kelly of the County of Hastings was asked to the platform, and our able exponent of dairying, Mr. John Elliott, manager of the Standard Bank here, was noticed busily engaged, assisting in the direction of proceedings generally.

President Empey presided in a very able manner and acknowledged to Mayor Hanna his address of welcome to the Association.

Bridge Street Orchestra supplied the music, but were unfortunately late in that the session was about ended. In the meantime, Wm. Coo, the official reporter and erstwhile entertainer, kept the audience amused by the injection of a few peppy stories, which were certainly not of the most vintage. When the orchestra rendered this added feature immensely, but then everyone present had not yet studied these amazing documents, otherwise they would have recognized the veteran who has officiated in like exchanges, for general enjoyment, for many years.

THE HOLIDAYS AT THE SCHOOL FOR THE DEAF

Resolutions Passed by Pupils During the Festivities

A PLEASANT SEASON

Dr. Coughlin Spoke

An unusual event, and one that was enjoyed very gratifying to the Superintendent, members of the staff, and the O. S. D. took place during the four hour recess of Christmas Day. As is customary, all the parents and friends of pupils, who live in Belleville, attended in order to share in the gifts which are distributed by the pupils. At the close of the repast Mr. H. C. Lee, the Steward, with a few appropriate introductory words, moved the following resolution:

We, the one hundred or more parents and relatives of the pupils attending the Ontario School for the Deaf have assembled at the school this Christmas Day, wish to express to Dr. Coughlin, the Minister of Education, and to whose unlaring efforts much of the credit is due for the splendid accommodation provided for the marked assistance made in the education of the deaf, and the possible efficiency of the staff. We also wish to express to the members of the staff our appreciation for the faithful and painstaking manner of successful work they are doing in the interest of the children. We feel that no effort should be spared to make this important work as efficient as possible by supplying the Superintendent with all needful assistance and the best available equipment for all departments of the school, and whereas the teaching of the deaf is a highly specialized work, requiring not only great natural aptitude, but also years of study, and special training, we think that the standard of education should be kept up to that of specialists in other lines of educational work. And that Dr. Coughlin be requested to send a copy of this resolution to every member of the Ontario Government.

Dr. McMillan, of Sarnia, said it afforded him great pleasure to second the above motion. The most creditable of the Province of Ontario's have been in deed a most beautiful, suitable and comfortable building. The parents of these deaf children are grateful for the efforts of the present Government, and also of two former Governments of the Province of Ontario for the very generous and wise manner in which they have provided for the care and education of the unfortunate child who is born deaf, or later deafness.

Great efforts have been put forth in recent years in the building and equipping of schools and advancing methods of education. The Government of the Province of Ontario have been very generous in appropriating large sums of money in order that the standard of education in the Province may be second to none, and no Government could make any better investment. If the small city in which he lived the Board of Education, assisted by the Province of Ontario had during the past year, spent practically three quarters of a million dollars on a Technical and High School, and that indeed is money well invested. While this goes to advance the education of the "majority" they were glad to see that the Government has neglected the "minority,"—the deaf children.

While we give great credit to the Governments of the Provinces for providing this splendid institution, yet we must look a little deeper. Behind these great works is generally some one who has caught the light, who has seen the need, who has measured up to the ideal, who has put forth untiring efforts; and in this case he felt and he knew that the man behind is and has been their friend, the Superintendent, Dr. Coughlin.

Then, too, the educating of the deaf child must be placed in the hands of "specialists." A teacher in the public schools has a child's five special senses to deal with. In a school like this would the teachers are expected to accomplish the same work with one of the same teaching staff, requiring important one, the sense of hearing. To acquire ability to instruct such pupils requires special training and education. I think the parents of these children should impress, were the Government the needs of the specialists and that teachers in institutions of the kind should be offered an inducement to adopt and maintain that high standard of training and education, so that this school will be known for its efficiency throughout the length and breadth of the Dominion and may be pointed to as the ideal institution for the education of the deaf child.

This indeed is a beautiful edifice Its bricks and, marbles, carved oak and polished oak floors do not only exist. It is the organization, it is the staff that accomplishes results and it forms and hope that the government will back up Dr. Coughlin in his efforts to obtain and maintain a staff of efficient specialists to carry on the great work in these beautiful and well equipped buildings.

The motion was also seconded by Mrs. Sleeper, of Ottawa, Mr. Al. Brown, of Windsor, and Mr. Harriet of Grimsby, representing their respective sections of the Province and by Mr. Geo. Dafoe, of Belleville, who spoke on behalf of the deaf.

Mr. Harrison said that this was his first visit to the school and he was surprised and delighted with all he saw. He had somewhat dreaded coming to Belleville as a rather dreary and uninteresting time but it was the best and most enjoyable Christmas he ever had. He had travelled in many countries in Europe and America and had visited many schools and institutions of various kinds, and none of them surpassed and few, if any, equalled these new O. S. D. buildings in stateliness, beauty and the splendid discipline and commodious and comfort the class rooms, the dormitories and dining hall and commodious and comfort these in the old building. The pupils now in attendance were indeed very fortunate in having such buildings erected for their use, and he hoped all of them would show their appreciation by working diligently and making the best possible use of their opportunities for an education. If any of them knew of any deaf child of school age, who was not attending school, he hoped they would notify Dr. Coughlin. The best way in which they could show their appreciation of these splendid buildings was by helping to ensure that every deaf child in the province should make use of the excellent facilities for education.

Mr. Harrison said he was glad that he was very grateful for the resolution proposed by Mr. Lee and seconded by Mr. Brown, and that he was present. He had done his best to have the accommodations and educational facilities as they equal the best on the continent and while Mr. Lee and the other speakers had given much of the credit to himself for the good work being done here, he could not accept all the credit, as a great, great deal of it is due to the staff. If the child were well healthy and looked happy and well cared for, as they did, I was due to the diligence and devotion of those whose duty it was to look after him. He personally desired to commend the work of the teachers. He was sure that there was no staff of teachers in any other school on the continent that were doing more sincere earnest and efficient work than the staff of the Ontario School for the Deaf and he was glad of this opportunity of paying his hearty tribute to the excellent work they are rendering. He was aiming and the staff was aiming to attain to a standard of efficiency equal to that of any other school for the deaf in the world and he believed this school was very nearly there. If any of the characters of the work being done and the results that were accomplished. To the kindness and devotion of the staff did not spare themselves but were ready to not only do their bounden duty but to do work extra time if he and they themselves, unreservedly, in season and out of season, to this work. This is the spirit manifested by most of the members of the staff; and if there should be any who did not show this spirit of zeal and devotion, work ordered always by the clock and the rule, he wished to say that they should be hours of assigned duty and the tasks prescribed and were unwilling to do their share; if the extra work that must be done in an institution of this kind, thus letting others bear a double burden, they were not considered desirable members of the staff. He wished again to thank those present, for himself and on behalf of his staff, for the words of appreciation so kindly expressed and he would be glad to comply with their request to forward a copy of the resolution to each member of the Ontario Government.—The Canadian.

DOG OWNERS RESPOND TO DOG CATCHER

Kingston, Ont., Jan. 2.—Since the dog catcher was appointed a fortnight ago, one hundred and ten citizens who were not assessed for dogs have visited the office of the city treasurer and paid their tax as well as getting their tags. Eight hundred and seventy-three tags have been issued by the city treasurer. It is stated that the authorities had no idea that there were so many citizens who were evading the dog tax law.

DRYS LIKELY TO RULE IN U. S. CONGRESS

Despite Reports New Senate is Conceded to be Dry

(By Canadian Press).

Washington, Jan. 3.—Notwithstanding the reports and rumors after the November 7th elections that the next in the new Congress would force modifications of the Volstead prohibition law, the latest developments indicate that the drys are likely to take the whip hand, more completely than ever.

The new Congress comes into power March 4. It is conceded the new Senate will be more dry than the present one.

Now the drys are rising up to say that it will never do to re-elect Speaker Gillett and elect Representative Longworth leader. A number of them including some of the farm bloc, are talking of an entire "new deal." They purpose to make Representative Temple of Pennsylvania speaker and Representative Graham of Illinois leader. Both are drys. This movement has not yet been fully tested out but there are many things in the situation which are likely to make it formidable. Those who are engineering it are insistent that the House Republicans have got to organize away from the Old Guard elements as far as possible and that at the same time they must be nothing to stamp themselves as either wet or inclined to liberalize the Volstead Act. Inasmuch as most of the Democrats in the House are dry, it is not difficult to see the seats are clinging to frail supports in any expectation that they can survive or as some to have of getting the prohibition laws made less strict.

MATRIMONY CERTAINLY NOT A FAILURE IN CANADA

Interesting statistics have been gathered by the management of Griffin Theatre to show that while the question "Is Matrimony a Failure"? is felt is such individual to answer after seeing the motion picture this week end, it is very apparent that matrimony is no a failure in Canada, and particularly in the city of Ottawa.

The following figures have just been received from the Government Bureau of Statistics, where the management wrote to get accurate information.

In Ontario for the twelve months ending December 31st, there were 1,07. marriages or an average of a little over 89 per month. In the same period the city registered the birth of 3,404 darling babies, an average of 283 per month or more than 64 each week. This in itself should prove that matrimony is not a failure in the capital city.

The total number of kiddies born it all of Canada for the year 1922 was 347, 922; quite a healthy baby crop to be sure, averaging 29,040 per month or 6,765 per week. Narrowing this down we get 681 each day, or about 29 every hour during the entire year.

In all of Canada there were 58,37 marriages in 1922 or 1,120 every week Matrimony cannot be a failure or they wouldn't go to the altar that fast. And just to show that the great majority of marriages are a success, the theatre points out that in 1922 there were only 111 divorces in the combined provinces of Ontario and Quebec. The husbands got 60 and the wives 51. And here we come to a perplexing question—Is matrimony just a bit more of a failure in Ontario than it is in Quebec? For we find that out of these 111 divorces (an extremely low number by the way, compared to similar populations in the states) 101 of them are granted in Ontario and only 10 to Quebec.

At any rate all these figures are highly instructive, and give much food for thought. But statistics, failures or successes, Cupid will continue to aim his hearts with his effective darts for all time to come, and "Sweethearts should worry" whether Matrimony is a failure or not. For them it will be a perpetual honeymoon.

MUSIC and DRAMA

THREE STARS APPEAR IN THIS FILM

A combination of proven elements in photoplay making comes to the Regent Theatre tonight to Saturday, matinee daily, when Universal presents "The Lone Chance," filmed from Peter B Kyne's story as an all-star production.

Universal apparently took no chances in the making of this unusual feature. Nothing was left to ordinary hands.

The cast itself is composed of favorites of long standing—Henry B. Walthall, famous character artist, Ralph Graves, Griffith "find," Marjorie Daw one of the screen's most popular beauties, and Grace Marvin, William Dorman, Leonard Clapham, Jack Curtis George A. Williams, Boyd Irwin, Margaret Cullington and Mai Wells, all successful players.

Peter B. Kyne's stories usually are above the average in dramatic meat, and no less an expert than the supervisor of the Universal City scenario department, Raymond Schrock, was assigned to prepare the western epic for screening.

All students attending Toronto and Queen's Universities returned after their holidays on Thursday to resume their studies, some being in their final year, we hope for a successful one.

Our Juniors before Tuesday night's game in Campbellford were somewhat disappointed, owing to the fact that Campbellford since 1916, had not been in O. H. A. hockey. The result however, was that the boys have only to consider Belleville and Picton until after the first meeting. There will we will have it at both the places to witness the opener spent in giving terms for the splendid way in which they disposed of their opponents. Already they are showing signs of improvement over last year's record.

BELLEVILLE WINS AT KINGSTON

Defeat Kingston Frontenacs In Hard, Rough Game By Score of 6-4

Kingston, Jan. 3.—Belleville won the opening game of the local group of the Intermediates O.H.A. series here tonight, when they defeated Frontenacs at the Jock Harty Arena by a score of 6 to 4. The score at the end of the first period was 3 to 1 in favor of Belleville, and in the second 30 minutes Belleville registered three goals while Frontenacs accounted for two counters. Frontenacs were minus the services of Lloyd Brown, the good defence player, who was confined to his bed.

The first period was featured with very fast hockey, which tended to get very rough. Holloway and Weir did the scoring for Belleville, while Bolitinger accounted for the Kingston counter.

During the second period the game got so rough that Broome was chased for five minutes for a cross-check. Belleville's scores were registered by Hagerman and Mallen, while Smith got two for Kingston.

It was the first time in the memory of the oldest inhabitant that the Belleville intermediates won a game on local ice and it sure was a real blow to local enthusiasts, who were looking forward to a successful season. Long Sweep's absence made a whole lot of difference, but even with this player in the line-up, it is doubtful if the locals could have scored enough goals to win with Len Crook, former Arey Lee goalkeeper guarding the net. He made some wonderful saves, and broke the backbone of the Kingston attack.

The lineup:—

Frontenacs—Goal, McNeil; defence Yates and Brouse; centre, Fred Bygrave; wings, Bolitinger and Joe Smith; spares Watts and Lance.

Belleville, Crooks; defence, A. Holloway and H. Holloway; centre, Hagerman; wings, Weir and Swayze, spares, Mallen and Goyer.

Referee—Charlie Murray, Brockville.

COACHER MAY PLAY WITH ARGONAUTS

It is stated on reliable authority that Lionel Conacher will turn out with the Argonaut hockey team in two or three weeks. By that time he expects to have established his business and be able to devote a little time to the recreation on the ice. There is little formality of getting the release from Aura Lee, but no difficulty is anticipated in that direction.

Dr. F. E. Sandercock, president of the Alberta Amateur Hockey Association, has assured the O.H.A. that Wild Rills, of Port Hope, did not do anything on his recent trip west to affect his amateur standing, and he therefore has been granted a certificate to play in the intermediate series. PRESTON PREPARES FOR BASEBALL

Toronto Telegram states that what is Toronto's loss in amateur baseball is Preston's gain. The latter town is going to cut some swath in the Inter-County League, judging from the array of baseball material now in the Mineral Spring town. Of the newcomers two are well known Toronto players in the person of the Benson brothers, Tommy and Billy. Both played for Oakey champions of the Playground Senior League last summer. Oakey will miss these two smart players and Preston will gain two fine athletes. In addition, there are players from other places now at Preston, including Scott, a third baseman, from Brantford. As Guelph, Galt and Kitchener are also strong, it should provide an interesting race next spring.

IRISHMEN WIN FROM OTTAWAS

Best Pro. Game Played in Toronto This Season Results in 3-2 Victory for St. Pats.

St. Patrick's maintained a clean sheet in the record of their home games in the N.H.L. last night when they defeated the Ottawa Senators, the league leaders, by 3 to 2 in a struggle that went five minutes and thirteen seconds over the regulation length and on the showing of the two teams the visitors were indeed lucky to be on even terms at the end of the third period. The Irish deserved to win the game by a bigger margin than is indicated by an overtime victory, but a penalty in the last five minutes of the final period enabled the Senator Foles to tie the score and the wonder ful work of Benedict in the Ottawa nets failed the local sharpshooters time and time again, when it looked as if a counter was certain.

Although the Irish had won their previous starts at home by good margins, they did not show the hockey that they produced last night. As has always been the case with games against the Senators the locals played at the top of their form and there was a great improvement in the work of every member of the squad. This was particularly noticeable in the defence and it is doubtful if Stuart, Randall and Cameron have turned in better performances, defensively. They stepped into the attackers with but few occasions and covered up better in front of the nets than they have in previous games. The trio rushed well and while some of them scored it was no fault of theirs, Benedict was responsible.

Local professional fans always look to the Ottawa's visits to produce the best games of the season and they were not disappointed last night. The play was fast, ranging up and down without a let up, except for a time in the third period, when there were only nine men on the ice, the locals having the minority. Both teams checked hard and consequently combination attacks were practically an impossibility, and the game was a series of duels between the individuals with the puck. There were very few occasions that an attacker on either side was allowed a moment's respite from attention by an opponent, and in spite of the close and hard checking, there was nothing in the entire sixty-five minutes that could be classed as an approach to dirty hockey. It is games like last night's that will put professional hockey on a paying basis.

SEAGRAM STABLE IMPORTS HORSES

One Three-year-old, Five Two-year-olds and Brood Mare Arrived

Seven English-bred horses, comprising one three-year-old, five two-year-olds and a brood mare, arrived at the Seagram Farm, Waterloo, this week from England, where they where purchased recently by Mr. Haines. Incidentally the arrival of these horses brings Mr. Haines' total purchases for the Seagram Stable in England since the war up to twenty-six head.

Included in the present shipment are two fillies by Charles O'Malley, that good Irish sire, which broke a leg last Summer and had to be destroyed. These two fillies and one by Flying Orb, cannot help but improve the breeding at the Seagram Farm in years to come.

The three-year-old purchased is Hillman, a chestnutcolt by Happy Warrior—Mountain Lily. In six starts last Summer he won twice and was placed twice. He won a six-furlong race at Goodwood Park on July 23th, and the Newport Nursery Handicap at five furlongs at Wolverhampton on Oct. 9.

Owing to the papers missing the boat Mr. Eddie Seagram was unable to give full particulars of the breeding last night, although the insurance papers contained the following:—

Hillman (3) chestnut colt, by Happy Warrior—Mountain Lily.

Grey gelding (2), by Charles O'Malley—Millie Agrah, by Bachelor's Double.

Bay filly (2-), by Charles O'Malley —Meadow Grass by Lemberg.

Titule B. (3), bay filly, by Flying Orb.

Chestnut colt, (2), by Call of Wild, Letty Lind, chestnut mare, by Cuantock—Lady Littcia, in foal to Hapsburg.

COBOURG 5, WHITBY 2.

Whitby, Jan. 3.—In the first intermediate O.H.A. game played here tonight, Cobourg won out 3-2 in 10 minutes over time. The game was fast and a few penalties were handed out. Whitby led 2-0 at the end of the first, but Cobourg tied it up in the second period. O'Connor, in goal for Whitby, starred. Lineup:

Cobourg—Johns, goal; Rooney and Baker, defence; J. Baker, centre; N. Derry and Ed. Drumm, wings; Baker and Bowen, subs.

Whitby—C. O'Connor, goal; Lavery and Rice, defence; Hall, centre; Buddy and Charlton, wings; B. O'Connor and Moore, subs.

Referee—Bill Cummings, of Toronto.

Mike had only recently been made foreman of the section gang, but he knew his respect due his rank," relates the Altoona Tribune. negan," he said to an argumentative assistant, "I'll have nothing out of you but silence—and mighty little of that."

JUNIORS PRACTICE AT ARENA TONIGHT

Coach A. Marks wishes a good turnout of the Junior O. H. A. hockey players at the arena this evening. The boys will take the ice at 7 p.m. and will go the pace for the hour.

In their opening game with the Picton squad here recently, the locals surprised the most skeptical of hockey fans here, and that is saying something. What the boys lack in shooting practice and no doubt Coach Marks will put them through their facings at the arena tonight.

There is material in that aggregation to mop up the league it is believed when they get shapping, and here's hoping they accomplish this end.

HAMS OUTCLASSED BY CANADIENS

Flying Frenchmen Smothered Bengals and Won By 4 to 1

Hamilton, Jan. 3.—Canadiens excelled in almost every department in their first N.H.L. fixture on Hamilton ice this season and handed the Bengals a 4-to-1 licking in such masterly fashion that the fans are wondering them as the greatest team that has been seen here in action this season. Unlike the team of last season, Canadiens trotted out a bunch of speed merchants, all possessors of a wicked shot, and from goog to bad they were all of over the Hamilton team like a tent. In Joliat, O. Cleghorn and Boucher Canadiens have a forward line second to none. They checked back in a manner that has seldom, if ever, been witnessed on local ice, and their passing was one of the many features of a good game. The Hamilton team could do little against this clever checking, and the team play that shone so brilliantly against St. Pats one week ago was conspicuous by its absence against the Frenchmen.

STARTED EARLY.

It did not take Canadiens long to impress on the Hamilton team and their supporters that they would be a tough team to best. From the outset they opened a fierce attack that the Hamilton defence could do nothing with, and it was only good work on the part of Forbes that held them to a single goal in the opening period. The diminutive player was called upon repeatedly to stop shots from close in, but managed to get some part of his anatomy between the disc and goal.

Auriet Joliat is sure a valuable addition to the Canadien forward line, and his work was featured by harder on the opposite wing. One Canadiens tallied, O. Cleghorn fell back on the defence, and it was the rushes of Boucher and Joliat that spelled defeat for Hamilton. The local squad could do nothing against the close checking, and towards the later part of the game relied on long shots.

NEGRO LYNCHED

Hattiesburg, Miss., Jan. 3.—Ben Webster, a negro, was taken from an eastbound passenger train on the Alabama and Vicksburg Railroad at Lawrence last night by a band of about 25 masked men and his body was found this morning hanging from a bridge about two miles from Waynesborough, Wayne county, and a distance of some 25 miles from Lawrence according to reports reaching here today.

SHOE CLERKS DOWN NATURAL TREAD

The Shoe Clerks won their opening game at the expense of the Natural Tread last night at The Recreation Parlors when they won out by over 200 pins. The Natural Tread were handicapped to a certain extent when they used four men instead of the customary five. The Shoe Clerks are a new team and with a little more experience are going to make a first class team. The summary:

I wish to congratulate the butter makers who have contributed to the above most excellent showing and trust that another year we may do even better.

Mr. Newman said that the report showed we were doing well in Eastern Ontario but he desired to see even a better result. Let us push down to work to endeavor to progress ahead of some of the other sections of Canada.

The sessions will be resumed this afternoon and the convention will close with this evening's proceedings in the City Hall. Banquet speakers will be present, and an interesting meeting is assured those who propose to attend.

Mr. Zufelt stated that a new building has been erected in Kingston and that another year we may do even better.

FIRE HAZARD

Yesterday's sudden conflagration, occurring right in the central part of the city, should be sufficient warning to those who are careless in complying with business and governmental regulations relative to fire protection.

Under the direction of the Chief of the Fire Department all public places and other buildings should be inspected at regular intervals, and the requirements relative to the providing of fire-escapes, ropes in bedrooms and adequate exits should be fully met.

Yesterday's fire demonstrated that the new M.C.A. building was not equipped with fire escapes, and the proximity of the scene of yesterday's fire caused some anxiety to different parties. Doubtless many other buildings require fire-escape equipment, while some others have complied with the law.

Why this apparent laxity in inspection? Will it be necessary that a fire holocaust visit Belleville, to cause the strong hand of the law to be brought to bear on us, after the damage done, with possible loss of life?

We had better stand pretty carefully on the feet of the Insurance Underwriters, or they will ask us in fact, compel us—to adjust the situation to their satisfaction. More rigid inspection will be demanded before we can expect a reduction of insurance rates, or when will probably be the same basic rate as much larger centres with more frequent inspection as to fire hazard.

ANOTHER THEORY BUSTED

There used to be a lot of declamation by U.F.O. speakers in particular, against the "Interests" which fixed prices of commodities, in the old days when the sale governed market prices beyond his control. There may be less bunk of that kind now that the special committee of the Legislature, which has been considering Hon. W. E. Raney's anti-combine bill, has come to the conclusion that price-fixing by manufacturers is not a crime, not even a means of enhancing prices, but a protection to the public. It has concluded that by the manufacturer's fixing the price of quality at a fair price is protecting its reputation and his own business when he refuses to allow a retailer to cheapen it by using it as a "bargain" to attract buyers for other goods. So, while there will be clauses providing against price agreements among manufacturers and distributors—the well known restraint of trade principle—the price-fixing section of the bill is eliminated. As a matter of cold fact, milk producers fix their prices, because do it to a certain extent, and farmers aim to bring it about in regard to grain, grain and cattle, by means of co-operation. In the house of labor, they are manufacturers, and have just as much right as those more commonly described as such.

CONDEMNS CLASS RULE

Attempt to manage affairs by combination of members of a class, whether manufacturers or of farmers, was described as undemocratic by Hon. H. J. Cody, former minister of Education, in an address the other day before Toronto Liberal-Conservative Business Men's Club. Two political parties only are essential for the proper enjoyment of democratic government, the speaker said.

Dr. Cody deprecated the bitterness of criticism to which politicians are often subject. Many good men are kept from public life by a natural shrinking from attack of this kind by individuals and the press, he believed.

"Sometimes, at least," he said, "politicians do right, or at any rate refrain from doing wrong. Why not say so? I think it would be better strategy. This unending criticism is an offence to God and man."

His host, Arthur Meighen, who was present at the luncheon, remarked that the safety of democracy depended upon the degree to which the public showed the kind of common sense displayed by the speaker of the day (Dr. Cody). The Conservative leader also expressed the hope that Dr. Cody would see fit to re-enter public life.

HERE AND THERE

TREES OVER FORTY CENTURIES OLD.

Human beings cannot compete with trees in the matter of longevity. Human lives are more fortunate than trees up to certain ages, according to mortality tables. A forest at maturity contains about 5 per cent. of all the trees that have started there. The percentage of persons living from 10 to 50 is much greater than 50 per cent. of trees. About 85 per cent. of trees die before they are 80 years old, while only 17 per cent. of persons will die before reaching that age.

But when it comes to trees 100 years of age and over, it is necessary to go into individual species to find out how trees who compare with them in length of years. Methuselah and Noah were far ahead of the majority of common trees as centenarians, but no man and no nation has lived as long as have the sequoia trees. The sequoia attains an age of about 4,000 years.

A square foot in a forest at 20 years requires about four square feet of space; at 40 years, 34 square feet; at 60 years, 70; and at 100 years, 150 square feet. Pine trees demand at least a foot more light square foot at 20 years, and nearly 40 per cent. more than fir trees, according to tables prepared by the New York State College of Forestry at Syracuse University.

In some natural pine forests where the trees grow very close together statistics show that more than 4,000 trees per acre die between the ages of 10 and 30 and that 200 out of the remainder die between the ages of 80 and 100. With some this natural dying proceeds faster than with others. Hemlock, spruce and all species that which demand a great deal of light, the death rate is enormous. The spruce, beech, fir and, generally speaking, all species which are satisfied with less light are not affected so seriously.

YESTERYEAR.

The year is gone, its bourne are flown;
So fast from us it sped away,
That we can find
No thoughts to bind
Our dreams of yesterday.

A voice we heard, we et smile we crave,
Forever passed beyond
Gone with the hours,
Like faded flowers,
Into the silent grave.

Some words we said have sunk like lead
Into a tender heart;
Atoning vow
Can never now
Console our Love instead.

Yet there are still sad hearts to lift
Above life's strange unrest;
Sweet songs to sing,
Glad smiles to bring,
And so our days be blest.

PRESS OPINIONS

KNIGHT IN DEFEAT
(Hamilton Spectator)

In times of stress, of defeat and of trying experience the real quality and fiber of individuality are shown. Sir Adam Beck is to-day contented that and what matters most of the greatest disappointments of his public career.

In victory he has been generous, forgiving, eager for further conception and responsibility, forgetting the past in the anticipation of the opportunity of the day and building stronger for the future. There can be no serious "sniping at the foot" of such a character as Sir Adam Beck. His greatness lies in the stillness of defeat, in his undaunted courage, in his breath of vision and above all in his personal fine interestedness. He has taken his cross currents, but he has advanced too far on the side of public trust and confidence to be submerged.

A "DRY" NEW YEAR?
(Montreal Herald)

Despite the somewhat uncertain weather Montreal spent a very pleasant and orderly New Year's day and welcomed in many and varying ways. It was an orderly holiday, and judge by the police records, reflected a marked contrast to the doings in New York City. The following headlines taken from the Gazette of yesterday and this morning tell at a glance what took place in the Manhattan metropolis:

Monday's read as follows:—
"Liquor raided into New York by 16 vessels—Customs agents refused at $7,000,000 landed for New Year—Dry Navy disabled—Machinery laid up—5 ships aided in—Rum wouldn't end."

This morning's story was:—
"New Year's Eve Shooting real menace in U.S.—18 victims in New York—Booze flowed like water—Gangsters and bootleggers—Near and boisterous behaviour with very much drunkenness."

Enough said.

Catarrh Of the Stomach Is Dangerous

"Thousands Have It and Don't Know It"—Says Dr. Hamilton Frequently Mistaken for Indigestion —How To Recognize and Treat.

"Thousands of people suffer more or less constantly from furred, coated tongue, bad breath, sour burning stomach, frequent vomiting, nausea in stomach, bitter eructations, gas, wind and stomach acidity and, call it indigestion when the real trouble is due to exactic catarrh of the stomach," writes a New York physician.

Catarrh of the stomach is dangerous because the mucous membrane lining of the stomach is thickened and a coating of phlegm covers the surface so that the digestive fluids cannot mix with the food and digest them. This condition soon breeds deadly disease in the fermented, undigested food. The habit is to relieve and carries the infection throughout the body. Gastric ulcers are apt to develop and frequently an ulcer is the first sign of a deadly cancer.

In catarrh of the stomach a good deal depends upon the kind of a tube before meals a teaspoonful of pure Bisurated Magnesia in half a glass of hot water. The acids in the stomach neutralize at once. It is not water washes the mucus from the stomach walls and draws it into the intestines, where it is harmless. Bisurated Magnesia is an excellent solvent for mucous and increases the flow of powerful digestive juices. Moreover the Bisurated Magnesia will serve as a powerful but harmless antiseptic to the intestines and counteract any excess hydrochloric acid that may be in your stomach and prevent its formation. Constipation, flatulent digestion without distress of any kind should soon follow. Bisurated Magnesia is different from Bisurated Magnesia with other forms of magnesia, milks, citrates, etc., for it is the only Bisurated Magnesia form (powder or tablets), especially prepared for this purpose.

Emory Fager's ice wagon horses are well trained. They know just when to start and stop. Saturday morning an ice wagon was at the rear of the Smith and Lindsay's drug store. "I am down in the Confectionery Store," Fager said. The horses started out, turned at Eighth and Central, and, at block west, made the turn in the approved traffic regulation manner, and returned half a block to the Co-operative Store, where they pulled up at the curb and stopped. These horses know all about Horton Ice Confectionery. They could probably tell what kept beer in their ice boxes a few years ago.

THE CONVENTION OF DAIRYMEN

ers in the different provinces and from public health officials, child welfare and other workers for large numbers of place in homes where they would be of value. The Roman Catholic clergy in Quebec have undertaken the distribution of several thousands to their parishioners.

Requests have also been received for milk distributors, but we have not been able to meet them as yet, for copies at a time. There is a reason for this—usually the distribution of milk for charity is very limited and, who, on this account and because their deliveries are made early in the morning, have no place to place them in the hands of the householder. If they are left with the milk bottles, there is the possibility and a probability that they may be blown into the street and, if such is the case, we can understand that the Department is laid open to criticism for wastefulness and extravagance. Then, too, the public is apt to regard them more in the light of advertising matter and attach less importance to the message than when handed direct from the Branch, or when the distribution is made through women's clubs, or by the same order local organization, such as public health and other welfare bodies. In several instances, the names of one or nearly all of the sleepers in certain cities have been sent to us—compiled from the voters' lists—and circulars have been mailed to each address. These lists have been sent by milk vendors, by medical men and others.

Eight exhibits have been planned during the year for those who are interested in domestic science. Of these at three of these, a demonstration in the preparation of dairy dishes was included and served a variety of dishes, but one which is not always possible, as it requires considerable help and a great deal of time in preparation. One of the exhibits was erected at the Canadian National Exhibition at which we were assisted by the Dominion Department of Agriculture. Some time before the opening date a notice was sent to Medical Officers of Health, to officials of the Home and School Clubs and to similar organizations interested in health education in Ontario. A great many of these responded to our invitation to have our booth and to maintain the co-operation which this Branch is prepared to give. In this way, a great many friends have been made and we have received the benefit of some valuable suggestions. Assistance was also given at this exhibition which are constantly being received have made it necessary to appoint from time to time, as the field and we hope that during the next year we can make our work even more effective and of greater usefulness.

HON. MANNING DOHERTY.

In opening his address, the Minister referred to the bereavement of Mrs. Campbell's address and he heartily concurred in her remarks. Federal aid was a benefit in many lines needed, and it was a wonderful idea to place a quart of good milk in the mouth of every child in the land.

There is an increasing demand for the products of the farm, and say plainly that the supply does not correspond. The farmer today is uncertain as to the ultimate results of his labor and there is no lasting incentive reward for intelligent effort. Although returns have not been considered adequate, yet there is a large number who leave the dairy farmer, and the farmers as a whole in this Dominion, though they may not be as prosperous as in a better position today than farmers in almost any country in the world, despite their thoughts to the contrary.

It has been a year of anxiety for the Minister, but he has met with every farmer in the Province and to keep in close touch with the agricultural affairs. He does not want to get divorced from the practical side of the industry, as he feels he would lose sympathy. In a short survey of the past year Hon. Mr. Doherty paid a tribute to the work of the farmers in the field. He was fearful early in the year, owing to prices of farm products (and not so crash); was fearful that the farmers would become panicky and sell all stock, especially cows. In watching the situation at the Union Stock Yards in Toronto and the Government stepped in and assisted the farmers to avert such a national calamity. It did not take place, however. He was pleased to see the increase at Agricultural Schools and exhibits at fall fairs and stock shows would indicate that there was more interest being taken in the breeding of pure-bred, and these conditions demonstrate that farmers have faith in their industry and have faith in their own judgment. The readjustment of affairs with little grumbling.

Hon. Mr. Doherty commended the Dairymen's Association for its efforts. The organization was doing a good work, and its effectiveness in all matters could be strengthened by an increase in the membership. He would like to see 1,000 members in 1923.

The Minister then dealt very lucidly with the cheese situation and quoted considerable statistics in connection therewith, and explaining that New Zealand cheese was rapidly supplanting Canadian cheese in the British Isles market. Our figures were causing great concern. There were 733 cheese factories in Ontario in 1921, and 720 operating in 1922, and the average price per pound in Eastern Ontario was 18½ cents, or 1½ cents lower than 1921. However, the quality was better in 1922, but this could not be said of the butter, according to the government grader at Toronto.

The Daily Ration (slightly) ... Hon. Mr. Doherty dealt briefly with the question of the production of clean, dirty-faced kid. He claimed that he was not the father of the child, but had contributed to it by the cutting of its teeth. The boy had experienced a fairly stormy time, but had survived the ordeal. Now, in the more distant future, he stated, dairymen are going to look back and wonder why they allowed such unnecessary elements regarding quality of milk to prevail so long. Payment should be made for quality from now on, and legislation to have been obtained already. Marked results cannot be expected in the first year, but in a few years, two, three years, expire, the ratio of milk requirements for one pound of cheese will be reduced by one pound from 11.37 pounds, the rate now prevalent, and will mean millions to the province. The year 1923, however, is the most opportune time for the introduction of the Act, as beef cattle are scarce and high in price, but at this period of low prices of stock.

Mr. Doherty said—that, economically, the production of milk could be reduced now, and many herds were running down to 3 per cent. in fat production.

Grading of Cheese.

This was a digression, but the Minister referred to the system as a step of progress and the Government will receive the heartiest co-operation of his own Department. If this country is to hold its own in agricultural products successfully, we must grade alone for the buyers. We must also standardize the product and empower the Minister to create confidence in our goods.

Exhibits at Dairy Shows.

The Minister stated that he intended to be liberal in the matter of demonstrations of his Department, in regard to the exhibition of our own products at the various fairs, such as Toronto, Chicago, and elsewhere. It was a burden duty of the Department to advertise the value of dairy products, to open up channels of trade and keep them open. It was a matter for experimentation, but a policy would be expected to do it. Although war has ceased on the battlefield, it is still fought waging in the markets of the world.

No one was satisfied with the awards at the Canadian National, but he had received second place and lots of commendation, and we thought we could have had first honors at Toronto as elsewhere. We should produce to suit the purchaser, not ourselves according to our own ideas.

The suggestion of Dr. Grisdale that an Agricul. Trade Commissioner be appointed, met with the hearty approval of Mr. Doherty. This official would continually survey the markets and keep in touch with the trade in marketing. The farmer on the commission line is the real sufferer in

By

D. Kinmount Roy

Whether the Squire's good wishes for his guests' repose were realized or not, his manner say, but for once Hardcastle decided that the sweet forgetfulness that so often refreshed his own scheming brain could not be expected that night. Once more he summoned Mc-Gregor, and asked what rooms the guests occupied, and elicited the further information that besides servants they were attended by a man who appeared to be a child or a woman.

Dismissing the man at last for the night he settled down to do a little thinking. He had so far allowed Maitland to make that clear. What new turn of affairs had brought them together? Was Maitland dangerous to Flowerney? He wished he could find out these things before morning. Some of their pervade might be induced to impart what they knew. But how could he reach them?

The wind had gone down, and a waning moon had risen and was struggling through drifting clouds.

It occurred to him that by going out through the French window in the room he might find out for himself where these unwelcome visitors were located, at least whether their lights were out. Perhaps it might be still possible to have a private interview with Maitland apart from the young Glenmore, from which satisfactory results might be expected.

To unfasten the shutters and draw the bolts was the work of a moment; but as he slid his hand upon the bolt, he noticed in sudden and visible terror, for outside the window there was a face of a man intensely white, overarched with the recent rain; a white face, drawn and wild, and two eyes ablaze with insane terror.

The Squire recognized him at once, but in sheer astonishment stood still, staring at the singular apparition.

"Open, fool!" the apparition hissed, while his teeth chattered from chill and fear. "Open!—you could not look more scared if you had seen the devil!"

The Squire, suddenly recalled to himself, and rising into courage by the very temptuous tone and wild masterful bearing of Kinkman, drew back the bolt, and hastily secured it after he had entered without a word.

It was quite evident that the wretched creature was exhausted in brain and body, and hardly master of himself. Once inside, he sank into a chair, panting like a man who had been running a race and despairing of the goal. He still glanced at the window cautiously, with a looming terror in his eyes. Hardcastle smiled at his fears; it was now his turn to be contemptuous: he shook the iron shutter to show him how strong it was, and pouted out a glass of liquor, as he said, to steady the fellow's nerves. The shivering creature gulped it down and asked for more. Hardcastle left him to consume his thirst in his own way, while he found him some food. A dainty feeder himself, he watched the wolfish appetite of his guests with amused satisfaction, while he busied himself in finding some dry clothes to replace the wet and muddied garments the man was wearing. Kinkman seldom, if ever, drank it; excuse; in fact, he boasted that he never was drunk in his life—which may have satisfying and selfish to be moved by love of good-fellowship, joy or sorrow or any other human emotion to seek liquor as a palliative or stimulant. He drank, however, an enormous quantity on this occasion, which in his fevered mental condition seemed to act as a sedative, and restored to him courage.

When he surveyed himself in the Squire's clothes, the transformation pleased him so much that he laughed softly at his own improved appearance. "Where are they?" he asked, after a brief pause.

"They? Who?" the Squire asked sharply, with admirable composure.

"Who? Kinkman said scornfully, 'do you think I came here for nothing?'

"Well, no,' the Squire answered drily; 'I think you have generally very good reasons for your movements.'

"Yes,' Kinkman replied savagely confronting the Squire, 'you may take your oath on that,' and he snapped his teeth like a wild beast at bay. 'I have reasons enough to oblige the master of Fosseway, while he tasted all the sweets of his distinguished position, and I had none. I was the school scoundrel, left the bitter to his humble colleague; for all!'

"Well,' Hardcastle said suavely, 'is that is what you have come for it is not understood to do?' and his voice grew hard, and his keen barrow eyes searched the face of the man before him.

"I have earned my share,' the fellow said, doggedly, 'and I'll have it.'

"Then, what have those men doing here to-night?' the squire demanded, with point at the heast of his adversary, and some his advantage.

"I don't know,' Kinkman said, shiving uneasily, 'that is surely your business!'

"My business!" the Squire echoed. with rising anger, 'and but for a piece of folly, your business,' the man and of devilish illluck I had rid the world of one of them not many hours since. I have dogged their steps since they left London, and after MacAlpin left them—'

"MacAlpin!" the Squire repeated, with a paler cheek than usual; 'what about MacAlpin?'

"Why, MacAlpin came down with them! He is the devil's own marplot. I'll catch him yet, and settle old scores with him!' and the mis-shapen creature growled out a hideous imprecation under his breath.

DOCTORS WANTED TO OPERATE

Mrs. Quillen Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Saved Her from an Operation

Muskegon, Michigan.—"After doctoring for eight or nine years with different physicians without any relief at all, they said at last that that medicine would not reach my case and I should have an operation. I had heard of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and the good it advertised in all the papers, so I thought where some women had suffered just as I did and get well and started again by taking the Vegetable Compound. I decided to see what it would do for me, and before I had finished the fourth bottle I was much better, the weakness stopped and the severe pains in my sides left. I am now much stronger and do my own work and wash for a factory besides. I am not taking the Vegetable Compound and give it all the praise."—Mrs. Phelps Quillen, 1124 Morris St., Muskegon, Mich.

If you should need such warning symptoms as bearing-down pains and backache, or that nervous feeling, female trouble, and a persistent and faithful use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will seldom fail to help.

The Pioneer Mother Of Pres. Garfield

(By Florence Deacon Black.)

Greatness struggles up through the denseness of countless difficulties into the light. It needs not as its credits either luxury or social advantage, but if one may draw inferences from the lives of the noble and wonderful, it does need for its fostering, a mother's friendship and unselfish character.

Good mothers differ in little ways, but are alike in at least one important feature—this: they watch vigilantly to understand each child and guide him in knowledge, manners and habits that will help him to make the most of himself.

Circumstances make most of the differences in mothering. Mrs. Garfield, the mother of James Garfield, former president of the United States would not, for instance, have taunted around in a strawberry bed for a speckled frog, as the mother of Robert Browning did to satisfy a whim of her son. But Mrs. Garfield was glad to see her boy in the open field all day, and go without food that her children might have sufficient, and knew is not the best food. Robert Browning would have been equally self-sacrificing in those ways had conditions demanded them.

Mr. Garfield died when the eldest of their four children was ten, so that Mrs. Garfield had to be mother and father, too. One of her true characteristics as a disciplinarian was the way she used her children. First of all she consulted with Thomas, the eldest, as to how they should pay their debts and manage the little farm on which they lived in the Ohio woods. Thomas felt sure that he could find the farm his father had been tending just before his death, and that he could plow and plant just as well as the farm animals. Mother and son together would sell piece of the land to pay what they owed, do it was said. And that small boy accomplished all that he promised.

But it was a long winter, several moths before the land could was so scarce in that little valley, so that the mother began to go on two meals a day, and then a day only, at the same time working to the limit of her strength, and hiding from the children her self-denial. So loving and loyal was the bond between mother and children that they knew by here insinct what she was eating less themselves.

Mrs. Garfield thought things out herself and then called the children into the council. To Thomas was said to work out at self-season, to earn extra money; when James was growing up and grew, out to work at first one trade and then another, and when it that distressing period he fell into the company of bad boys and declared not to go to sea; at these and other times, Mrs. Garfield drew from her boys their opinions, and then gave her own opinion pointedly and backed by prayer, but without hinting. She led, but did not drive. She trusted them.

In spite of all Mrs. Garfield's work and responsibilities, she taught her children to read and write before school came to that pioneer district, and James, the youngest, has record about the Bible when he started to school at four years of age, than any of the other pupils, or the teacher himself.

There was no public worship near the childhood home of James Garfield, but the Sabbath was nevertheless carefully observed, and as well implanted was the desire to keep this day holy that when James was nearly grown he was able to resist, firmly a temptation to make a Sunday excursion.

DOMESTIC TRAGEDY AT TORONTO CAUSED MURDER

Danforth Avenue Woman Telephones Police to Tell Them of the Crime

"KILL OR GO CRAZY"

Had Been Living With Another Man and Her Husband Threatened to Notify Authorities

Hounded with threats of exposure to the police of the fact that she had never been legally married to Louis Levine, Mrs. Pete Hunstalk, 678 Danforth ave., aged 26, shot and killed Hunstalk while he lay in bed at that address shortly before nine o'clock Wednesday morning.

Since last summer, Mrs. Hunstalk had lived at the above address with Levine, who brought her from Russia, and who is the father of her three children. But about a week ago Hunstalk returned to the city from Niagara Falls, and Levine left the house.

NOTIFIED SISTER BY PHONE.

At nine o'clock yesterday morning Mrs. Hunstalk called her sister, Mrs. Ben Silverman, 1922 Danforth ave., on the telephone.

"I have shot him," was her announcement.

"Shot who?" asked Mrs. Silverman?

"The man who wrecked my life," was the answer.

According to the woman's story to the police, Hunstalk and his wife had quarreled last night and when Mrs. Hunstalk went to the bathroom, Hunstalk called after her, in taunt.

"You had better take the husband with you."

SHOT WHILE IN BED.

They quarreled practically all night long. When the children had left for school this morning the quarrel over Levine started again and Hunstalk commenced to break up the furniture. His wife then ran out to the hall, where a revolver she had bought was hidden in her husband's boots, and with which he had threatened to kill her. She seized the revolver and ran into the bedroom. Hunstalk then jumped into bed and pulled the clothes up over his head. The wife followed, pulled up the covering and shot her husband through the head. She then went to the phone, called the police, and told them she had killed her husband.

SHOT SECOND TIME.

While she was at the phone her husband raised himself in bed, when she again walked over and fired a second shot through his body. The gun then jammed and she could fire no more shots.

The police at both the Pape avenue and the headquarters switchboard had taken the number incorrectly, having it as 78, instead of 678 Danforth. Meanwhile Inspector Nat Caddick, of Pape avenue station, had phoned the coroner, and locating the correct address, arrived first at the house. He was met in the hall by Mrs. Hunstalk, who, handing him the revolver, said: "Here it is, I did it."

"KILL OR GO CRAZY."

Inspector Caddick and Detective Taft, on entering the apartment, which is above a store, found Hunstalk dead in bed. He had been shot twice, once above the right breast and also through the head. There was also a severe laceration of the head, showing that he had received a severe blow. On the windowsill was a small hand axe. On the floor was a broken chair, showing that a struggle had taken place. There were no blood stains on the axe.

On being asked why she had shot her husband the woman stated that she had to "either kill him or go crazy."

MAD BEING BLACKMAILED.

At detective headquarters Mrs. Hunstalk, who appeared to be perfectly calm, told her story. During the time she had been living with Levine, Hunstalk had been repeatedly asking for money and threatening to expose the fact that she and Levine were not married. During this time Levine had been giving a large portion of his $70 a week salary to Hunstalk, under the threats that he (Hunstalk) would not only expose him, but would shoot him if he didn't pay. The woman went on to say that she had stood the hounding and blackmailing as long as she could. Yesterday she visited a nearby hardware store, where she purchased the gun with which she later murdered her husband.

Neighbors heard no shot or noise of a fight, either this morning or last night. Mrs. G. White, who lives above the apartment where the murder took place, said that she went home all morning and had noticed nothing amiss. Clerks in the stores below had no knowledge.

Levine and the woman became acquainted years ago in Russia. Against the proposal of marriage by Levine, Permission to marry was refused Levine by the Russian authorities on the grounds that he had not completed any military service, and the couple agreed to come to America and live as man and wife.

While in Montreal she met Hunstalk and married him on the understanding that he was to get the Hebrew bill. Quarrels after quarrel followed during their life, and ultimately Mrs. Hunstalk and her husband separated, and Mrs. Hunstalk came to Toronto, back to Levine with whom she was living as his wife until a few days ago when Hunstalk came back from Niagara Falls.

Levine then left Mrs. Hunstalk and Hunstalk, it is alleged, threatened to kill his wife and the children, along with Levine, if she did not come back to him.

The children, two boys and a girl, range in age from 7 to 13. They all are well dressed and appeared to be well kept, happy and well behaved. They say they heard no quarrelling during the night.

Louis Levine was brought to police headquarters in the afternoon and is held as a witness.

Chief Coroner Graham opened an inquest last night.

That Body of Yours

By James W. Barton, M.D.,

YOUR POOR FEET.

Did you ever stop to think that most of us wear as much of our living feet as our feet are we do by our feet. Both ends are necessary to our livelihood!

Did you ever watch those feet of yours. Some day when you have the opportunity set the soles of your feet and toes on the bare floor, not the hardwood floors at home, however.

If you have well shaped feet there will be seen a mark of our heel and toes, but only the outer rim of the foot. The entire inner border, and middle portion of the foot will not show because they are off tae ground, forming the arch which supports your entire weight.

With perfect arches you have the spring and elasticity Nature intended you to have.

With the arches down you have flat feet and their attendant ills.

Nature has provided the arches of the feet, the cushions in the knee joint and cushions also between the bones of the spine. If the arches fall then the knees give trouble, but more frequently the nerves all down the spine suffer, because a man with flat feet is like a man with wooden legs. The constant jar from feet without their natural springs or arch is just like so many knocks to the spinal cord with consequent headache and backache.

Many people go into a store and buy a pair of shoes as they would a pound of sugar. This is very unwise as only arches that fit your particular feet should be worn. A test of your feet should be worn. In act arches should not be worn only as a last resort. Simple exercises will usually do the outside of the feet, using on the toes and also on the heels will develop the muscles that hold up the arch.

The irritability of many people is really due to the constant irritation of flat painful feet.

HOSPITAL BUILDING BURNED AT KINGSTON

Now Under Control—Patients in Main Building Removed to Safety

Kingston, Ont., Jan. 4.—The building used by the Vetcraft at Cataraqui for many years was gutted tonight in one of the most spectacular fires which have occurred in Kingston for many years and gave the firemen a stubborn fight. The hospital proper was saved, although all the patients were removed for fear the hospital would also fall a prey to the flames. The cause of the fire is unknown, but it is believed to have started in the Vetcraft department. This department, with the gymnasium, boiler room and four old wards of the hospital recently closed, were gutted. It is an old stone building and a landmark in this city. The loss is extensive, but it is covered by insurance. The fire broke out about 8 p.m. and at mid-night was still burning, although under control.

Fortunately the excitement in the hospital when the fire broke out, but the staff and a willing band of citizens soon removed the patients to Gwa Nada Hospital close by. There were 120 patients in the institution and about twenty of these were bed patients, and the most serious cases were removed to the General Hospital.

As a result of the fire the hospital proper was deprived of its heating supply, but it was stated tonight that a start would be made to-morrow on repairs to the boiler room.

For a time it was feared that some of the houses nearby would be destroyed, but the work of the firemen prevented the blaze from spreading. A crowd of several thousand citizens gathered at the scene and watched the progres of the fire.

WIND SONG.

Yester e'en I whispered,
You did not hear;
Today I am mighty,
And now you fear,
For I am the wind
That hurries along,
Would you but listen
You'd hear my song
As I sing at will
Amidst the trees,
And the voice of the forest
Oft tries to please
By whispering back—
And so if men
Would only listen
They'd hear my message,
Which is lost to the trees.

IN MEMORIAL.

WEEKE—In and loving memory of my dear husband who passed away Jan. 4, 1921.

Two years have passed since that sad day
When the one we loved was called away.
This world seems quite another place
Without the smile of dear Flays face.

Life's path is sad and lonely now,
For here the vacant chair,
Where once was love and happiness,
Oh dear laid vides we here.

Oh Daddy how we miss for you
And shed such bitter tears,
House has not been the same for us
These two long dreary years.

Wife and Life, Daughter.

IN MEMORIAL.

In memory of Frank D. Butterfield, beloved husband of Annie G. Cowen, who departed this life Jan. 4th, 1919, aged 23 years.

PROMINENT C. P. R. EMPLOYEE PASSES AWAY
Vancouver, B. C., Jan. 2.—In the death of Mr. Alfred Ernest Jarmett, which occurred at North Bend on Saturday, there passed away one of the pioneer employees in British Columbia of the Canadian Pacific. He started work with the railway about 35 years ago and for more than 30 years had been locomotive foreman in British Columbia. Being stationed at Cobalt, Grand Forks, Revelstoke, Kamloops and North Bend, Mr. Bennett was a native of Devonshire and was in his 63rd year. He was of a kindly disposition and held in high esteem by both the officers of the Canadian Pacific and those who worked under him. He was but married and death followed a short illness. Three sisters of the deceased who reside at Sherbrooke, were on the way west when news of their brother's death reached them at Winnipeg. They returned eastward from there for Sherbrooke, to which city their brother's remains were forwarded by C. P. R. on Monday.

SCIENTISTS TRY TO PROVE EINSTEIN THEORY

San Francisco, Jan. 3.—Down in the basement under the dome of Lick Observatory, near here, astronomers recently opened a box of huge photographic plates, taken at a far-away Australian outpost during the September eclipse of the sun, and started developing them to prove or disprove Dr. Albert Einstein's theory of relativity.

Dr. Einstein thinks the pictures will show the correctness of his theory of relativity.

Dr. Einstein thinks the pictures will show the correctness of his theory, which is that the sun attracts or bends the light of nearby planets as they pass near it.

Dr. W. W. Campbell Director of the observatory and head of the W. H. Crocker expedition, which took the pictures, will make no statement until the plates are developed and infinitely delicate measurements and corrections are made. Several weeks will be required for this work.

Forty eight photographs of the skies were taken by the expedition. Eight of them were in connection with the Einstein theory and the others were of the stars and spectrum and corona of the sun.

Four "Einstein cameras", designed and constructed especially for the eclipse, were used by the expedition. They required plates 11 inches square and a quarter of an inch thick. The plates were made of plate glass and weighed 7 pounds each. The sun's camera was photographed with a camera 40 feet in focal length on plates 14 by 17 inches in size.

The plates recently arrived here from the south Pacific with eighty four packages of scientific instrument used by the party. The shipment was sent to the observatory, which is on Mt. Hamilton, in bond by truck and the packages were opened with a government customs inspector present. The packets of plates, carefully packed, weighed 600 pounds. During their journey across the Pacific great care was taken to see that the plates arrived intact.

The Crocker Expedition was formed in that Eclipse Day was bright and clear. A German expedition to Thursday Island, headed by Dr. Einstein, reported failure because foggy and the sun when the eclipse occurred. Dr. Einstein was quoted at Kobe, on his way home, to the effect that he thought the Campbell plates would prove his theory correct.

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor of The Intelligencer:—Sir,—Allen Tom Moore, President of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada said in his New Year's address: "The strongest weapon of a democracy against the abuse of position by its elected representatives is an enlightened active public opinion."

The meeting of the Property Owners's Association, Friday night at the City Hall, will afford an opportunity for public discussion which President Moore commends.

CORBY BATHS

For five long bathless years we have endured this question, while $5000. lie awaiting our decision. Why not act this year?

COLEMAN WARD SCHOOL

We have read statements in the newspapers from the Contractor and the Architect, why not inquire into this matter and ascertain if improper material is going into this school? Is the safety of the children being properly guarded? If not, whose fault is it? The school was to have been completed last October. Whose fault caused the delay? It is the citizens' money that is paying the bills. It is only right that the citizens should take an interest.

ACCIDENT INSURANCE

It has been claimed that last year's Council paid $1000. more for accident insurance to a company represented by H. P. Keeler than the price at which another Company offered to carry the risk. If this is not the case, it should be known. If it is, then we should know who was to blame, and guard against a like blunder in the future. That $1000. would have bought a lot of feet for this winter.

It is better to have these and similar questions thrashed out in public and settled than allow them to live on rumour. These questions should be approached not in a critical attitude but simply as interested citizens desiring information.

W. C. MIKEL.

STRONG ADDRESSES AT DAIRY CONVENTION

BELLEVILLE MOOSE HOLD ANNUAL BALL

Successful Affair at Johnstone's Academy Last Night

Over Two Hundred Couples Attend and Dance to Excellent Music

It is extremely doubtful if a bigger and more enjoyable affair has ever been conducted in this city than the assembly held at Johnstone's Dancing Academy last night. The Loyal Order of Moose, Belleville Lodge No. 1004, was at home to their friends, and the annual ball of the local organization took place. Many guests from outside places were present and over two hundred couples attended.

The dance proved a huge social success, and the many innovations provided by the committee in charge were appreciated to the full. The streamers, balloons and the caps of the Legion were much in evidence throughout the evening, and the striking costumes worn by the ladies gave a charming effect to the ballroom, which was most tastefully and appropriately decorated. Spruce trees were placed about the hall and the pillars were festooned with balsam boughs. The insignia of the Order was much in evidence, and surveying the proceedings in all maiesty was the mounted head of that lordly forest denizen, the bull moose, though now dead, yet seemingly fully alive to the gaiety and significance and reminiful that the committee be ever attentive to their guests. The festive dance of Belleville Lodge concluded for the second half of the programme, and in subdued shadows, numerous balloons were released throughout the crowd, to the enjoyment of all.

The programme of the evening was as follows:

1, Grand March and Waltz; 2, Fox Trot; 3, Social Circle; 4, "Moonlight" Moon Waltz; 5, Fox Trot; 6, Tag Two Step "Ladies"; 7, Lancers; 8, Fox Trot; 9, Roberts Two Step; 10, Waltz; extras, Waltz and Fox Trot.

1, Waltz; 2, Fox Trot; 3, Social Circle; 4, Moon Waltz "Legionaire"; 5, Tag Two Step "Gents"; 6, Fox Trot; 7, Waltz; Fox Trot; 9, Roberts Two Step; 10, Waltz; extras, Waltz and Fox Trot.

For the non-dancers, pleasant sitting out spaces were thoughtfully provided, and during the evening dainty refreshments were served.

Ourrett's sixteen piece orchestra, of Brockville, provided the music, and it was all that could be desired. Great credit is due to the conveners of the evening must be extended to the committee in charge, which was composed of the following members of the Lodge: Wm. Haslip, chairman, John Cochrane, secretary, W. A. Chapman, treasurer, and right other brother Moose.

Affairs of this nature exemplify that Belleville societies can entertain with the best, and the guests who were privileged to attend will not soon forget the evening. The annual ball of the Belleville Moose for 1923 has started as one of the leading affairs of the season, and will thus be long remembered by all.

Interment of the Late William Furby at Mount Pleasant Cemetery

The funeral of the late William F. G. Furby, who was killed in this city on Tuesday evening in a hob-sleighing accident, took place this afternoon to Toronto, from the residence of his sister, Mrs. S. A. Pare, 283 Queen street east, to Mount Pleasant cemetery.

Mr. Furby was well known in Toronto, having been born in that city 34 years ago, but of recent years had been a resident of New Orleans, La., where he was in the printing business in the shipping and exporting firm of John A. Hunt and Company. Returning to Toronto for the holiday period, he met with a fatal accident while visiting in Belleville.

He is survived by his four sisters, Mrs. Sidney A. W. Park and Mrs. Emily Martin, of Toronto, and Mrs. Frank Sadler and Miss Harriet Furby, of Chicago.

EASTERN ONTARIO DAIRYMEN CONCLUDE THEIR SESSIONS

All Three Session's Yesterday Conveyed Much Valuable Information—Addresses Made by Many Prominent Speakers

DEPARTMENTAL OFFICIALS PRESENT REPORTS

Grading of Cheese and Butter, Systems of Marketing—Care of Milk and Product Discussed

Question Box—Open Discussion—Association Reports Read—Resolution Passed and Many Important Matters Decided—Officers Appointed for 1923—A Successful Convention

At yesterday morning's session of the Dairymen following the address of Mr. J. A. Zufelt, Superintendent of the Kingston Dairy School and the subsequent remarks of W. J. Newman of Lornaville who presided in the absence of President Empey, Mr. Joseph Burgess, dairy produce grader at Montreal delivered a lengthy re- cheese and butter at the grading station. It was a most comprehensive report, giving in detail the work that had been done. The pasteurizing of whey was strongly advocated by the speaker. Of flavor in butter and cheese develops rapidly, and in the feeding o flurnips care should be taken as too many turnips fed has a tendency to flavor the article produced. Many factories ship cheese too green and he advised the shudder of the cheese at the factories for a little longer period. Gasca in cheese were more prevalent last year than in previous years in spaking relative to the weights of cheese Mr. Burgess said that the increase in weights were objectionable features. All cheese should posess uniformity in weight. Grading, he claimed, was an important factor in securing a better class of cheese. The chief fault found with Ontario butter was that in some cases the flavor was not what it should be. He would advocate the collecting of cream oftener than is at present done, also proper care of it in regard to temperature.

Mr. C. G. Publow, Dairy Instructor and Sanitary Inspector then presented his annual report of the season of 1922, which concluded the morning session.

Mr. Publow's report was as follows:

I have the honor to present to you at this time my 20th annual report of the work accomplished by our staff of Instructors, Inspectors and myself during the season of 1922.

It seems that while each year the Dairy Industry furnishes some new feature of more or less importance the general manner of reporting and recording our work must of necessity be kept with a certain degree of similarity and uniformity.

The year just closed has been perhaps of more than the average interest, owing to the fact that we were all working under new conditions made necessary in the fulfillment of the requirements of the Dairy Standard Act, put into force for the first time.

A year ago, when these new regulations were being considered, we were being considered, we were in a position of more or less doubt as to what their outcome would be in the face of considerable opposition, but we have passed over our first season under the new Act, and are today, I feel sure, of a much more united spirit, than has existed for some time.

You will be interested no doubt to know of just exactly of that value the re- rerulations have proved to be and in this report I will devote a part of my remarks at least, to this feature of the work.

The new Dairy Standards Act, as you know, went into effect on January 1st. Associated with this was the offer of the Minister of Agriculture to provide instructors to do the testing of the milk at the factories, at a cost of fifty cents per patron for the season. So many took advantage of the latter offer that our staff instructors had to be increased and the groups made smaller, so that the milk testing could be finished sufficiently early each month to prevent delays in arranging factory payments.

Of the 728 factories in operation 543 applied to have a Government man do the testing, so thirty instructors were appointed in addition to can spare man and the farther who was my assistant.

As was to be expected, there were many obstacles to be overcome in the first part of the season. Now equipment had to be installed by the factories and, in many cases, alterations made that caused delays. However, before the season was very far advanced, almost every factory was working along smoothly and as the patrons became more confident and convinced that the testing was being done fairly and efficiently, it was generally agreeable to see how former opposition melted away. It was gratifying to find that a great many of patrons who were formerly opposing the fat test, after seeing the testing done, at their own factory, went away satisfied and convinced of its fairness.

The keeping of duplicate samples (a, b, c,) has been one of the best procedures we have, as it gives the patrons a feeling of security and insurance against unfair readings, accidents, or spoiled tests.

I have the statistics of our work in a tabulated form by itself, but what I am referring to the testing of the milk and payment for same on a fat basis. I would just like to mention this very important fact, that the yield of cheese this year has been greater in percentage to a unit of over $110,000. This amount would, no doubt, more than pay for all the cost of extra equipment installed and the

ASSAULT CASE IS SETTLED

George Duby Given Suspended Sentence on Assault Charge

WILSON WINE CASE

Man Fined $10 and Costs for Being Intoxicated in Public Place

Zig-zagging up Front street, with half a bottle of Wilson's Invalid Port Wine on the inside, and the remainder carefully corked in the original crock, Tom Kelly was fond of F. C. Blake Van Meer, and was transplanted from Front street to McAnany street for the evening.

Wilson's wine they claim, is very good for those who are not well enough to consume it in large quantities. For others who acquire a periodical thirst, however, and who row down several slugs, it is rather disastrous. It contains aspirin, so they say, which produces a drowsy effect. Aspirin is a good thing for cold water, as it takes the cold out of it, but when mixed with cow wine for a beverage it plays games with the drinker.

A jar produced by this concoction is worth from $10 to $15 and court costs, to the jag-ee, but there is no law against carrying it, as it is a medicine. Convictions have been registered in Western Ontario so they say, however, when it was proved beyond a shadow of a doubt, that the wine was sold for beverage purposes purely.

In police court this morning, before Messrs. H. F. Ketcheson, J.P. and J. E. Walmsley, J.P., accused was fined $10 and costs of $7.

The Duby Case

George Duby, charged with assaulting P. C. William Evans on the afternoon of December 26th last, pleaded guilty to the charge and was allowed out on suspended sentence of six months, and fined $10 and costs of $7 on the first charge of intoxication. Mr. C. A. Payne appeared for the accused.

In passing sentence, Mr. Ketcheson pointed out that the law and order of the city must be maintained, also the police officers protected, and the sooner people realized that fact, the better.

Crown Attorney Carnew stated that there was an element in the city who were very adverse to the executive determination of officer Evans, but that his conduct in this case was absolutely commendable, as the language used by Duby was terrible and provoking.

DAIRYMEN'S CONVENTION BROUGHT TO CLOSE WITH EXCELLENT ADDRESSES

Hon. Duncan Marshall, Commissioner of Agriculture Delivered Most Interesting Address on "Agriculture and Dairying in Ontario—President Empey was Chairman

KEEN COMPETITION FOR WORLD MARKETS

Keener Interest and Additional Scientific Instruction May Enable Canada to Compete With European Countries in the Dairying World.

Honorable Duncan Marshall, Commissioner of Agriculture in the Dominion Government, was the chief speaker at the final meeting of the 46th annual meeting of the Dairymen's Association of Eastern Ontario, which was held at the City Hall last evening, he being present in the place of Hon. W. H. Hoshervell, Dominion Minister of Agriculture, who was unavoidably absent. The speech delivered by Mr. Marshall was one of the finest ever here in some time, being facts of the most interesting nature, interspersed with very humorous touches.

The prime idea in the mind of this official, is better and more scientific farming throughout the Province of Canada, but primarily, satisfied and contented farmers, who are successful and scientific. Agriculture is the foundation of this country, and has been for many years. Realizing that the past few years have been hard years for the farmer, not only in Canada but in foreign countries, from every country Hon. Mr. Marshall has recently returned, owing to the sudden drop in prices, for produces of farm, which were purchased at the former high prices, yet it must be remembered that business men and tradesmen have experienced similar difficulties. Farming, however, must not cease, despite poor prospects of crop prices, but the farm business will have to be adjusted to the times. Dairying in a scientific manner, is one, grand manner in which to adjust the farming conditions existing, by going in for it stronger, getting rid of cull cattle, and improving the pure bred stock where pure breds are being raised, so that the stock will be the very best in the next few years, when the demand for good thoroughbreds will be great.

Speaking of the discussion on the grading of farm produce, the speaker stated that he had been much taken by listening to the afternoon discussion, but was not convinced that all he had heard was correct.

"I hope, however," he continued, "that you will agree upon some set system and make the greatest use of products that you have. Great Britain, Our Canadian market has been practically shut out of Germany and Europe, and Great Britain is not buying anything but the best, for which she is already willing to pay the price, as the Britisher has the greatest, yet the most discriminating appetite in the world. Let us see that we supply it, and the price plus a bonus for the genuine article.

"I think some Canadian produce was not popular on the British market was admitted by the speaker, who stated that the Canadian product was not always pleased, yet because some bad sides from Canadian packing houses, also some bad butter, had been forwarded to the British market, the cheese and other Canadian products were also prejudiced in certain cases. Now Canadian cheese is more popular in England than Canadian cheese, and is rapidly coming up on a par with the Danish cheese, which is recognized as the premier cheese of the world, in England, being the highest in demand. The fact that ravaged European countries come back into the dairying field as they will in the near future, will be that their dairy goods are not still graded and staplardized, their lookout will be slim in the way of trade and efficient competition.

In England, Ontario and Quebec butter sells for 5 cents less than Irish butter, while Saskatchewan butter sells for 2 cents more per pound, than the same Irish butter, due largely to the perfect system of grading introduced into that Province by Mr. Motherwell.

"The English man," said Mr. Marshall, "does not like to purchase a hurrah if the goods came from the Fiji Islands, or what not, but, if the quality is right, Dairying was responsible for being the back bone of Ontario agriculture, and with the present system of grading here, being advocated for successful farming.

Where there are cows, there are bound to be calves before long, and the greatest fun imaginable is watching calves grow, providing they belong to you", was the apt manner in which the speaker classified the situation. Ever since the early days when the speaker "went to cows on his father's farm in his bare feet, on a frosty morning in the Autumn, he has realized that the cow is a great factor in the true progressive cultivation of the sow and her industry will make dairying so interesting and satisfactory to the boy and girl on the farm, that they will wish to stay there. To this end, it was pointed out that the boys and girls must be trained and educated along the latest lines of scientific agriculture, so that grading will finally be understood.

While in England, the Minister heard Lloyd George and the Premier Premier, Bonar Law argue out the requirements of agriculture in the British House of Commons, but the lordship and Baronetage, Bonar Law said, he knew there were two things which might be done. Export Bounty paid, and secondly, Protection afforded. Both he decided, however, were impossible, and after discussing co-operative marketing, strongly suggested more scientific investigation, and the sum of £200,000, was voted upon promotion of crop prices, but the farm business will have to be adjusted to the times. Dairying in a scientific manner, is one, grand manner in which to adjust the farming conditions existing, by going in for it stronger, getting rid of cull cattle, and improving the pure bred stock where pure breds are being raised, so that the stock will be the very best in the next few years, when the demand for good thoroughbreds will be great.

MANY VISITORS TO DAMAGED GARAGE

Many persons visited the former premises of the Hanna and Morgan garage on Campbell street, Thursday in order to view the great damage wrought by the disastrous fire which gutted that building on Tuesday afternoon last, and spread to the adjoining shell, (for that is all that remains), so nearly impressed by witnessing the amount of destruction wrought which was consumed wholly or partially.

Standing in some six inches of water, which is now frozen into ice, and scattered about the debris, bearing mute testimony to the ravages of the flames, which spread rapidly, owing to the highly inflammable materials, and oils which are to be found in any modern garage.

The roof has completely gone, leaving touring cars, with all the trimmings burned off. Then there is an automobile truck, and a Studebaker car, scarcely recognizable, a Grey Dort, Chevrolet Four-ninety, a Ford car, a Cleveland Six, and numerous Fords, besides the one which was shoved into the yard, but which is also demolished.

Anyone wishing to introduce themselves to a modern "Motor Mausoleum" should take a look inside this fire-ridden building.

AFTERMATH OF GIN SEIZURE

Oshawa, Jan. 4.—Frank Rogers, of Whitby, bailiff for Ontario County, was today assessed $50 and costs, Inspector of Division Courts, that this department had decided to dispense with his services. The order received by the bailiff early explained that because of Mr. Rogers' misconduct in the case of Rex. vs. Kuberik, the department had decided upon his dismissal.

During the recent hearing of the above mentioned case in Oshawa Mr. Rogers, armed with a writ of replevin, entered the court and seized a bottle of gin about to be submitted William Carnow, K.C., of Belleville, counsel for the defendant in the case against Kuberik. Because of this action the case was adjourned, as the Crown would not proceed.

EST YOUR SEED CORN

Seed With Strong Vitality is an Absolute Necessity.

Grow Your Seed a Careful Germination Test—It Should Run 95 Per Cent.—The Methods In Connection—Some Money for Wise.

(Contributed by Carlos Kendall, Dept. of Agriculture, Toronto.)

Two ears of corn may be used to illustrate the point. Both ears of seed may match the same and look the same, but the results in plant growth and yield of grain may be very different. Two stalks may stand together in the same hill, one having strength and vigor for rapid development. One may produce a good ear while the other produces an inferior nubbin.

With Good Vigor is a Necessity.

The difference is due to vitality of seed. Good, vital seed from select stock will generally give strong plants and a large yield. Weak seed will give a few good plants and many medium and poor plants. Enormous loss and waste would be prevented if only the best seed were saved by all growers of seed corn. A few stalks in each row, a few stalks each or barren stalks distributed over the corn field, reduces or eliminates an opportunity for profit. Uniformity, vigor and grade have to be kept in mind in selecting the seed ear, and the more frequent the missed hills, barren stalks, the more desirable is the corn field the less there is to pay-risk.

Give the Seed a Germination Test.

All seed corn should be given a germination test before planting. A poor seed ear going into the planter means a weak hill, and a poor stand to be expected by one thousand weak or worthless stalks. The corn grower can't afford to neglect the quality of the seed he sows.

Plant one hundred seeds two or three weeks in advance of the time he corn planting date, using a box of moist sand that is warm and window as a germinator. Count the strong plants at the end of a week and there should be at least 95 of them. If the test shows any weakness discard all the seed and secure another supply with a guaranteed germination test.—H. Stevenson, Secretary, Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.

The Mulberry.

The old-time fruit-bearing mulberry has lost its popularity in the gardens of southern Ontario. Better fruits have supplied it out, until it is rarely seen in the modern garden or fruit plantation. Sometimes planted as a food for silk worms, by lofty enthusiasts or by those desiring to play with silk worms during the late northern climate. During the past years, however, a few varieties of mulberry trees have been offered to the public by travelling salesmen. The experiences of the past with the mulberry as a fruit producing tree for sale, a food producing tree for silk growth in Ontario and the United States would indicate that nothing very great by way of achievement or profit is likely to follow the planting of any of the mulberry varieties in Ontario. One tree for the birds is probably all any one farm can afford. As for the development of new mulberry plantations for silk culture, such hardly seems profitable under the climatic and labor conditions of Ontario.—H. Stevenson, Secretary, Department of Agriculture, Toronto.

Home-made Spray Keeps Flies Away.

By preventing the from breeding the cows a much greater flow of milk is obtained during the summer months and the remainder of the lactation period. The following home-made mixture has given good results. It is better than anything we have tried and quite as efficient as the proprietal sprays costing a dollar a gallon. It is made as follows:

1½ quarts of any standard coal tar oil.

1½ quarts Sal oil.

1 pint oil of tar.

1 quart coal oil.

Mix in ten gallons of lukewarm soft water in which a bar of laundry soap has been dissolved.

Spray twice a day, in the morning after milking and in the afternoon when cows are brought in from pasture or green feed. When a half-barrel outfit with spray nozzle attachment is used, two men can spray the herd of forty cows in ten minutes. This mixture is not patented and does not cost all the files away and furthermore, it leaves the cows' coats glossy and does not cause dust to adhere; however, it is very beneficial in preventing.

Shelter from the hot sun of summer must be provided—if efficient and economical production is to be expected.—

Importing Quail.

A consignment of live quail from Spokane has been received by the Provincial Game Board, for release in the spinney district. These birds were given in exchange for some Australian pheasants. Another consignment is expected from the Western States in exchange for pheasants.

A Convincing Argument.

"What's this?" said John Smith, as he came upon the agent demonstrating machine knee deep in a sow's carcass.

"Oh, I just put it out there to keep your nerves company," replied the wife.

Gestation Period of the Cow.

The gestation period of the cow is nine and one-third months, or two hundred and eighty days. Sometimes a breeder figured it as nine months and ten days, and then some would come to him over a couple of months later and he said born when he should due. For example, a cow due on January 1 would be due the October 1 and not October 10 as bred on February 1 would be due November 1, not on November 10. The date of calving is found by counting forward the time to be and slightly days from the date

A NORTH POLE PALACE.

It Is Not the Coldest Place in the World.

"Nearly it not quite the most fundamentally grave idea about the north," says Mr. V. Stefansson in the World's Work, "is that the North Pole is the coldest place in the Northern Hemisphere, and that the Polar regions are far colder in winter than any countries that are now inhabited by the average kind of civilized European or American.

"Despite minor considerations there are three main factors that determine what the possible minimum temperature of a region may be. These are latitude, altitude, and distance from the ocean. We see at once that the North Pole has in a high degree only two of these three qualifications for being extremely cold. Certainly it is not a high altitude. The north Pole does not lie high above sea level, but it is the lowest place on which Admiral Peary, at the time he visited the Pole, found to be more than twelve thousand feet deep. And if it be not above sea level, neither is it far away from the ocean. Possessing only one of the three main factors for being extremely cold, it naturally is never extremely cold.

"Those who theorize about it generally agree that the minimum temperature there seldom, if ever, drops below 60 degrees below zero, Fahrenheit. If the actual minimum temperature of the Pole be in a matter of theory, we are in no doubt about the temperatures of the north coast of Canada or Alaska. The other day I was reading over a report of the anemometrical observations on the Arctic expedition of 1913-18, made by the scientific staff under Dr. R. M. Anderson. He says, 'The lowest temperature of the winter was 54 degrees below zero,' or about like the Great Lakes. Of course that is a winter resort. Temperatures as low as 60 or 65 below zero are known on the north coast of North America, and there are many winters when 46 degrees or 44 degrees below zero is the lowest record for the season.

"After asking the United States Weather Bureau for the lowest recorded temperature in the interior of Alaska, I inquired for the lowest temperature ever recorded in any well-settled portion of the United States in the temperate zone, meaning a region where a good many average Americans live in average American comfort. They replied that in a small town near Havre, Montana, they had registered 68 degrees below zero.

"Almost as low temperatures have been recorded in Havre itself, and Havre is a typical American town of three or four thousand inhabitants, with stores and shops, with schools and children going to school, with churches and people going to them. At a temperature 72 degrees lower than it ever has been known to be at Havre, the north Pole of North America, and about 10 degrees lower than the Pole of the Earth, the north Pole. And Havre is not by any means the coldest place in America where the minimum cold is lower than on the Northern coast coast of North America."

How Western Cattle Die.

Darwin has described the curious instinct of the guano of South America which leads it to "have favorite spots for their going to die," and now comes a description by Mr. R. A. Brooks, a Canadian naturalist, of the behaviour of cattle and buffalo when in the stress of cold, starvation and fright, which is very indicative how large masses of the bones of these animals have been accumulated. Mr. Brooks states that during the hard winter of 1916-7 thousands upon head of Canadian cattle perished from starvation and cold. "You remember well," he writes, "how some of them died. The first one to die usually made its way to a lonely place, generally in the corner of a coulee and lying down simply waited to die. The next one feeling her time approaching, would go to the bank of the first one, and died close beside her. And this was kept up until there were no more, or relief came." At one ranch in Central Alberta, the owner showed Mr. Brooks a coulee where 460 head of his cattle died. The pile of bones actually made a dam across the coulee. Within half a mile was another pile of bones, all that was left of 675 head. Stampede excitement is the cause of many buffalo bones found in the cliffs.

Study South Africa.

It is seldom that a Canadian who goes abroad to study returns to succeed and home permanently in the United States ever again has the opportunity of being invited back to be of the people which gave him birth, education and inspiration. Prof. R. A. Daly, of Harvard University, is a happy exception to the unfortunate rule.

Dr. Daly organized last summer an expedition to South Africa to undertake investigations into the origin of granite. He is at present directing the study of rock formations in the vicinity of Pretoria, in company with some Americans and two Dutch colleagues, and will later study other geological formations in the Union of South Africa and in the Rhodesian colonies.

Reginald Aldworth Daly was born in Nepanee in 1871 and after graduated in arts from Victoria University, Cobourg, in 1891, afterwards taking post-graduate work at Harvard, Heidelberg and Paris. Since 1907 he has been professor of physical geology at Massachusetts Institute of Technology. As director of the present expedition he has been active for nearly a year, six months being spent in preliminary organization.

Prof. Daly's brother, formerly chief geologist of the Transvaal Government and killed during the Boer War, returns to South Africa with the expedition.—Ex. Exchange.

A Natural Conclusion.

"What," asked the teacher, "is meant by 'divers diseases'?"

Dashful or ignorant, the little scholars clung tenaciously to the doctrine that little boys should be seen and not heard. "Come," said the teacher, "can't any of you tell me?"

Up shot the hand of Johnny: "Please, miss, to be said, 'water on the brain.'"

At regular intervals of as often as cosmopolites existence the literary world is subjected to certain drastic disillusioning shocks. In their own small way they cause a temporary figure but some pass on into a train real rest leaving for a time a trail of thought very hard to associate. We are now experiencing one of these sporadic and spasmodic disturbances. This time it is in the nature of a so called "thought-healing" doctrine; commonly and colloquially if not appropriately called cocaism.

Emile Coue is the cause of the whole trouble. His theory of auto-suggestion is most certainly very easily wrought. Many years ago when man emerged from the primitive state and began to use his brain power more and more, then and not until then did thought reign supreme. "The pen is mightier than the sword," let us paraphrase that and say "The thought is mightier than the sword." In his contained to be so strict alone and will keep on and on.....

Coue say, his method is not a new shape of "Christian Science." It is non-right common sense. His more. We have a subconscious mind and we have matured and conquered to do as we will, will cause more good and harm than all the wars ever waged. We can become perfect beings. Modern utopias will not be impossible. Sin will vanish and we will be without cares.

But is not this a little too big an order? Is not this an attempt to make old Coue ever take a course in hypnotism from a correspondence school? Incidentally His publicity agent has ever forgotten we have memories is either doesn't care. This man Coue has been arrested twice on a charge of practising medicine without any health-healing by thought doctor ever has before in this century and time will have to answer for the time himself tells us that his simple cures are not what the press agent is in the meantime he has collected a little reminder "Day by Day" is very way I'm getting better and better" and perhaps we can perform miracles. Only time will tell. Mystics have come before and vanished. Why not now?

"The Way of Revelation," by William Ernest. Published by the F.I. Godchild Co., Toronto.

A story of the period 1014-1019 as viewed in a charming manner after the manner of the incidents of the great war but people nowadays don't care for theatrics, but this one is very descriptive and clear cut, and formulate quite pleasant reading.

KITCHENER OFFICERS OUT ON "STILL" HUNT

Tipped Off to Search Farmer's Premises, and They Spent the Afternoon Searching, But Didn't Find a Single Drop—Officers Did Not Produce the Search Warrant Either

In chronicling this story of a liquor hunt which occurred near Kitchener, Ont., recently, the "Daily Record" certainly recorded some thrilling events of last afternoon in detail and in a spicy manner.

The Record opens by stating that, after the sudden bluster of an unexpected hurricane, four members of the provincial police, led by the license inspector, tore through the gate of Alex Ohlheiser's farm near Cressman's Bush in a high powered motor car on Saturday afternoon, jumped from the machine like four agents of avenging justice, plunged into the house like knights bold and brave in the olden days, frightened the housekeeper out of her senses and commenced and started a search for booze.

With a wealth of inspectorial acumen they descended into the cellar and sniffed. The sniff was the chief evidence obtainable by their manner. They went to the coal bin and probed. They went to the potato bin and poked. They prodded the carrots, they rustled over the turnips, they sniffed into the butter crocks. They were sniffing for secrets. They looked suspiciously at the preserves. They pulled things out of some dry-goods boxes and sniffed but no sniff of liquor came to their expectant and anticipating nostrils.

They looked at the inspectorial foot from the cellar to the main floors where the process of probing was continued. They scanned with suspicion toward the cushions. They tread inspectorially upon the rugs and some boy-detective fluid or wine or the wheat or the raisin might be lurking beneath. They mounted in the meantime to the second floor, opened the beds, felt the bed clothing, poked the mattresses, looked into every corner for a suspicious hole or crevice.

They looked daggers at the pictures of ancestors of the Ohlheiser family, rooted suspiciously behind the same pictures but they found not even so much as a calendar advertising a brewery or a winery.

"Disappointed they ascended into the attic and there brough irreverence to the cherished relics of the treasured past. They pulled the handbones of relegated knick-knacks against which Dame Fashion had long since turned a disdainful finger, from the shadowy nooks into which they had been deposited in the last decade and peeked into them. They sniffed over more and then again. They looked threateningly at the unoffending rafters and they inspected for the barn where they laid unfeeling hands upon the hay and the oats and the implements boxes. They drove pitchforks through many a bale of hay but with no results.

"Outside they came and peered suspiciously at the tracks of a motor truck. Certainly there was the truck-truck had been out the night before. They examined and cross examined N. F. Ohlheiser about the truck but learned that it had merely conveyed his son Alex to the hockey game at Kitchener on Friday night. The housekeeper had called Mr. Ohlheiser from the field and they upbraided her in true-inspectorial fashion for having been so indiscreet in their presence.

"In all this rush and turmoil of booze-sleuthing they never so much as showed a search warrant. They said they were police but produced no badge or sign to prove it.

When their bootless search for booking was done, the housekeeper offered to five them 25 cents if they could find any booze and they asked her to phone for it. They did but even for 10 cents extra they were unable to find even a drop.

Then they informed her commissioned Mr. Ohlheiser for not having at least enough in the house to provide himself and his family against sickness and the inspector advised Mr. Ohlheiser that he might obtain some upon application to a physician for a prescription.

With these few kindly remarks and a few comments from Mr. Ohlheiser had enemies (for the inspectors had been asked to search his place) they departed from the premises with the same bluster with which they arrived.

The whole affair started over a carload of coal by which Mr. Ohlheiser had unloaded at the German Mills station on Tuesday. The car had been taken from the car in several loads and because prudently the Ohlheiser's had locked the car after each load and trip suspicion was created among the few who had seen the deed performed.

Refused to Talk

The provincial police were asked by the Record this morning for a statement on the case but refused to make any.

PICTON VIEW OF BIG GAME

Jack Arnott and Wardhaugh Get the "Dope" as Leading Lights for Local Juniors

For the first time in many years says the Picton Gazette, the local Juniors took a fall out of the Belleville hockey organization Tuesday night in the opening fixture for the 1923 season. The game played in Belleville on rough and sloppy ice was a hard fought one, and considering the circumstances of the two fast teams, Belleville were without the services of Hagerman and Holloway, the two best men of last year as they have graduated into intermediate company, Jeffrey was also off the line up. He was one of the most promising juniors in the 1922 team, but ill health has suspended his hockey activities. Probably the two best men on the ice for Belleville Tuesday were Arnott and Wardhaugh. This, however, is said without in any way commending the latter former's lapses into "roughing it." As for Picton too much praise cannot be tendered the boys for the magnificent game put up under disadvantageous conditions. With good hard ice and the development of real team work there is no reason why they shouldn't come out on top in their O.H.A. Group. Hughes played an exceptionally fine game throughout and undoubtedly proved himself the best man on the ice. The forward line from Belleville and Fred Stafford playing a consistent good game with Boyle and Brooks rendering creditable assistance. A little more combination will come with practice and this trio should show up very effectively in future games. Earl Henry strengthened the defence through his untiring hydrokinking and in goal Jack Arnott kept his end up in good style. The subs, Karl Smith and Ronald Church completed one of the most promising junior hockey teams Picton has had for a decade.

NAPANEE SIX AT ARENA TO-NIGHT

Second Battle in Quinte League is Between Gunners and Napanee.

This evening at the Arena, the Napanee squad will meet the 34th Battery outfit in the second regular Bay of Quinte hockey match of the season, in which the locals have participated.

The boys from the town just east of us are reputed to be speed merchants, and in their recent game with Kingston, though beaten, made the Kingstonians travel at a break-neck pace to come out top of the heap. Some time ago the local Gunners met step into the Kingston Irish, and send them down the alley of defeat recently, but that the team that hangs the proverbial can on the locals will have to arise before day break to beat them.

There was a fairly good crowd at the last game, which was the first game too, by the way in this league, and to-night's attendance promises to outdo the other. The game starts at 8-16 p.m.

ROUGH TACTICS IN HOCKEY

Some Members of Local Intermediates Almost Ready For Wrecking Crew After Frontenac Onslaught

"Dok" Mallett is back in the city, and the St. Thomas theory, like the Einstein theory, has yet to be proved. As will be noticed, he took an active part in the Big Wonder game at the Limestone citadel on Wednesday evening. That this boy took no uncertain part in the "Battle of Frontenac," is quite visible, for last evening he was trying to borrow a crutch. That hard rubber disc, from as close a range as it does, certainly "stings" especially when it smites the sensitive portion of the knee. That's where Mallett got as his souvenir of the game. "Toots" Holway was decidedly struck on the nose by a stick in the hands of a Frontenac player, the players allege, and Al Swayze received a gash on the nose.

The Kingstonians roughed the game up and made it very "messy," as to speak, by resorting to every fistic exhibitions between players, and twice, the spectators, went over the boards on to the ice if you please. Funny too how most newspapers never mention this feature of the game. It spoil the name of the game they allege. As long as it is suppressed, the attention is akin to a cork fight pulled off in a back yard far from the reach of policeman's beat. The truth hurts but let's have it, as this criminal behaviour in sportsmen will only be stopped by numbers growing to know of its existence, and demanding redress. They stop this stuff in the pen, league so why kill amateurs, who play for the fun of playing. The man who struck Holway should have been arrested, if he deliberately struck him as the story goes, and should have been charged in the police court with common everyday assault.

TOUGH GAME AT KINGSTON

Kingston Sport Sheet States That Belleville Beat Frontenacs with Good Combination

Through their ability to play combination and break up their opponents' passes, Belleville defeated Kingston Frontenacs Wednesday night at the Harty Arena before a fair-sized crowd, by the score of 6-4. This is how the Kingston Standard sums up the result. The game was very exciting at times and the crowd in the rush end were kept yelling for nearly minutes at a stretch. On the whole it was good fast hockey, but the locals made several plays that could not be excused. Frontenacs had hard luck all the way through and many times they were right up on the nets and failed to register. Fred Brown was especially unlucky, and several times he skimmed through the whole team and something happened just when he passed the defence.

Frontenacs' failure to pass the puck, coupled with the absence of Lloyd Brown on the line-up, due to illness, had a great deal to do with the locals' defeat. Frontenacs had plenty of chances to pass but they have not the least idea about combination. With Lloyd Brown on the defence with Panet, it would have been a different story. McNeill is good for the Frontenacs played one of his poorest games, this evidently being one of his off nights. He has shown much much better advantage. Panet on the defence was good, but with more practice he should make a first-class element. Brouse was not the Brouse he used to be and the play was somewhat fast for him at times. Malone-Jr played a nice game on the wing, while Joe Smith worked like a demon all the way through and also made a good in fine style, completely puzzling his opponent. Freddy Brown was very unlucky and some are inclined to think that he did not play good hockey but he certainly did come the nearest to making figures. Joe Smith with only hard luck interfering, that any fan ever saw in a game. Lance and Watts were used as subs, and both turned in capable performances, the former being given little chance to display his wares. Eddie Watts went good while he was on.

To simmer the whole thing down, the Belleville team was too much for Frontenacs. They were a faster team in every angle and they broke combination with Frontenacs on the hard luck. Crooks in goal was no whirlwind and did not live up to advance notices sent on from Belleville. He was good but he was no wonder by any means. H. Holway did the best work of the evening, besides upsetting the shots at the defence. In this Holway, Belleville have a tower of strength and without him they certainly would be in hot water. He blocked, rushed and stick handled in true fashion, and appeared at every stage of the game as dangerous to Frontenacs. Weir and Goyer played a sensational hockey while Swayze as so did his big share, too.

The Play

In the first period Dr. Holway scored in twenty seconds from the face off after one rush had been made by the Belleville forwards and at the rink. Freddy Brown nearly notched one for Frontenacs but missed and Joe Smith dashing in 11 left and made the score 2-0 for Belleville. In 13 minutes, Bellringer made a beautiful rush from end of the rink to the other and scored on Crooks, bringing the puck down centre himself. Brown broke through again and missed and H. Holway drew his third trip to the box.

In the second period Hagerman found the nets in ten seconds and R. Mallen bulged the twine in three minutes. Joe Smith made a pretty play and landed the nets in seven minutes. Brouse was injured and taken from the ice.

The play went fast and furious and Frontenacs had Bellringer bottled up for over seven minutes. They check ed and checked and the crowd went wild, but it was of no use and Frontenacs went without a tally until Joe Smith finally took a plunge up the side and put one in the corner in 17 minutes. Frontenacs seemed to have things their own way but Hagerman soon spoiled things and 30 seconds later he took a pass from the corner and tallied.

In the third frame Swayze took a pass from the corner, one minute after the start had started making it 6-3 for Belleville. Joe Smith added one more in 10 minutes but there was no further scoring and the game ended with Belleville the victors.

TAKES RAP AT BASEBALL TACTICS

Jack Oulette is Let Down With a Bang by Sandy Lockington Esquire

Sandy Lockington, of the "most beautiful town in Ontario," as it is again, and now he is talking about baseball. He says that John Oulette, here today and away tomorrow, has finally found his way to Belleville. Oulette has pitched, for Lindsay for several years and while he was a valuable asset to his team he kept the management in hot water the most of the time by threatening to leave for some centre that was making him a flattering offer. Norman Brownscombe who played short stop for the Lindsay team accompanied Oulette to the Bay of Quinte Town and both men will wear Belleville uniforms this summer, provided, of course, that some other town has nothing better to offer. They reached Belleville on Sunday, December 31st and as the residence rule in the Central League is that they must reside in Ontario for Belleville management can expand their clients and tell the world that they are loud and vociferous advocates of "Amateur Sport."

Note—You know what the old man heard about Sandy, "Better Football Baseball", but wait till Galt hears about it.

YOUTH FROM WILDS STEPS INTO TOWN

Never Saw a Woman Until 15 Years Old and Now Motor Car Until Two Weeks Ago

Toronto, Jan. 3.—A strange story was told the Toronto police today by Jacques Richtor, a 19-year-old trapper, who beat his way from Athabaska Landing to Toronto in search of "Bright Lights" car, and is now in St. Michael's hospital recovering from semi-starvation and exposure. He is motherless, according to his story never saw a woman until he was 15 years old, and saw his first automobile two weeks ago on his trail to Toronto, when it helped along part of the way.

Richtor left a sick father two months ago, when he started out for Fort Wrath with a load of furs, about 700 miles away, but was held up by Mounted Police with 11 skins missing, including his team of 12 huskies.

A GOOD OLD CUSTOM

They Water Their Liquor in France

(By Canadian Press)

Paris, Jan. 5. — Preventing the wholesale and retail wine dealers from watering their wine is one of the new problems of the internal revenue department of the French Government.

Every drop of water introduced into wine means just so much less revenue to the government. So it is argued by the department of agriculture that the consumer of wine has a right to be pure product, if he wants it, and should be protected. Furthermore, the consumer is apt to put some water in his wine, and this is necessary if only for economy's sake, and it is evident that if he is sold diluted wine in the first place, the government will be defrauded just so much more.

Before the war, when wine was very cheap in France, dilution was unheard of. But during the past year, out of 10,472 samples of wine taken from suspected dealers, 4,236 samples were found to have been watered heavily, and 2,070 convictions for fraud were obtained.

...patron, effort over the...cheesemaker, is the ...ality of instances in which a few cheese, representing one or more vats, have been called out at or after the good fat, leaving fairly large...of inferior quality, and in a few cases ...rather badly affected.

...heartily everyone with any foresight must confess what a danger to the whole industry lurks in such a condition as this. It is a task one shall must be rigidly guarded against.

It requires no imagination to realize that the patron, the dealer, or even more important the consumer. If a few bad cheese are hidden under the mask of those of good quality. The good ones are passed without criticism as a matter of course while a few unexpected bad ones create a far reaching impression.

This is one of the reasons why I have always been in favor of a system of grading or inspection of all cheese made. It is especially important at this time, to my mind, becoming greater every years because the competition with other Dairy Countries is greater every years as they increase their production. I hope our dairymen realize the fact that it is entirely marked so that all possible misrepresentation to the final consumer will be eliminated.

There never was a time in the history of the Dairy Industry when there was a greater need of co-operation and boosting on the part of all concerned. This applies t both the manufacturing and selling of Dairy Products and if both is properly carried on we need have no fear of the future. In recalling some of the past season's difficulties there is one that seems deserving of special mention, it is of vital importance that in connection with the payment for the milk.

I refer to the preservative used in the sample bottles. In order for a preservative to be satisfactory it must dissolve quickly and be of sufficient strength to destroy and prevent germ life. Some of the tablets on the market for this purpose are very hard, are slow to dissolve and as a result a number of milk samples spoiled. It seems to me that factorymen would, be well advised in the purchase of the necessary preservatives to see that they have a guarantee of efficiency in both the above respects.

These are the principal points, which sited out from our collection of facts and figures seem to be of general momentary importance, and I feel confident that if an honest effort is made by all concerned we may look forward to the future with every encouragement.

In closing I must add again my expression of appreciation of the faithful services of the Instructors and of the fair manner in which they were received by the factorymen and patrons.

I trust these mutual relations may be long continued and free from all to the lack of competition that much in the way of success for the Ontario Creamery during at 1921 Dairy Industry of Eastern Ontario.

RESOLUTIONS

A resolution was unanimously adopted expressing appreciation of the hospitality extended the members by the citizens of Belleville; to the press for their reports of convention; to the speakers gnd to Hon. M. Doherty and his department for valuable assistance.

A lengthy and somewhat heated discussion took place relative to the grading of cheese. A resolution was finally adopted by the majority present that the grading of cheese take place on the shelves at the factory.

During the discussion Mr. Ruddick

Mr. Ness, Mr. Barr, Mr. T. J. Thompson, M.P., Mr. Hunt Hastings and others took part.

The convention adjourned until Mr. J. H. Scott, official grader at Toronto in his address stated that the whole that the better market for 1923, was fairly satisfactory. In his opinion there would a the future be in Canada a greater increase in the production of better and less cheese. In Eastern Ontario 2516 more cases of butter were graded which was an increase of about 40 per cent, over the previous year, but 1922 was an ideal season for butter making, yet the increase in 1923 was not as great as was in 1921. In Britain they know the quality of butter and it has been reported from there that our butter from Ontario is not of the quality that it should be. If we are making poor butter let the farmer know it. Sixty-nine per cent of the butter last year graded No. 3 and this is above the average. To some extent the farmer is to blame but not wholly. The workmanship of butter is good on the whole, attributable to defects which have been pointed out and remedied. This was commendable. Now we rarely get a loose moisture in butter. We must pay the farmer for the class of cream he supplies the creamery. Pay on grade was the proper way. To produce No. 1 cream is what is required and the farmers are asking how they can produce such cream. Pay the price for his labor and his product will be the very best possible to produce. It costs money to produce cream in the first class condition. Cream is often held too long at a too high temperature. Get away from 26 per cent. score No. 1 cream. Decomposition has taken place and this is the cause of poor cream not being up to the grade and it should be. A 29 flavor score butter will come out a second grade. Send a 29 per cent score butter to England and it will not be accepted as No. 1 butter. Work close to the grading station and remedy your defects. Better butter makers should visit the grading station and the information possible will be supplied.

AFTERNOON SESSION

When the convention resumed for the afternoon session with Mr. Newman still in the chair, Mr. J. A. Ruddick, Dominion Dairy Commissioner of Department of Agriculture, Ottawa delivered a very complete address, illustrated by means of charts, on "What is the matter with the Canadian Industry." The speaker referred to the lack of competition that Canada had experienced in the Cheese markets in the past, and said that New Zealand was rapidly supplanting our product in Great Britain. He referred at length to the place that Canadian products had in the markets of the United Kingdom, his visits there in connection with the matter, the facilities chang to assist for Dairy products, comparative prices in Canadian and New Zealand cheese, the management of factories with the opportunities for the development of capable managers and making, the advantage of large and small and the texture of our product. He referred to the fact that our cheese were too green when sold and stated that they should not be marketed as soon in order to save shrinkage. The British market was considered and discussed during his address and statistics were quoted at length. Cheese prices shown should take an interest in Butter as an increase in the supply of Canadian Butter was welcomed by the Trade. There was a tendency to put too much salt in the butter and the flavor was unsatisfactory. The conservative blame the Government officials for these defects but Mr. Ruddick said that there were no internal defects in the system. He explained the tabulated comparative prices, wholesale and retail of both butter and cheese and said that the quality of our butter was not deteriorating. He said further that the price of what is exported does not determine the price of the whole out put. The speaker very clearly explained the extent and character of the family petition of our markets and made suggestions as to how the quality may improved in order to make progress. He saw no dangers of pessimism but wanted to warn the dairymen of Canada of one danger ahead.

Mr. Ruddick's address contained such a fund of valuable information that The Intelligencer deems it wise to publish it in detail in a later issue when more space is available, for the benefit of the dairymen of this district. Altogether it was a most comprehensive and struck the right note all the way through.

Mr. Trudel of Montreal, who followed spoke strongly on co-operation and organization to improve dairy products and to obtain better prices. Co-operation in Quebec has improved the quality of cheese made. Grading of cheese has also improved the quality of the product. Mr. Trudel also spoke of butter and the necessity there was of improving it. The grading of cream would eleminate many defects which existed to-day. One of the chief defects was that cream was kept too long.

Mrs. McGowan who is connected with the department of Agriculture then spoke in regard to Women's Institute work, emphasizing the fact that the best of care should be taken in the handling of cream. It was even surprising how few understand the proper care of milking utensils. Mrs. Donaldson, for improvement and that foundation was the Women's Institute, as women have much to do with the care of milk and milking utensils on the farm.

FRANCE IS PUZZLED ABOUT HER LIQUOR

Now Seeking Ways to Meet The Difficulty

Should Divert Beverage to Other Uses

An Enormous Production Yearly—Still Trying to Suppress Absinthe

Paris, Jan. 3.—What France should do with her excess alcohol has become one of the burning industrial and national problems in the Republic. While France has no prohibition movement under way, she is being assailed by the economic aspect of an excess production of wine, especially alcohol.

A senate commission reported recently on the problem. It recommended on prohibition in the United States; pointed out that France's liquor and wine exports had been reduced by such prohibition, and then cited the flat statement that there could be no question as to the desirability in France of reducing the annual consumption of alcohol, that alcohol to-day was a national danger to the republic.

In the ways to meet the economic difficulties presented by the actual situation, the commission insisted that the surplus production of alcohol be used nationally as a fuel by mixing it with benzine, gasoline and other like products in proportions ranging from ten per cent. up.

It is proposed to run automobiles, locomotives and factories with this mixture, and at the same time save part of the money now spent abroad for coal and other oil fuels. Many experiments have been made, and large prices offered, for the best mixture.

The principal factors in the alcohol problem are that there is possibly a smaller consumption of alcohol in drinking because of increased prices and that France produces far more alcohol than she can profitably consume. It is argued that the human consumption of alcohol may be further reduced by better uses for the product are found.

However, it is pointed out that nearly three-fourths of France's population gains its livelihood, directly or indirectly, through alcohol, which people are engaged in agriculture or in commerce.

France, the report shows, is now producing an average of 1 billion gallons of wines and alcohol yearly, out of which is obtained an annual internal revenue of about 4 billion francs, with export values of upwards of half a billion frahes yearly.

The commission reached the conclusion that one way to reduce drinking would be to increase the taxes on wines and liquors. France has been drinking more and more, for a hundred years, because beverages were so cheap. Fifty years ago the daily per capita consumption was about one and quarts, to-day it is it is three quarts.

Ottawa, Ont. Jan. 6.—If a man is the father of eight children and does not sufficiently to keep his family without assistance from local charitable organizations, should he be removed from the vicinity of his family so that he shall not father more paupers? He should, so his wife says.

This and all problems connected the members of the Children's Aid Society here recently, in the case of Mrs. Ottawa family is dire poverty for years, who have eight children, and whose father has not supported them without charitable aid. The mother of the family had appealed to the local Children's Aid Society for aid. and requested that, instead of the Society taking away her children, to take away her husband.

It was decided, as there is no law governing the removal of a frisky father, to refer the case to the Juvenile Court.

cheese buying business twenty-one years ago. It was a very great pleasure to him to return and note on every side the many evidences of improvement. He spoke of the specialization and friendships he had formed here and referred in a humorous way to the strenuous competition on the Belleville Cheese Board. It was his opinion that the very best cheese in the Dominion was produced in the Belleville district. It was his business to travel from east to west and he was thoroughly familiar with dairy production in all parts of Canada.

Mr. Ernest J. Smith, Manager of the White Packing Co., of Brockville, and a director of the Brockville Board of Trade was the next speaker. He emphasized the importance of the "Get-do-gether" spirit and humorously illustrated this by his previous opinion of Mr. Robertson. Before he had known Mr. Robertson well he had believed that gentleman to be capable of almost anything in the way of reprehensible business conduct, but now that he had come to meet him face to face he found that he was not only an exceedingly capable business man but thoroughly honorable in every respect. Mr. Smith congratulated Belleville on the appointment of so fine an organization as the Belleville Chamber of Commerce and referred in an appreciative way to the characters that he saw in districts that in the recent months, had been coming our way.

Mr. Harold H. Scott of the Ontario Department of Agriculture, who acts as official grader of butter and cream, followed in a few remarks. He also complimented Mr. Robertson on his energy and efficiency as creamery Manager. He said that there was not only efficient for himself but for the producer of cream as well. He thought also that Mr. Mrs. Robertson should take another step in advance and pay for cream according to quality. Wired to Mr. Scott's remarks there is a place where only cheese was produced, but the last season the twenty-five creameries that are scattered over the Eastern part of the Province had produced over twelve million pounds of butter.

Mr. Wm. Newman, proprietor of the Lorneville Creamery, was next introduced and Mr. Newman, as a manufacturer of gilt-edge goods and somewhat of an idealist in his profession. Mr. Newman said that his creamery was located at a country four-corners where they did not enjoy the headiness of city life, but he considered that the residents of cities did not monopolize all the advantages. In the country they could enjoy the quiet of home life and they had the opportunity of meeting with their friends. His philosophy of life was to trust all men. Every man has his faults as well as his virtues. If a man fell down it was his duty to assist him to rise again. The Rotary and Gyro Clubs were doing a work that the church had neglected. In the country districts the church was the only institution that did the work He believed that if a man got drunk he should not be at once expelled from the church, but that every effort should be made to induce him to get into the better way. These men were not worse than his self-righteous, but stronger temptations to fight. He closed by wishing the Belleville Chamber of Commerce every success.

Mr. Geo. A. Gillespie, ex-M.P.P. Peterboro', President of the Peterboro Canoe Co., Trent Mills Co., and several associated organizations, followed. He was greatly pleased to be present at this Dairymen's Convention. That was a feature that the Peterborough Chamber of Commerce lacked and when he returned home he would strongly recommend its adoption in the Lift-Lock City. He was a buyer of cheese on the Belleville Board and this Board had the reputation of being the most keenly contested in Ontario. He too emphasized the value of cooperation and stated that the things that we do for nothing are the things that count.

To begin aright, we wish each and every citizen a happy and prosperous New Year and believe it can be made the best of 1923 that ever had if, as citizens, we will boost and not knock. For ourselves, we are looking forward to better business by improving, as far as possible, our old and well-known lines of candy, introducing, also from time to time, new ones as we can work them in.

We thank all for the many favors and trade that has shown us in the past year and trust, that we will merit a continuance of the same throughout the ensuing year.

SKINNING AN ANIMAL

How to Get the Best Out of a Hide.

Hints on Skinning Cattle, Sheep and Hogs—Keep the Knife Sharp—Avoid Wrinkling — Use Carefully About the Legs.

[Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto]

During the autumn season, considerable farm butchering is done, and in the operation many good hides are spoiled in the skinning. To do a good job, carefully select a clean, level spot in the shelter of a tree or in a building if the floor is good. A block and tackle or other hoist and equipment should be rigged in a convenient position.

Skin While Carcass Is Warm.

The animal should be clean; if not it will be difficult to keep the hide and carcass in proper condition. The skinning should start immediately the animal is dead, and the more quickly it is done while the animal is warm the more easily the hide will come off. Make sure that the knife is sharp. After skinning and sticking the animal it should be suspended for facilitating bleeding. This is the suspended position the operator should begin skinning the fore shanks and face. When skinning over the face leave the flesh on the hide. The presence of meat on the hide is of no detection. The head is removed from the neck at the atlas joint, or end of the spinal column. The horns should not be removed from the skull. With the head out of the way the animal should be completely lowered and placed breast up, being held in position by a stick which should be between brisket and flank. The legs should then be skinned out and the feet removed.

Skinning of Wrinkles.

After removing the feet the hide should be ripped down the belly from the stickhole to the tail. The skin should then be skinned by working forward to the brisket and then back to the inside of the hind leg, close to the tail. The free hand can be used to lift awy, pulling outward and forward against the knife. The skin should be taken to prevent the formation of wrinkles under the hide as it is being removed. The hide should be skinned off down the inside of the bone, leaving it attached at the thighs and shoulders. Change the grip over to the other side of the brisket and skin the other side in the same manner. Take Carefully About the Legs.

For the cut at the front legs start in the centre, cutting to pass at and forward at the brisket and in advance of the front legs, cut back to the centre of the fore leg and body and on down the inside of leg to meet the cut made when skinning the side. In skinning the hind legs start at the centre line about six inches from the tail and split the skin in straight line to the hock. Skin over the rump and thighs. At this stage it is best to insert a gambrel above the hock joints and raise the carcass so that the shoulder will still rest on the floor. Split the skin on the underside of the tail and skin out the tail bone to the end.

Skin Away From Tail and Legs.

Skin the hide carefully away from the base of the tail and strip from the legs and back, taking the fat or the blunt instrument such as a knife handle, skinning stone or the back of a steaver. Be careful and do not cut the hide, since each cut reduces the value. When skinned down to the shoulders the carcass is hoisted clear of the floor and the skinning completed down over the neck. Split the ears by cutting lengthwise and fold the hide flesh side in. Tie for shipment.—Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.

Cheap Ice For the Farmer.

Farmers who have not already done so should prepare to lay by a store of ice for cooling milk and for house hold use next summer. The cost of harvesting and storing ice is low when compared with the saving effected. Ordinarily, it is safe to harvest two tons of ice for each acre in the herd. This will allow for melting and leave enough for family needs. Where cream only is sold, about one-third of that quantity will be needed.

Did you ever try co-operation in ice harvesting? It works like a charm. Get one or two of your neighbors to go into such a scheme. One pond or stream and one set of tools will answer for all. The equipment necessary for harvesting and storing ice consists simply of saws, tongs, and iron bars for pushing the blocks of ice around.

A rough board enclosure ten feet square and eight high will hold more sufficient ice to provide fifty pounds per day for 180 days after storing and for a reasonable amount of wastage. An important fact to be remembered is that the smaller the quantity of ice stored the larger is the proportion of waste. The bottom of the enclosure should be covered with a foot of sawdust, and a foot of space left between the boards and the ice, which should also be filled with sawdust. The ice should be similarly covered. The drier the sawdust the better. If the soil beneath the enclosure is impervious clay, a layer of gravel under the sawdust is advisable.

If sawdust is not obtainable, planer mill shavings will serve. If neither is to be had, a foot of peat moss bay or any wild hay will answer. The roughest kind of a shed that will resist the weather is all that is required.

Longevity of Birds.

The Chief of the Biological Bureau in the United States is able to give the ages to which some birds have lived. The following are his figures: Thrush, 15 to 25 years; swallow, 8; canary, 23; cardinal, 15; robin, 20; magpie, 31; large owls, 68; golden eagle, 16; white pelican, 41; cormorant, 32; large blue heron, 60; swan, 23; mallard, 22, muscovy ducks, 11 to 23; oyster-catcher, 30; herring gull, 44; and wandering albatross, 64 years.

RUPTURE IN THE FOAL

How to Deal With Umbilical Scrotal Hernias.

How Rupture Is Caused—Umbilical Hernia Not Usually Serious—Treatment of Scrotal Hernia Essentially a Surgical Operation.

[Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto]

The term Hernia, or Rupture, is applied to designate a condition consisting of the protrusion of a portion of the intestine or, bowel from the abdominal cavity through a normal or abnormal aperture of the abdominal wall, which protrusion shows its presence by a more or less definite tumor, with the skin remaining intact as a covering or enclosing sac.

Umbilical Hernia.

In the case of Umbilical Hernia or rupture at the navel, the condition is generally apparent within a few weeks after birth. It consists of the protrusion of a portion of the bowel through the navel opening in the floor of the belly, the skin remaining intact, consequently the tumor caused by the presence becomes noticeable by the appearance of a round soft lump, or tumor in the mass. A veterinarian should doubt exist as to whether the condition is actually a rupture, the true nature can be readily determined by placing the animal in a dorsal recumbency and manipulating the lump with the hand. It will be found that the bowel can be returned to the abdomen, leaving a somewhat loose pouch of skin, and the aperture by which the bowel escaped may be felt as an oblong or ring like opening in the abdominal wall, the size of other swelling. As soon, however, as the foal is allowed to regain its feet the bowel will again protrude into the sac of skin and the lump or tumor will appear as before the removal. The size of the rupture varies from that which will admit a clenched fist.

Treatment.—As a rule, rupture at the navel is not considered a serious condition, except when of large size. Those of small size tend to disappear in a large number of cases with growth and development of the animal. Recovery can be assisted by placing a truss or bandage over the parts. The foal should first be placed on its back, and the bowel returned or manipulated with the hand to return the protruding bowel to the abdomen. This done, the bowel retained in position again escaping, a pad or small cushion be placed over the navel opening and retained in position by a truss or supporting bandage, such as a leather band or canvas girth encircling the body. Sufficient pressure should be prevented from slipping forward or backward by means of a breast band and breech band. The only objection to the use of a truss or bandage is, that it may chafe the skin if not properly applied. In the case of small ruptures, a good blister applied to the skin around the navel has a good effect, as the swelling which it causes helps to close the opening and retain the bowel from again escaping.

If the foal reaches the age of four or five months without showing any improvement, and the rupture shows a inclarge instead of decrease, it may require an operation to overcome it. The most common methods of operating is by means of wooden clamps, skewers, and ligatures. In applying these, the bowel must be returned to its back, and care taken to have the several contents of the rupture not returned to the abdomen. The skin covering the parts around should then be grasped by the hand and drawn out as far as possible from the body, and the clamp or ligature fixed tightly and securely over the skin, close up against the navel ring or opening. The clamps or ligatures are then allowed to remain in position until they slough and fall off together with the enclosed skin and tissues.

Scrotal Hernia In Colts.

Scrotal Hernia, or rupture at the scrotum, affects male animals only, and may be present at the time of birth, or appear within a few weeks thereafter. This form of rupture consists of the protrusion of a portion of the intestine, through the inguinal or back together with the testicles. Its presence is noticed by the enlargement or size of the scrotum.

Treatment.—The treatment of Scrotal Hernia in ordinary colts consists essentially of a surgical operation, the method usually followed being castrating by what is known as the covered operation, which should be undertaken only by a veterinarian surgeon. As a rule colts intended for work purposes, which are subject to this form of rupture, should be operated on early in life, as the risk attending the operation is much over one year old, as the tendency of the scrotal tissues decrease with age, while, in the case of foals and yearlings, it is generally of a comparatively successful.

In the case of pure-bred colts, valuable for breeding purposes, surgical interference is warranted only when the hernia is a source of danger to the animal, in such cases the object is to allow nature to take its course in the hope that with growth and development of the animal the hernia will become reduced.—Dr. C. D. McGilvray, Provincial Vet. College, Guelph.

Ants Flee Before Tartaric Barrage.

A small amount of moistened tartar emetic and powdered sugar in equal parts will drive ants away from about their haunts. The mixture should not be thrown out when no longer required, but should be set aside for another emergency. Add to this, water and the mixture will be used as before. Care should be taken to keep it out of the reach of little children.

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor of The Intelligencer,

Dear Sir: I happened to drop in to the local rink last night for a skate and I was very much surprised to hear boys, the largest percentage under 21 years of age, using language that was absolutely obscene and filthy.

My line of business takes me all over Ontario, so that I have the opportunity of seeing how boys behave in other towns and cities.

It will be quite a shock to the Belleville people if any that in all my travelling experience I have not yet heard such language used by boys than likely the parents of these boys are unaware of these facts and they hardly can be blamed for such conditions, but they should certainly try and find out what kind of company their boys keep. That is the fundamental thing that the parents should look after. They will find that in many cases their boys are associating with older boys that care for nothing that is decent and nearly always the younger boy copies the older boy's example.

Hoping that this matter will be brought to the attention of others as will endeavour to put it right, I remain,

Yrartelier,

Editors Note: Unfortunately the statements set forth in the above letter are only too true and it is indeed deplorable that such conditions are prevalent in our City.

There must be something radically wrong in the home training these days and steps should be taken to eradicate the evil. Undoubtedly, such local conditions that undoubtedly create deep impressions upon the casual observer passing through town and more particularly if such persons intend to locate here with a growing family of their own.

FRANCE TO MAKE GERMANY PAY

Paris, Jan. 5.—France, free to handle the reparations question according to her own formula, turned today to the task of making Germany pay. The French Government apparently has the support of Belgium. It is not certain of Italy's aid. Premier Poincare intends to have a talk with Mr. Bonar Law prior to the British Ministers' departure for London earlier in the day. It was understood, however, that the Lausanne conference would be the subject of conversation.

UNITED STATES MAY CALL CONFERENCE

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, Jan. 5.—The Berlin correspondent of the central news, says that he learns from a well informed source that "that in accordance with the requests made by the British in the Ruhr, the United States Government intends to call an international conference in Washington next week to consider the reparations deadlock."

The British Foreign Office this after noon denied that "any such call by United States to call an international conference on reparations, as reported by Central News correspondent at Washington, Jan. 5.—Advices that the United States Government, acting on the request of Great Britain, would call an international conference for the consideration of the reparations question, met with a positive and authoritative statement today from the officials of the State Department, that "there is truth to it."

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Paris, Jan. 5.—The British are making informally through their embassy in Washington as to what the United States attitude will be now that England and France have definitely disagreed. The British delegation this morning saw a ray of hope in the reports that President Harding might intervene in reparations issue.

MAKE YOUR NITROGEN

Growing Legume Crops Will Help You Do It.

Clovers, Peas and Vetches Store Up Nitrogen From the Air—Good Bacteria Will Work for Everyone—Determining the Need of Chemical Fertilizers.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

Nitrogen costs money when purchased through the medium of the chemical fertilizer dealer, usually about twenty cents a pound. Some of our farmers are spending from ten to forty dollars per acre a year for nitrogen to increase crop production With five million pounds of nitrogen floating as a gas over every acre of land south Ontario farmers may be said to be justified. That nitrogen is highly valuable as a plant food is appreciated by comparatively few of our farmers. If those who do appreciate its value are willing to pay twenty cents a pound for it, and those are the men working on small areas with intensive culture crops, why not those larger acre farmers who have a few billion pounds of nitrogen floating above their farms walk up and gaw at least a small quantity into the soil of their fields?

The Fertilizing Value of Legumes.

Legume plants such as the clovers and peas and vetches, together with the bacteria that are parasitic on the roots of this class of plants, form a link between the nitrogen of the air and the plant food nitrogen of the soil. This link is an implement always available to the farmer. A ton of alfalfa or clover or vetch hay may contain as much as fifty pounds of nitrogen. The roots that live with the alfalfa plants covering an acre may contain as much as three hundred pounds of nitrogen. The roots of the red clover and peas which might cover an acre may contain as much as one hundred and fifty pounds. The roots from wheat, corn or oat plants cover an acre may contain twenty-five pounds of nitrogen.

The Bacteria Work for Nothing.

The point is a great quantity of nitrogen is collected by the bacteria which alone work on the clovers, peas, vetches and other legume plants. With one million dollars worth of nitrogen over every acre of land, whether it not be good policy to make sufficient use of legume crops and their parasitic soil bacteria to at least provide the needs of the farm in crop production. The nitrogen accumulated by growing legume crops is taken largely from the air, while the quantity thus accumulated by corn, oats or wheat crops is gathered from the soil.

All Gain and No Loss.

There is no loss of nitrogen in growing legumes but considerable gain. There is a distinct loss with all other classes of farm crops. Plan to use clovers, peas and vetches and better tap the fertility supply now resting above your land for future use in the soil of your fields. If you can figure out a rotation to suit your own special needs and have legume crop growing two years out of four on the farm, you will have little worry about the nitrogen supply.—L. Stevenson, Secretary Department of Agriculture, Toronto.

The Salon Societs Nationals des Beaux Arts, in Paris, opened in the Grand Palais on April 4, according to the Christian Science Monitor. This reaches a very good average in quality. The Grand Prix, however, is prohibited, a feature of the exhibition being the invitation of both British and American works of art on view. Mrs. Jerry Hunter, of Boston, the Canadian artist, who painted a number of studies of the devastated area in the Canadian region of the Great War, has a picture of the market of Ypres, the market place left amidst the ruins caused by the war. This picture will eventually be exhibited in Canada.

Wealth Vanishing In Smoke.

Every year the United States, involving some 12,500,000 acres of timber land, cost the United States $20,000,000.

The Impromptu Comma.

During an examination in school the inspector began to question the pupils on punctuation, when one saucy, a pompous individual, interrupted with the remark, "It is foolish to bother about commas and such-like." The inspector flushed angrily, and turning to one of the boys, he made him write on the blackboard, "Stop, inspector, and listen." The inspector is a fool. Now," he continued, "put a comma after Stop-inspector, and another after inspector." Slowly the boy did so, and the class went into fits of laughter.

Dairymens Convention

(From Saturday's Daily)

In the world," opined Mr. Marshall, "and requires more ability, learning and education than any other calling in the world. Cows and calves will be come things of joy and beauty forever," if their owners have been scientifically strained in the handling of them into advanced and their owners will toll fee as many in the past have felt that they were "condemned" to farm life by accident of birth, and who never realized, or grew to understand what opportunities farming present.

Old time teachers who recommended High Schools and professions to each and every child attending rural schools, were condemned for so doing, as such doctrine drove children to the cities. Every school in Denmark is an agricultural school, and no wonder then, that that country leads the world in dairying.

In closing, the speaker once more emphasized the fact that for the past fifteen years he has been preaching his idea of consecrated agriculture, which is scientific training, and thus acquiring knowledge, which it would take more than a life time to learn by experience for by receiving instruction from a man who known it is possible to build up a system of agriculture, which the mails pill be more successful and more highly efficient, and above all else, develop a race of contented and satisfied farmers.

Mr. George A. Putman, Director of Dairying, Toronto, in a short address told of the development of the manufacture of dairying products. While there had been a decrease in the out put of cheese during the past year by 9½ per cent, in Ontario, yet there had been an increase in the out put of butter of 12%. During the year, 90,500,000 pounds of cheese were made, and sold at 19 at 16 cents per pound, netted $14, 922,000. 51,900,000 pounds of butter were made, and sold at 34 cents per pound, which netted $17,510,000. The decrease in the output of cheese was explained by the increased use of milk in the manufacture of canned and condensed milk goods in Ontario. Methods of manufacture in Ontario are greatly improved, but there is yet room for improvement in the raw material. The improvement in the latter, he contended, it was felt, by the hearty co-operation of the women folk of the Province.

An interesting exhibit of various kinds of cheese were on exhibit. No less than 34 classes of cheese were found to be offered for sale in one Toronto store recently, 20 of which varieties were imported from other countries if you please, one skim milk cheese from Holland retiling at 70 cts per pound.

A keener interest will have to be taken in this industry, and the both Governments will do their part. The Provincial dairy school with its staff of proficient instructors, was explained, the work of the test checker in the factories, as well as the cheese graders, the methods of transportation, inspection, etc., was also explained. Every assistance would be rendered anxious to put the whole year, and it is advisable for the farmers to study in groups. The work already accomplished by the Farmer's Institutes was also mentioned, by which all women and girls are reached by helpful institutes. In Ontario last year, 104,516 persons sent mail to the factory.

Mr. H. E. Dean, M.L.A., who has always been a practical dairyman, also spoke on the same subject. Many of either Mayor Hanna or Mayor-elect Bennett should have put in an appearance at the meeting, for and given the slogan that "Belleville, as advertised on the welcome banner, was "Canada's Greatest City."

Belleville possessed the best market, with the prices for the farmer of any centre in the province. Yet this ought to believed, and boasted many church suiters as well as many fine educational institutions. Many of the cities' leading men were born on the farm, so Mr. Denyes held, and he felt that the business men of the town should be at the meeting, where they could "clean up" with their farm brothers and practice hearty co-operation.

The short University courses held at Toronto University in the interests of Agriculture, were highly commended and recommended, and described as being splendid mediums for obtaining co-operation, and nurturing the spirit together spirit, which should exist between urban and suburban citizens.

The history of dairying here from the earliest days of the dark ages, up until the present chain of cheese factories, was concisely explained by the speaker, who also commented the various stages of the perfection of the dairying industry. This was previous to the Canadian Pacific railway and the shift grain grown, owing to the wheat having made the raising of wheat very unprofitable. Following the raising of this ere came the live stock era, which was the real life beginning of the dairy industry.

Secretary H. A. Thompson read the annual report during the meeting reporting the progress, and up to date of the industry in Eastern Ontario, where he explained that the industry is responsible for the majority of the world, it was only by our continued opportunities of improvement that we could successfully compete.

The secretary felt that every cheese factory should have a curing room where new cheese could at least be stored for ten days, as pressed curd is not cheese, and in order to satisfy expert customers, it should not be shipped too early, if the customers are to be pleased and satisfied. Cheese, if unpressed out, is much cheaper than pressed, and twice as nourishing.

Dairymen, it was felt, are not receiving sufficient remuneration for their work and efforts, and many improvements may yet be witnessed, and accomplished.

Expressions of gratitude were expressed to Hon. Mr. Mulholland and Mr. Manning Doherty, in their cooperative efforts to bring about the creation in the manufacturers of Canada at least the manufacturers of Canada at least the manufacturers of Canada at least

THE FAMILY ALBUM

Loose as he look and somewhat lined
Is not scarred;
Worried with a world of outraged
Shining
His eyes fair, pages very sadly starred
By evil of casuistes, careless things;
Sighs
He upon the shell in solemn state,
Shall upon, praying guest-books round and Inhale
The thrillings tale in words akin to these:

"That is Uncle Theodore," who died
Long ago,
And that's an old school friend of Maud's—a Winter's girl, you know—
And that's my cousin, Geraldine, and that's the man she wed;
And that's Grandma Perkins who, understand, is dead,
And there's the Brigade' baby boy and that's a friend of Will's,
Who was a year somewhere out in South Alberta hills."

Inconsequential hair-oiled youths and frills
Gambling in conciousness of classic charms,
The gauzy old ladies wearing curls
The while the story relies on and on:

"This is Uncle Hiram's stepson's cousin Flora Jane,
This is Martha Jones, who subsequently became
That one's little Mary, Abner Martin's second child.
This is Theodore Talbot—doesn't he look awful wild!
There is Brother Bowles, who held revival in the village
Eighteen eighty-two; and that's—well, that's myself, my dear!"

I swear no one is ever put to proof
By any plan of trial-and-error test
To spell that 'which' for his own behoof
The family album offered to a guest;
The family album, shown to people whom
He needs one and never wants to see.

NEW METHODS OF COOKING

The Brine Bath is Being Used Now in Cooking Vegetables

It has long been thought that all possible methods of cooking had been discovered, but a thing comes little blastings with a discovery of what remarkable things can be done by the use of a brine bath in preparing vegetating dishes. In a recent number of Physical Culture Mr. Hastings describes how he made his first very somewhat surprising things can be done with salt:

"I was experimenting upon the effect of temperatures in cooking. Action of different sorts. I used the upper part of a double boiler would maintain a temperature of only about 190 to 215 degrees. The cooking process which temperature is decidedly slower than at the boiling temperature of 212 degrees, and the double boiler has a very distinct advantage in that food therein will not stick and burn as it will in a pot placed directly on the fire.

"So I said to myself, 'This double boiler would be a good thing if it would boil.' In order to bring it to boiling temperature obviously the liquid in the lower section would be better than 212 degrees. I considered using oil in the lower pot, and then the second thought was that brine would maintain a temperature higher than that of boiling water. So I took a pint of salt, a five-cent sack of salt and dumped the salt into the lower pot of my double boiler. All the salt did not dissolve, some of it remained in the bottom of the pot, which meant that the brine was a saturated solution. Water would evaporate from time to time as it boiled away, and as long as there was still some salt undissolved in the pot I added water on top of it, the solution would be saturated and maintain a uniform temperature of 215 degrees. It was boiling.

"I placed a thermometer into this boiling brine and found that the temperature was 227 degrees and that it stayed there. So I proceeded to fill the upper pot and found that—it would boil slowly but that whatever was put into the pot would not burn on the bottom. Thus I discovered or invented the brine bath cooking.

"Among the various things cooked in this device were potatoes. There was no particular advantage in cooking them this way, as they do not stick and burn very readily in ordinary pot. Then, as an experiment I popped a potato into the lower pot. It was a good sound potato and it boiled the jacket on. Still I did not expect to eat it—because, while I use salt on potatoes, I had no idea that it would care for potatoes flavored with saturated brine.

"The potato remained in the brine for about 40 minutes. I then fished it out and found it encrusted with salt. I threw a little water on it to wash the salt off, and discovered that the potato had a peculiarly shrunken and shrivelled appearance. I broke it open and discovered four more interesting facts. First, it was the most mealy boiled potato I ever saw; second, it had a layer of golden brown fried just beneath the skin; third, the skin did not separate in a paper layer as does the skin of a boiled potato, but adhered closely to the meat; fourth, upon tasting the potato I found it not to be soaked, but gently and properly salted very much to my liking. All in all, the potato was a surprise to me and about the finest cooked potato imaginable.

"The potato boiled in brine is really a baked potato, as it is cooked at a temperature 15 degrees above the boiling point of water, and the skin is the portion of the original water content of the potato to evaporate, or in this case, dissolve. The skin is the thin film of steam which is absorbed by the brine. The great affinity of brine for water is another effect of evaporating water from the potato is what gives the mealiness. Conversely, potatoes allowed to stand in the water they are boiled in absorb extra water and become soggy. Old potatoes are mealier than new ones, for the former lose some of their moisture in storage.

"The remarkable fact about the brine-cooked potato is its very slight absorption of salt. The reason is that the potato in the brine bath is generating steam which is passing out, exerting a continuous pressure which prevents the brine from entering. However, this only holds for potatoes with jackets on.

"The time required for brine cooking is about the same as for boiling in water, but the potato is more thoroughly cooked because of the higher temperature. Preferably use potatoes of average size—say those not smaller than hen's eggs nor larger than goose eggs. Naturally you will get the best results if those cooked at one time are

TELTALE SYMPTOMS OF WOMAN'S ILLS

Every woman who suffers from backache, headaches, dragging-down pains, nervousness, irregularities, displacements, irritability, or despondency should recognize in such symptoms a warning of derangement of her system which should have attention before some more serious ailment develops. These conditions are often evidenced by a sallow complexion, dark circles under the eyes, lassitude and loss of energy. For nearly fifty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been pre-eminently successful in relieving such conditions, and it is now recognized everywhere as the standard remedy for woman's ills.

nearly uniform in size. Small potatoes are likely to become soggy in the brine, large ones will not become salty enough in the interior, while the surface near the skins will become unpalatably salty. This uneven salting may be offset by mixing the skin with the middle as one eats them.

"There are other uses to which the principle of the brine bath may be applied. As far as cooking foods in actual brine is concerned, potatoes are the only food to which this giver particularly superior results. Sweet potatoes may also be cooked in this fashion. They will be about on a par with boiled potatoes in flavor and mealiness, but without the mealiness of the Irish potato. Some other tough-skinned boiled vegetables may be cooked in the brine, such as turnips and parsnips—but the method is distinctly a potato cooking process."

If you want to take care of that bad hang on cough and do it in a few hours, better get one ounce of Parmint (double strength) and mix a half pint as home.

You can do this in two minutes by adding a little sugar and enough water to fill a half pint bottle.

You'll travel the world over before you get a medicine that will act so surely and quickly on the mucous membrane of the lose and throat. It halts the inflammation, the tickling sensation stops with the first spoonful, the heavy breathing and choked clean membrane, free from irritation and mucus follows.

That Body of Yours

MOUTH BREATHING

At an athletic meet in England some years ago, I noticed one of the competitors in the foot race wearing ex apparatus on his nose that arroused my interest.

The athlete explained at at an apparatus to keep his nostrils widely dilated during the race so that he could get more air, instead of partly having to breath through his mouth. He could have easily secured sufficient air at the critical moment by breathing through his mouth, but he did not wish to do so for even that brief time.

Well? Well, past experience had taught him that breathing through the mouth on a dirt track was many other competitors meant that considerable, and would handicap him in the race. Further he moisture that the lungs demand from incoming air would have to come to the front instead of from the proper place, the lining of the nose.

Mouth breathers invariably have irritable throats and the explanation is, as you see, very simple.

The nose is given the name most first filter through the little fine hairs at the opening of each nostril. Then as the air passes through the moist nose lining there moisture is sufficiently to satisfy the lungs.

The moisture has at one time been fine tear drops which have come across the eyeball from a gland on outer side of the eye to a canal on inner side of eyeball leading into the nose.

Many people suffer with a slight cold in the head all the time and unconsciously breathe through the mouth. While in some instances the obstruction should be removed nevertheless more frequently the habit of closing the mouth and breathing through the nose can be established with very little effort.

LINKED LIVES

By D. Kinmount Roy

The Squire sat back in his chair, regarding his visitor with a puzzled look, but silent amusement he orally counteto one of keen scrutiny.

"Might I ask," he said slowly, "what is the bone of contention between you and MacAlpin?"

"That will keep," Kinkman said short-ly, with an ugly glint in his eyes, and a tightening of the muscles, like an animal about to spring. "I followed him here to-day to warn you against his other instant he would have been a limp heap, when my pistol missed fire. He heard the click of the gun as we sharp back and beat the horse like a madman, careless of life."

"But how did you not fire again?" the Squire said, leaning forward with a look of savage longing in his eyes.

"I dare not! I dare not risk another miss!' and he almost whimpered in the bitterness of his disappointment. "He would have strangled me—strangled me with his naked hands. Why in Heaven's name has he dared to make him so strong and fearless?" and Kinkman, in spite of himself, trembled under the unconscious power of his hate.

"Well, whether he is under the special protection of the devil or not, he is by no means proof against lead, and a well-aimed bullet is sufficient at any time—"

"Yes, yes,' Kinkman agreed, with the utmost agitation. 'Why did I not risk it? I ought to have risked it!' and he threw out his weapon, and examined the unused charge with anxious care. The hungry look in the man's eyes did not escape his employer, since as he' was with him, man to man.

The Squire, under these circumstances, thought it best to be prepared for contingencies, and opening a drawer near him, under pretence of looking for something, he slipped a brace of pistols into his pocket. It was hardly done, for all the caution it did not escape the notice of his astute companion.

"Well, what do you mean to do?" Hardcastle asked, with a business-like air.

"What do I mean to do?' Kinkman echoed, with a touch of insolence, which startled the Squire somewhat; for Hardcastle fostered himself that he could thoroughly know their plans, and although they served him, were immensely beneath him. He could not long for what he wanted in the coin of the realm; that done, he considered his obligations ended, and was, least of all, such a creature as Kinkman, had any right to presume.

"What am I going to do?' Kinkman repeated. 'Well, now that you have asked me, I'll tell you! I am going to receive a good round sum of money, then the loan of a horse from your stables—you can say I stole the beast if you like—that little business settled, I will leave the master of Fosseway in peace!'

"So that is all!' the Squire said, with suppressed passion, 'your modesty does you credit. Might I ask if you have secured that little commodity already?'

"I have done enough to receive some handsome acknowledgment, and I mean to have it,' he answered doggedly.

"Why then, are these men here at this moment? Let me have an answer to that, Kinkman!'

"You ought to know more of their business than I do, seeing you have sent them,' he answered sharply.

"Be careful,' the Squire said with ominous quietness, with his eyes fixed upon the man before him. 'I must have the truth!' He spoke with a certain tone of menace in his tone new to Kinkman.

"I suppose the truth is useful, sometimes,' he muttered, with an air of grave consideration, 'and yet, you have paid fairly well for several good whole-some lies, and for—'

"Silence!' Hardcastle said, confirming the man fiercely. 'I will have silence about the past!'

"Oh, well,' Kinkman said, composedly, 'pay for silence, then—it all, pay for it!'

"What have you done with the girl?

A CHANGE IN TEMPERATURE.

It was a perfect winter morning. Everything was bright and sparkling with life, but inside it was plain to be seen that something was wrong.

Bobby sat before the fire on his new sled, his sturdy little chin set hard to keep his feet from trembling. Emily Ann held their new Christmas skates in their arms and tried hard not to splatter them with tears. Pat stood over them, his arms crossed hard against the window-pane, but the landscape he viewed was very blurred and misty.

"If he just hadn't got 'em now," he gulped. "The first real good skating and probably the last, and here we have to leave it."

"Well, we ought to be glad we don't have the measles, too, like poor little Ed," Emily said.

Pat sniffed. "You make me tired, Emily. You're worse than Pollyanna. I'm not glad. I'd rather be sick than be quarantined—it would be a lot nicer."

Just then their mother appeared at the door. "Why, Mother, how quiet you've been," Emily said, "I bet you're getting the measles, too."

"I'm afraid I am," sighed Mrs. Piper, "I guess I'll go to bed. But you children will have to just do the best you can until tomorrow night when Daddy comes home."

The children felt quite important to have all the responsibility of the house. "Let's play school this week," said Emily, as she heated water to bath her mother's aching head. "I'll be the nurse and Bobby can be the cook."

"Well! What'll we do?", demanded Pat.

"Oh, you boys can do the dirty work," laughed Bertha. "Dinn't worry. There will be plenty for all to do. You boys get up look at the furnace right now and Bobby can set the table for me." Bertha was leafing through the cook book.

BASKETBALL LESSONS

By WILLIAM C. GRAVE

No. 6. Five Man Defence

(This is the sixth of twelve lessons in basketball by William C. Grave of the University of Pennsylvania, National coach for 1921. Mr. Grave was captain of his team in 1921, and was named on All-Collegiate center in 1919, 1920 and 1921. He holds the record of having played ninety basketball games and losing only five.)

To win basketball games a team must, of course, prevent their opponents from scoring. The haphazard defence is ever successful. A definite system must be adopted so that every man will know just what he is to do when the opponents have the ball.

The Five Man Defense has proved so superior over all others that it is being used by most leading college teams, and each year brings new converts to the style, until it will be but a short time before every team will have adopted it. It makes every man directly responsible for the man he is playing against. There can be no excuse if a goal is scored. His man made the goal and he alone is responsible.

Drop Back to Center.

The working of the Five Man Defense is as follows: Whenever the opposing team secures possession of the ball every man should drop back to the center of the field immediately. Do not hesitate an instant, but drop back at once. Then, from this position, look for your man. Of course if he is close to your basket, you can go to him and

Irish Peers Are Problem

That Has Not Been Solved By the Imperial Statesmen

One class of Irishmen who may have reason to regret the coming of the Irish Free State is the Irish peer. Nobody seems to know exactly what will become of him; apparently no provision has been made for him. The pens of more important realists, he was forgotten. The Irish Free States abolish the Irish peerage.' It will help to solidify to create new peers, since that is of honor that is bestowed by the monarch. There has been no suggestion that the Dail Eireann will establish a House of Lords of its own and that fund employment for the peers. On the other hand, it will be within the power of the Irish Parliament to declare the peers, who have British titles, and owe personal allegiance to King George, ineligible for seats of any kind. There has been a suggestion that the Irish peers should be made British peers, which would solve their difficulties, but would only complicate the questions arising out of the House of Lords. The tendency is to curtail the membership of that body, rather than expand it, and if the Irish peers were created British peers, some fifty new members of the House of Lords would arrive automatically.

At present there are 161 Irish peers, 21 of them being British peers also, and, in brief, they have no privilege, and, by virtue of their British peerage, are members of the Lords. Of the 83 Irish peers who are not also British peers, 28 are members of the British House of Lords, having been elected by their peers. They are merely life members, of course, and on their death the Irish peers may elect successors, in accordance with the terms of the Act of Union. Before the passage of that Act the Irish had its own House of Commons and its own House of Lords, with no representation in the British Parliament. The Act of Union provided for the election of 28 of them. It also provided that Irish peers, not so chosen, might sit in the British Commons for an English constituency if they were able to find one, and at present there is at least one who has that bulging shape legislation for Great Britain.

It was decreed by the same act that the British sovereign could only create a new Irish peerage in case three of them had become extinct. This was due to the fact that peers in Ireland were more numerous than in England, according to population, in Scotland the peers who sit in the Lords are only elected by the Scottish voters for the life of Parliament. The Scottish peerage is extinct when the sons of the families five much promise of dying out, even though no Scottish peers have been created since the union. The Irish peerage, as we have seen, has been apt to fail abruptly for more than one hundred years, although the intention of the framers of the Act of Union was to gradually reduce the peerage until the number that could be elected to the British House of Lords.

Another thing which helped frustrate the plans of those who hoped in time to see the Irish peerage greatly reduced was the fact that frequently the British ministry would make an Irish peer a British peer, thus giving him a seat in the House of Lords for life, and usually his descendants after him. The intention of the Act of Union was that the four Irish Lords spiritual should be made representative peers, not by any means an unreasonable number, in view of the fact that the Scots had 16 spiritual lords when the Disestablishment of the Irish Church, in 1869, did away with the Irish spiritual peers, and it is believed that had Ireland been one instead of two, as a result of Government of Ireland Act, this precedent would have been followed, but the Irish peers would have had seats at Westminster.

The suggestion that the question of the Irish peers be settled by making all the Irish peers British peers would mean that a number would be claimed for the 26 Scots peers, who are also Irish peers. The House of Lords now numbers 718, and would be more crowded than that it will not be long before the number is reduced, either by voluntary action on the part of the Lords themselves or by an Act of Parliament. The Lords, in fact, now might be expected to object strongly to any wholesale increase in their numbers, for it has been noted that nobody is more strongly opposed to the creation of new peerages than those who have been given new peerages. It is noted as a curiosity by the Edinburgh Scotsman that the latest existing peerage in English history is the Irish Barony of Kingsale, now represented by Lord Kingsale, who is the thirty-fifth baron of the line, which was founded in 1223.

USING LIGHTNING RODS

Erroneous Opinions Corrected by Statements of Expert.

Why Buildings Should Be Rodded—What Metal Rods Are Best—Studies of Those Damaged During Recent Storms.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture.)

The many direct questions concerning lightning rods or cables, methods of installing, etc., sent to the Department of Physics, O.A.C., Guelph, are often accompanied by statements of the views of those submitting these questions which following list of corrected views, or impressions, will prove helpful to those who are at all interested in the protection of their property from lightning discharges.

1. Rounding corners forms a connecting link between the charge on the cloud and the charge on the earth and structure rounded. The charges on the cloud and on the earth are of opposite polarity, and the induced charge on the earth or structure is quietly neutralized by the rodding system, bonding the ground rod, the cable, and the points on the ridge. The neutralizing of the charge takes place in the form of an almost silent discharge from the points placed on the ridge, or on prominences at various parts of the building. It is in thus "preventing" the sudden flash from the cloud that the chief efficiency of the rodding system consists. The system helps to avoid destruction by free ones in cases where a flash cannot be prevented, but these cases are almost unheard of to-day with the efficient rodding systems being installed by lightning rod dealers. "Rodding systems properly installed are proved."

2. Any kind of rodding "system" is satisfactory if the proper kind of rod or cable is used. It all depends on the rod.

3. Rather say any durable rod, preferably three eighths inch, or, and iron 4½ ounces per foot is good enough "if properly installed." Emphasis cannot be too strongly laid on the "method" of installation.

4. The ground rod or cable is placed in the ground a distance of at least, if is considered satisfactory.

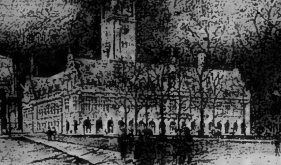
5. Ground rods must be down to perpetual moisture, or where this is impossible) special arrangements must be made to provide the best grounding, more ground rods being necessary and special methods must be sought as to the best method in each special case.

6. A building with metal roof is safe from electrical discharge.

7. A metal roof grounded at the corners, and with a "sharp" ridge-board or points, makes a splendid system for fire protective purposes. The chief metal parts in the building must, however, be connected to the main system as suggested in rodding specifications, Bulletin No. 230 of the Department of Agriculture for Ontario.

8. Even properly rodded buildings are sometimes struck.

9. Although the above is true, the chances of their being injured if struck, or struck at all, are so few that one is safe in declaring that statement as "misleading." When hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of property is being destroyed annually in the Province of Ontario there are on record spaces of twelve months' duration where no single properly rodded building was burned, and practically none even damaged.



10. The safest place in a thunderstorm is a short distance from a tall tree, but lightning is liable to strike anything or anywhere.

C. Keep as far away as possible from trees. All things are not equally liable to be struck. There is no freak in the case of lightning discharge. Some things are never struck, other things are almost invariably struck if a discharge takes place near them.

E. Our buildings are insured. Then why rod them at our own expense?

1. No one has any right to take a chance on destroying life and property even if the life of the individual or the property is insured. How about reduction of insurance premiums when buildings are rodded?

E. All rodding companies are "grafters." Therefore buy the cheapest cable and installation.

THEY MINE COAL IN THE ARCTIC

Miners Cut Off From the World in the Arctic Seas

One hundred and eighty-five Swedish coal miners are now cut off from the world, mining slightly coal in a mine seven hundred miles north of the Arctic Circle. They are on the island of Spitsbergen, north of Sweden in the Sea of Greenland, and the sun will not again appear above their horizon until next April. They have plenty of supplies and plenty of fuel, and their camps and mines will be lighted by electricity through the long Arctic night. One of their principal diversions is the phonograph, and when they get tired of reading last year's newspapers, they can receive the condensed news of the world through their own radio station . . .

The Swedish company for which these men work shipped 72,000 tons of coal into Sweden from Spitsbergen during last summer. But now nothing can be moved until navigation opens again in the Spring.

Sweden's coal supply is limited, but to offset this deficiency she has her "white coal," the countless number of waterfalls and rapids which are harnessed to produce electric power. And, in fact, upward of half of the area of the kingdom is now electrified, the power being applied to a variety of purposes, all the way from the building of ships to the milking of cows. The fuels in common use are wood, charcoal and peat.

But King Coal still commands a corner of the fuel market, and it is a unique tribute to him that the 185 miners are toiling in their far-bound out-post through the Arctic night.

Letters Coming to Canada From Germany Are Opened.

Any official connected with the post office will be the first to assure you that the sanctity of private correspondence is never violated; yet the actual truth is that there is no post office in the world which has not its so-called "cabinet noir," or Black Cabinet, where letters from suspected persons are opened and read.

Just lately we have been hearing much about the number of letters coming from or passing through Germany which have been tampered with. It is supposed that the Germans will after commercial secrets, rather than political information; but whatever the cause, the fact that the recipients can recognize that their letters have been opened shows great carelessness on the part of the German post office.

The French are particularly expert at this business, and have a complete outfit for opening envelopes, abstracting their contents, and even for resealing and retrodating them.

Really careful pasting up of an envelope will reduce detection to a case out of the question. In such a case one side of the envelope may be cut with a sharp knife, sharp steel blade, and afterwards skillfully pasted up.

Again, the stamp may be removed. A silk cut beneath it, or an instrument not unlike a corkscrew is inserted and twisted round so that the sheet inside can be drawn out in a narrow spiral roll.

For removing a seal another thin blade of steel is employed, which is heated and passed under the wax. The whole seal is thereby loosened bodily.

It is said that the only letters which cannot be opened by the skilful officials of the Black Cabinet are those which are enclosed in two separate envelopes, the inner smaller one then the outer. The latter may be unseared all over with paste before being put inside the larger.

Another scheme for the person conspiring to outwit the German P. O. is to post his letters in the envelopes of some well-known commercial firm, and to send the letter under this cover to some friendly third party.

Absurdities of Instinct.

Instinct sometimes causes animals and insects to do oddly useless things. A Mr. Lacaze-Duthiers in Bulletin de l'Acad. E. W. G. Hingston tells this story, which illustrates the power that a web has over an insect: A black-bellied spider lay in its web waiting for visitors at the entrance to the tube, where the skeleton of the dead long been dead was lying, when a stinging wasp came and entangled its feet in the web. Instead of the spider building spider is armed with fangs and poison, it is by no means strong and ordinarily will not fight with an injured wasp. When the spider felt the web vibrate it darted forward at the wasp, but the wasp, sprang swiftly back. But the presence of the wasp seemed to have aroused the spider's instinct to capture something. Without a moment's thought, this fool to sink its fangs deeply into the fly that had long ago died.

The Glass Harmonica.

One of the most curious musical instruments ever made was the glass harmonica that Benjamin Franklin invented. It was composed of glass disks of different sizes set on a spindle and made by a treadle to revolve in a trough of water. The player touched the wet edges of the disks as they revolved, and thereby produced musical notes of unusual purity. The instrument was a great vogue for many years, but the music was said to have an injurious effect on the listener's nerves, and the criticism of the glass disks made the player's fingers sore.

China.

The Chinese civilization is the oldest. When the people in most parts of Europe were going about dressed in skins of wild animals and using pieces of stone tied to sticks as tools and weapons, the Chinese were a skilful and highly cultured nation.

Richard Croker Who Became a Power from Ireland to Tammany

Became Boss of New York

Richard Croker, whose name became a synonym for the minister in charge of Tammany Hall in American politics, cash of an Irish family of great prominence a few centuries back, though the boy's father was a blacksmith who had to travel steerage to the United States. Young Richard was glad to go to school until he was fifteen, when he was turned out and expected to support himself. He showed no inclination for the sort of education one derives from books, but he early gave promise of an unusual personality. He could not have been a born leader, though most of his early leadership was the direction of mischief. When he became a machine boss he possessed naturally the leader of the sheep.

Before he was of voting age he had become interested in politics. Probably he knew nothing about public affairs, but he knew how to disentangle those people from voting and found that this knowledge had money value. His name as a young sad-tumble fighter spread. His fists were his only logical arguments and usually they sufficed. In the neighborhood of the old Fourth avenue tunnel, where Croker and his associates used to forcather, he was the undisputed chieftain, and by word, aided out by his ready fists, was law upon all questions of politics, politics and religion. The gang he led had rather an unsavory reputation with the police, and was suspected of the death of more than one citizen. It was in existence before Dick Croker appeared, and he had to thrash most of the members before ps was made its general.

One of his brothers became a policeman, and Richard, while still a youth, acquired an interest in a saloon. So far had he progressed that he was elected an alderman when he was twenty-five, as a result of the benevolent influence of Boss Tweed. But presently Croker became active among the Tammany elements that opposed Tweed, and when the old boss realized the fact he found that Croker was in too strong a position to beat. The young alderman later became a collector of internal revenue, and distinguished himself in the office. The district was given over anywhere between one and two minutes to decide whether they would pay or take a beating, and most of them chose to pay. When Tweed died in Ludlow street jail, he was succeeded by Kelly, and Croker became a henchman of Kelly's. So loyal he was that when invited by Kelly to help suppress a rebellion on the part of O'Brien, an O'Brien adherent named McKenna met his death at the hands of Croker.

Croker was promptly indicted for murder. The jury stood ten for acquittal and two for conviction, and on the motion of the state's attorney, the case was dismissed, though it has ever remained as a stigma upon the name of Croker. The next year Croker having resigned as coroner, was again elected alderman. He resigned to become Fire Commissioner, and later was appointed Civil Chamberlain. The offices he held were, as a rule, inconsiderable, and none of them was heartily endowed, but they did not trouble Croker, who looked to other sources for his income, which had become a handsome one from the time he first became alderman. In 1886 he became the leader of Tammany Hall and a power in national politics. The fact that he was not an early advocate of Cleveland and for the Presidency added to his reputation for political sagacity.

From 1886 to 1893 Richard Croker was the absolute boss of Tammany Hall and New York politics. Then for three years he retired from all politics, nominating John Sheehan, a business partner, as his successor.

After three years he returned, stripped Sheehan of the shadow of authority, and once more took over the reins. In 1903 he quit work for all time and then resided for the most part in Ireland, where he bred race horses, one of which, Orby, won the Derby. The triumph was short lived. Croker died in 1916, since it did not bring him the coveted knighthood. He left a widow and a son, Richard Croker, jr., and a daughter, Mrs. Forbes Morgan, who had a strong influence in Democratic politics. Croker was a very rich man as the result of improving properties and he bestowed to him when he was the leader of New York City.

Sailed the Lakes for Many Years

Lake Ontario came crowned with sea lanes, first schooners, carrying Ontario barley, to make American beer, sailing craft battling with November gales, sail and sailors vying in their winter shelters in crowding lake harbors—those were the days.

A living link with this romance that is past is Captain Richard Clarke, centenarian, of Port Hope.

Until one has met a person whose recollections of long experiences are so vivid, it is difficult to realize that Captain Clarke's world was ever a pulsating reality.

Traveling by rail along the lake, while the buildings seem on the bars of many a deserted harbor. As you say a hundred nautical centuries sailed out of many of these ports in the old days.

Like a heart of oak, persisting into the days of the superdreadnought, Captain Clarke sets up in his own hale, weather-beaten appearance the days of sailing fleets and hustling harbors.

Born at Brekafastsight, in Devon, on December 8, 1821, Richard Clarke sailed the high seas from his eighteenth year and Lake Ontario from his thirtieth year. His entire career has been from "fore-and-aft" craft to steel barges. His mind still follows the sea, of which Lake Ontario is to him a beloved part.

Signing his name for the Toronto Sunday World, he spoke of the unusual spectacles to one a hundred years young and then proceeded to tell stories of ninety years ago.

Playing truant from the school conducted by the Rev. Mr. Lowance, young Clarke and his chums used to sing as they ran away:

"Farewell, Topley, farewell, bounds;
Fare you well, Rev. Mr. Lowance;
Farewell, church, and a farewell steeple;
And fare you well, all Buckhatsleigh people."

Then he saw the local hunt, the lords' annual banquet and sports and royal birthday celebrations.

"The holiday of my life was when I drove the village band to Lord Newman's on young Queen Victoria's first birthday after her accession," he said. "My greatest ex-perience was the train that took me from my ship at London to Exeter, but I have seen all the great inventions since then."

After sailing the Mediterranean and Black Sea ports many times, he crossed the Atlantic in 1851 in his first fresh-water sailing. It was the height of the grain and lumber trade across Lake Ontario, and speedily he became master, then part-owner and owner of sleek ships.

Captain Clarke docked in Toronto in time to attend the debate of the Union Legislature in the Front Street buildings when the bill to charter the Grand Trunk Railway was passed. Later he carried stone for the line into Toronto and Frenchman's Bay.

His first intimation of the Penley boat raid was to hear a scurry pacing the wharf beside his vessel in Brockville harbor on a Sunday morning. Carrying coal from Oswego and lumber and grain to Montreal from Port Hope, Cobourg and smaller harbors, he spent a busy half century, and then retired.

"I have always had good health," he said. "I have had to stay in my chair most of the time for the past two years, since the rheumatism came. I never drank and I quit smoking when my first child was born. I always get up early and go to bed early."

Captain Clarke has many descendants—but his wife, aged 80 years, and he are the only occupants of their tidy, comfortable home. They are quite able to look after the house. His centenary came last December and the day was marked by gifts and visits and addresses from the Town Council and the Methodist Quarterly Board. Many friends sent and the house was filled with flowers, but the best gift was the day for quiet, without spectacle, one hundred postcards to friends who had sent greetings.

Port Hope he considers a particularly healthy town, being hilly and dry and not close to open water, even if it is not as salty as in the days when the harbor was full of ships and clustered the tiny home of many an Old Country sailor and his family.

That was two generations ago. Port Hope people do not now go down to the water's edge, for the lighthouse is there, but the railroad somehow is not so near. Only the day for the other shipowner and sailor is still remembered—the day when Captain Clarke's "salt sailors" are no more. Then he will have time to write down his memories of the "Bristol," "Agnes," "Queen" and "Prince of Stevenson"—last of the vessels which he owned—and even a part in reality, as well as in name.

Fleet of Oil Burners Planned.

The Canadian Chamber of Commerce has proposed a plan to link oil-burning steamers on a four-day schedule between England and Canada. There will be eight vessels of 20,000 tons each, carrying 600 first-class and 3,000 second-class passengers, and making 24 knots. The service is later to be extended to all ports of the Empire, and from there to ports from Liverpool to Sydney via Halifax and across Canada by rail in 30 days it now takes 30 days.

Ontario's Electric Scheme.

After an investigation covering 33,000 miles, Hydro-Electric Power Ontario Government that at least ten municipal farms will install electricity for lighting and power purposes as soon as the necessary transmission lines are provided. It is the intention to construct 1,000 miles of these lines during the next two years

Lord Robert Cecil Will Plough His Lone Furrow

In Politics in England

"Lone-furrow" statesmen are usually more picturesque than useful. Lord Robert Cecil, by his recent speech, puts himself in the lone-furrow class, though he might end up with the Liberal party if Viscount Grey, his particular friend, should take the leadership. The lone-furrow phrase originated some years ago with Lord Rosebery, a Liberal who at one time isolated himself when not in agreement with the majority of his party. This position has been taken by numerous men of ability who are more devoted to principle than to party. The fact that politics means continual compromise to reach results makes such a course seem ineffective, but sometimes men may advance a cause by detaching himself from party for a time until sentiment catches up with him.

Britain and Canada have both had numerous cases of such isolation. Joseph Chamberlain withdrew to promote preferential trade, which he did not make much progress. Cobden was similarly unyielding in free laisse. In the country Edward Blake was intermittent in his devotion to party. D'Alton McCarthy was another example, being the representative for years at Ottawa, of the extreme Protestant wing. Peter

LORD ROBERT CECIL.

Mitchell used to describe himself as the "third party" in days that enjoyed only two ordinary parties. W. F. Maclean has been a good deal of a free-lance, especially in his ownership.

Lord Robert Cecil is a man whose "future" is usually more important than his present, though he has been a powerful force in Parliamentary affairs, and has been Under-Secretary of Blockade and as Assistant Secretary for Foreign Affairs to Mr. Lloyd George Cabinet. His brilliance and his devotion to principle seem always to promise great things. Though the right combination of people and circumstances is strangely delayed. The author of "Mirrors of Downing Street" regretted that this one constructive thinker in all the England of to-day did not rise to take a more active part in the reconstruction of the moral ashes of Great Britain. Instead, the lanky lanky son of colonial rank is a parliament, not in fighting mood, but with the weariness of the flesh that comes when a man broods too much over the ills of the universe."

Lord Robert, being a younger son, had to make his own way, despite the standing and wealth of his father, Lord Salisbury. At 43 he had made enough out of law to retire, and since 1906 he has been in public life, but with contradictory and puzzling results.

Mackintosh Economics.

Don't throw your old mackintosh away. There are many uses to which it can be put.

It can be made into excellent aprons for working—for any work, indeed. Cut out a straight piece, hollowed at the waist, and attach straps for the latter, cut out a circle of the material, with a hole in the centre for the head. Turn under the hems and stick with rubber solution.

Another simple article is a bathing cap. Cut out leather circles on a sew elastic round the edges. A band of the same colored leather may be used as a decoration. A good shopping-bag or hold-all can be made from a mackintosh. Machine it and attach two strong handles.

Indian Basketry.

The new Toronto Government museum already has a wonderful collection of Indian basketry, including arrowheads chipped from volcanic glass, and an Egyptian mummified exhibit. It has the only existing specimen of the Five Nations belt, woven from strips of the tanned skins of many rabbits; since there is no such thing as water bottle, still usable despite its 200 years of age, save for a stitch that is a marvel of neatness, so close that no rain was needed to make the bottle watertight. Also a book written by John Muir are also numbered among the treasures.—Scientific American.

Pitmedden.

Samuel Pitmedden, in the middle of the nineteenth century, got the first constructive article into law through the British Parliament.

Sheep Nuts Rotting.

From 40,000 to 100,000 tons of sheep nuts are annually rotting along the Gold Coast of Africa; 200 miles of railway would provide a remunerative outlet for these nuts.

SEEKING FOR HUSBANDS

WHY SO MANY ENGLISH GIRLS COME TO CANADA.

There Are Not Enough Men to Go Round In the British Isles, and Emigration Agents Tells Why and That the Overseas Dominions Contain Numerous Bachelors.

It is a happy dispensation of nature that, while there are in Great Britain some two million females for whom there are no mates, across the seas is the overseas dominions, there is a vast army of hard-working, decent men, with hundreds of acres of unappreciated land, who are asking for wives to share their homes and their success.

In Canada across British girls can have the choice of fifty thousand single bachelors. Probably thirty thousand of them are Scots, and the rest are well-paid artisans in the smaller towns.

They are, with few exceptions, decent fellows, industrious, thrifty, and of good habits. I assure you they are not seeking wives to make downstairs Cobdens, with the result that they have most comfortable homes and quite good incomes, and their only wish is for companionship.

Writing recent years, with the exception of the war period, the British girl has been coming to Canada in relations of this escaped from a life of loneliness and drudgery.

Some time ago an official of the British Women's Emigration Office said that their society alone had succeeded in finding situations for nearly a hundred women every month; and, in addition, the Salvation Army and other agencies were been sending out women to Canada and other countries with a view to getting work, in the first place.

"And what do they marry?" I asked.

"Of course they do!" was the emphatic answer; "and over there it's not a question of a penniless being a woman's one and only chance. She can pick and choose."

Of course, if matrimony doesn't appeal to them, these women emigrants can have their pick of jobs and comfortable homes. And it must be remembered that in Canada the term "servant" is unknown. The woman who assists in the house is called a "help," and she is treated as one of the family. That appeals to the English girl's democratic ideas.

It is not long since Mr. Howell, the immigration agent, went to England in search of five thousand girls willing to become wives of yeoman Canadian farmers.

He said, "We have thousands of inquiries from young farmers in the outlying districts, asking for domestic servants who, should their housekeeping trial prove mutually satisfactory, will be converted anon to matrimony.

"Mr. Howell was asked what type of woman was wanted, he replied:

"It is difficult to single out any one type. We don't, certainly, want girls be domesticated; and, without doubt, the girl who has had a good deal of ing about home is the most likely to make a good wife and to found good homes of their own.

"In Canada by no means the only part of the world that is clamoring for wives. In the Antipodes there are hundreds of thousands of land to make his own way, despite the standing and wealth of his father, Lord Salisbury. At 43 he had made enough out of law to retire, and since 1906 he has been in public life, but with contradictory and puzzling results.

"IS MATRIMONY A FAILURE?"
HUMDINGER LIVE-WIRE COMEDY

Griffin's Theatre last evening shook with laughter. At one time it was the women; then a few seconds later the men and then at odd intervals it was both. This experience was not unique, as happened because the picture that was being screened fitted itself to the mood of each and every audience. It was a Six reel Paramount special comedy, "Is Matrimony a Failure?" with all star cast and directed by James Cruze.

The laughter which arose then can readily be understood from the title and from the thousand and one little household incidents so recognizable to the individual members of the audience. When one of the male players on the screen scored a minor victory, the male members chortled and when the women players scored a big victory every few seconds, then the fair sex had their turn. As for the youngsters present they recognized what was going on as a reproduction of what they see often in their own homes and were highly enthusiastic.

Altogether it was a picture readily to be classified as wholesome, and the performance of T. Roy Barnes, Lila Lee, Lois Wilson, Walter Hiers, Otis Harlan and a host of other players were excellent.

"Toonerville Trials" an amusing and original Fontaine Fox Toonerville comedy cartoon, and Mutt and Jeff, and new chapter of the "Buffalo Bill" adventure also proved entertaining.

WALTHALL IN STELLAR ROLE

Since as early as 1910, when his characterization of Abraham Lincoln at a National stounded critics, Henry B. Walthall has been regarded as one of the best actors of any type on the screen. His professionals themselves admit to a feeling of reverence for him and his genius. The popularity that he steadily grown from the early days, add in the twelve years or so he has reached a position apart from any other film actor.

"The Long Chance" is a photodrama which is presenting Walthall and a rotating company at the Regent Theatre tonight, and Saturday matinee and night, in a western story that has nothing to do with the bourgeois West, of fighting cowboys and narrow escapes. "The Long Chance" is an adaptation of a Peter B. Kyne story. With Walthall in the character lead, Ralph Graves to cast in the romantic lead, Marjorie Daw in three feminine roles —or rather, one and another at two ages twenty years apart—and Grace Marvin, William Bertran, Jack Curtis, Leonard Clapham, Boyd Irwin, George A. Williams, Margaret Cullington, Mai Wells and other successful screen players in principal parts. Jack Conway directed.

Pathe News, "Short Weight" a funny Century Comedy with the famous screen dog, Brownie playing an important role, a rood Vodevile Movies, and Bray Pictograph are being exhibited on the same program.

KEEPING HIS OWN

"Is your new hot-to-day a good provider?"

"Yes. I was just about keep my daughter in gloves. I pay for everything else."

"Then he discovered you as to his circumstances?"

"No. I remember he merely asked for her hand."

Many a man would only being cast away in a desert island. Then he wouldn't have to call on his wife's relations.

Lord Robert Cecil Will Plough His Lone Furrow

In Politics in England

"Lone-furrow" statesmen are usually more picturesque than useful. Lord Robert Cecil, by his recent speech, puts himself in the lone-furrow class, though he might end up with the Liberal party if Viscount Grey, his particular friend, should take the leadership. The lone-furrow phrase originated some years ago with Lord Rosebery, a Liberal who at one time isolated himself when not in agreement with the majority of his party. This position has been taken by numerous men of ability who are more devoted to principle than to party. The fact that politics means continual compromise to reach results makes such a course seem ineffective, but sometimes men may advance a cause by detaching himself from party for a time until sentiment catches up with him.

Britain and Canada have both had numerous cases of such isolation. Joseph Chamberlain withdrew to promote preferential trade, which he did not make much progress. Cobden was similarly unyielding in free laisse. In the country Edward Blake was intermittent in his devotion to party. D'Alton McCarthy was another example, being the representative for years at Ottawa, of the extreme Protestant wing. Peter

LORD ROBERT CECIL.

Mitchell used to describe himself as the "third party" in days that enjoyed only two ordinary parties. W. F. Maclean has been a good deal of a free-lance, especially in his ownership.

Lord Robert Cecil is a man whose "future" is usually more important than his present, though he has been a powerful force in Parliamentary affairs, and has been Under-Secretary of Blockade and as Assistant Secretary for Foreign Affairs to Mr. Lloyd George Cabinet. His brilliance and his devotion to principle seem always to promise great things. Though the right combination of people and circumstances is strangely delayed. The author of "Mirrors of Downing Street" regretted that this one constructive thinker in all the England of to-day did not rise to take a more active part in the reconstruction of the moral ashes of Great Britain. Instead, the lanky lanky son of colonial rank is a parliament, not in fighting mood, but with the weariness of the flesh that comes when a man broods too much over the ills of the universe."

Lord Robert, being a younger son, had to make his own way, despite the standing and wealth of his father, Lord Salisbury. At 43 he had made enough out of law to retire, and since 1906 he has been in public life, but with contradictory and puzzling results.

Mackintosh Economics.

Don't throw your old mackintosh away. There are many uses to which it can be put.

It can be made into excellent aprons for working—for any work, indeed. Cut out a straight piece, hollowed at the waist, and attach straps for the latter, cut out a circle of the material, with a hole in the centre for the head. Turn under the hems and stick with rubber solution.

Another simple article is a bathing cap. Cut out leather circles on a sew elastic round the edge. A band of the same colored leather may be used as a decoration. A good shopping-bag or hold-all can be made from a mackintosh. Machine it and attach two strong handles.

Indian Basketry.

The new Toronto Government museum already has a wonderful collection of Indian basketry, including arrowheads chipped from volcanic glass, and an Egyptian mummified exhibit. It has the only existing specimen of the Five Nations belt, woven from strips of the tanned skins of many rabbits; since there is no such thing as water bottle, still usable despite its 200 years of age, save for a stitch that is a marvel of neatness, so close that no rain was needed to make the bottle watertight. Also a book written by John Muir are also numbered among the treasures.—Scientific American.

Pitmedden.

Samuel Pitmedden, in the middle of the nineteenth century, got the first constructive article into law through the British Parliament.

Sheep Nuts Rotting.

From 40,000 to 100,000 tons of sheep nuts are annually rotting along the Gold Coast of Africa; 200 miles of railway would provide a remunerative outlet for these nuts.

SEEKING FOR HUSBANDS

WHY SO MANY ENGLISH GIRLS COME TO CANADA.

There Are Not Enough Men to Go Round In the British Isles, and Emigration Agents Tells Why and That the Overseas Dominions Contain Numerous Bachelors.

It is a happy dispensation of nature that, while there are in Great Britain some two million females for whom there are no mates, across the seas is the overseas dominions, there is a vast army of hard-working, decent men, with hundreds of acres of unappreciated land, who are asking for wives to share their homes and their success.

In Canada across British girls can have the choice of fifty thousand single bachelors. Probably thirty thousand of them are Scots, and the rest are well-paid artisans in the smaller towns.

They are, with few exceptions, decent fellows, industrious, thrifty, and of good habits. I assure you they are not seeking wives to make downstairs Cobdens, with the result that they have most comfortable homes and quite good incomes, and their only wish is for companionship.

Writing recent years, with the exception of the war period, the British girl has been coming to Canada in relations of this escaped from a life of loneliness and drudgery.

Some time ago an official of the British Women's Emigration Office said that their society alone had succeeded in finding situations for nearly a hundred women every month; and, in addition, the Salvation Army and other agencies were been sending out women to Canada and other countries with a view to getting work, in the first place.

"And what do they marry?" I asked.

"Of course they do!" was the emphatic answer; "and over there it's not a question of a penniless being a woman's one and only chance. She can pick and choose."

Of course, if matrimony doesn't appeal to them, these women emigrants can have their pick of jobs and comfortable homes. And it must be remembered that in Canada the term "servant" is unknown. The woman who assists in the house is called a "help," and she is treated as one of the family. That appeals to the English girl's democratic ideas.

It is not long since Mr. Howell, the immigration agent, went to England in search of five thousand girls willing to become wives of yeoman Canadian farmers.

He said, "We have thousands of inquiries from young farmers in the outlying districts, asking for domestic servants who, should their housekeeping trial prove mutually satisfactory, will be converted anon to matrimony.

"Mr. Howell was asked what type of woman was wanted, he replied:

"It is difficult to single out any one type. We don't, certainly, want girls be domesticated; and, without doubt, the girl who has had a good deal of ing about home is the most likely to make a good wife and to found good homes of their own.

"In Canada by no means the only part of the world that is clamoring for wives. In the Antipodes there are hundreds of thousands of land to make his own way, despite the standing and wealth of his father, Lord Salisbury. At 43 he had made enough out of law to retire, and since 1906 he has been in public life, but with contradictory and puzzling results.

"IS MATRIMONY A FAILURE?"
HUMDINGER LIVE-WIRE COMEDY

Griffin's Theatre last evening shook with laughter. At one time it was the women; then a few seconds later the men and then at odd intervals it was both. This experience was not unique, as happened because the picture that was being screened fitted itself to the mood of each and every audience. It was a Six reel Paramount special comedy, "Is Matrimony a Failure?" with all star cast and directed by James Cruze.

The laughter which arose then can readily be understood from the title and from the thousand and one little household incidents so recognizable to the individual members of the audience. When one of the male players on the screen scored a minor victory, the male members chortled and when the women players scored a big victory every few seconds, then the fair sex had their turn. As for the youngsters present they recognized what was going on as a reproduction of what they see often in their own homes and were highly enthusiastic.

Altogether it was a picture readily to be classified as wholesome, and the performance of T. Roy Barnes, Lila Lee, Lois Wilson, Walter Hiers, Otis Harlan and a host of other players were excellent.

"Toonerville Trials" an amusing and original Fontaine Fox Toonerville comedy cartoon, and Mutt and Jeff, and new chapter of the "Buffalo Bill" adventure also proved entertaining.

WALTHALL IN STELLAR ROLE

Since as early as 1910, when his characterization of Abraham Lincoln at a National stounded critics, Henry B. Walthall has been regarded as one of the best actors of any type on the screen. His professionals themselves admit to a feeling of reverence for him and his genius. The popularity that he steadily grown from the early days, add in the twelve years or so he has reached a position apart from any other film actor.

"The Long Chance" is a photodrama which is presenting Walthall and a rotating company at the Regent Theatre tonight, and Saturday matinee and night, in a western story that has nothing to do with the bourgeois West, of fighting cowboys and narrow escapes. "The Long Chance" is an adaptation of a Peter B. Kyne story. With Walthall in the character lead, Ralph Graves to cast in the romantic lead, Marjorie Daw in three feminine roles —or rather, one and another at two ages twenty years apart—and Grace Marvin, William Bertran, Jack Curtis, Leonard Clapham, Boyd Irwin, George A. Williams, Margaret Cullington, Mai Wells and other successful screen players in principal parts. Jack Conway directed.

Pathe News, "Short Weight" a funny Century Comedy with the famous screen dog, Brownie playing an important role, a rood Vodevile Movies, and Bray Pictograph are being exhibited on the same program.

WHEN THE BILLS COME IN

Hon. F. C. Biggs has been officiating at the formal opening of various stretches of paved highway in Western Ontario. The ceremony consists, usually, of cutting a ribbon, sometimes white, other times pink, and afterward partaking of a banquet at which civic functionaries hand the Minister of Highways a few kind words. There are usually suitable reference to pioneer roads of the country, and sometimes even to the Appian Way.

As an aftermath to these pleasant little affairs, some Western Ontario papers have been publishing editorially the results of some blunt thinking. Mr. Biggs has a habit of informing his audiences that there is to be no direct taxation in connection with the provincial highways, some 1,800 miles of which are laid or in prospect. He somehow conveys the impression that in so long as there is no direct taxation no one will feel the cost. But the expenditure must be met by the province, out of revenue collected in some form from the people, and no mere words can prove the contrary. "All the millions so expended must be met by the corporation taxpayers in the end, whether directly or indirectly.

Hence the stress that is being laid, at the moment, upon economy in this department of the Drury Government. The Galt Reporter (Independent), in an editorial headed "Pulling the Wool," credits Mr. Biggs with "ability to get around a disagreeable question with smoothness" at this time "the juggling of words in an attempt to produce the effect on the minds of the public" that anything may be purchased without payment by the purchaser is a grave injustice to the "intelligence of the taxpayer."

As one of these pavement ceremonies recently, Mr. Biggs or some other member of the Government said that earlier in the regime of the present administration, representations had be made to the municipalities to get road-building under way, and now "we have to look ourselves up as protection against delegations asking highways." The Galt criticism quoted above recalls the fact that the Government is proposing a second paved highway between Galt and Preston, making one to each of the two Grand River railway banks. Not only has no one asked for it, but public opinion is plainly against it, as being quite as unnecessary as a fifth wheel, and involving which recently received from the Government bills in its share in "suburban" road construction, are by this time under no illusions as to the cost. The Guelph Herald says: "Guelph is this year called upon to pay some $40,000 as its share of the cost of roads used in the county, outside the city limits. So it goes in other sections, but we don't see the county paying a cent as their share of the good road within the city limits."

The sight at a Preston picture theatre, the news film showed Mr. Biggs officiating at ribbon-cutting, to open bridges and new roads. These particular pieces of public work may be of great value to the agiculture, and that section of the county seems to be favored particularly in enjoying the completed roads at a much earlier date than some other parts of the province where an unfinished state of road construction prevails.

Perhaps the Minister of Highways will be more in the limelight in the not too distant future, when more construction pictures than ribbon-cutting. The County of Hastings has already received a little account and the City of Bellville has been billed with the lidy sum of $5,000 for setting out its share. When the expenditure going to end? Posterior governments will certainly have some exceptional financial burdens wished upon them if this extravagance is allowed to continue.

HON. MR. DOHERTY AND THE BANKS

The Honorable Manning Doherty in taking credit Wednesday night in his remarks at the Dairymen's Association, for his Rural Credits Bill, made no uncertain impression upon the audience that he had implicit faith in all legislation for which he was responsible, and his speech fairly rang with his pet ideas of co-operation.

The Rural Credits Bill has been the subject of considerable discussion and was not inaugurated without much opposition, and the fact that the Honorable gentleman is a disciple of the bill was demonstrated some weeks ago when he made the statement in Western Ontario, that he would rather see two of our chartered banks fail, than have any co-operative society dealing in farm products, be forced to liquidate through the refusal of such banks to extend credit.

Some wiseacres think that the farmers of this country want more credit to be given them by new sorts of banks created for their special benefit, and columns would not suffice to catalogue the different ideas in vogue, in order that farmers may borrow themselves out of their debts. But from the testimony of many farmers, nothing could be further from the thoughts of those who raise crops, than the livestock and complaints of those who think more of votes than of crops, and who know more about political fences than farm fences. Our bankers financed farmers through their troubles before the political farmers woke to the emergency, and in these dairying districts the farmer and rural banker are well nigh inseparable. They understand each other minutely, and the business of finance. The peculiarity of farm finance is that the greatest borrowing is done in the best times, and credits are reduced in hard times, and we venture to say that very few cases indeed have been prevalent where a farmer who had security was refused renewal of notes, and in many instances his honor was the only security required.

The regular banking machinery should handle normal credits and it looks as if the farmers are better bankers than the politicians, if these comparatively prosperous times following worldwide upheaval, have anything to do with it.

Time will determine whether or not Mr. Doherty's schemes of marketing and banking will prove beneficial. In the meantime the Province has embarked in the banking business. Do the thousands of shareholders of chartered bank stocks agree in this procedure?

HERE AND THERE

ARTHUR STRINGER IS SOMEWHAT HUGE.

Physically, at least, Arthur Stringer is one of the biggest figures in contemporaneous literature, for he is six feet two and weighs two hundred and ten pounds, but he is somewhat sensitive as to his avoirdupois, and in a personal letter he pleads with me not to give him away.

Born in pre-prohibition days, forty-odd years ago, near London, Ontario, his fall name is Arthur John Arbuthnott Stringer, but when he became an author he cut it down to Arthur—Arthur Stringer.

His father was a medico, and after going to the local schools he went through the University of Toronto and then to the University of Oxford, England.

After leaving there he spent a year and a half in travel, study and having a good time in Germany, mainly at Munich.

For Arthur Stringer, the thrill that comes but once in a lifetime came to him, when he was 8, when he caught his first fish in the River Thames, near Chatham, Ontario—for the Thames is the River Thames of Canada.

It was a gigantic specimen of the genus sunfish fully four inches long. Nor was his ardor dampened when fishing home with it and demanding that it be fried at once for him, his mother said coldly: "Arthur, arew's you ashamed of taking such a little fish away feeu its mother?"

And he always was a poet, even in his first lesson in arithmetic he "lisped numbers," and when he was 12 he wrote sonnets and sonnettes and sonnetinas and villes—everything except verse libre, for, like all other Canadian bards, he was always a union poet, turning out invariably at least two sonnets to the week.

His first poems were published in Canadian newspapers and magazines, and his first regular literary or journalistic work was as a reporter on the Montreal Herald at a dollar a day.

A CHRISTMAS NIGHT REVERIE.

The Christmas coasts have departed,
The light of their laughter flown,
And here in the gathering twilight
I sit by the fire alone;
But their presence is all about me,
The light of their loving eyes,
The music of happy voices
Is sweet as the sunlight dies.

And in the gathering twilight
Comes the spirit of those who met
At our hearth on a distant Christmas,
I can hear their voices yet;
The light of their smiles and laughter
Dispels the gathering gloom,
And the footsteps of little children
Resound through the quiet room.

But again the house grows quiet,
And lonely the evening time,
And I dream of the untried pathway
Whose steeps my steps may climb—
The path that leads ever onward
To another Christmas Day,
And I wonder as best I ponder,
What changes will mark the way.

FIGHTING THE SANDS

WILLOW AND POPLAR ARE USED TO HALT THEM.

Dyke Building Going on In Prince Edward County, Where Wind-Driven Hills Have Swamped Many Farms and Orchards—Established and Good Work Is Now Making Headway.

The Ontario Government is winning in its fight against the "Sand Banks" of Prince Edward county. Judging by present progress, in a few years the hamlet moving hills in the southeast corner of the "island" county will soon be restored to their position of trees in the middle of the last century—simply mounds of fine sand covered with forest growth.

Seventy-five years ago the sand banks were consisted of high hills with swampy valleys between. On the land side, the hills was a fair growth of timber, while in the hollows an excellent stand of cedar had vanished entirely. On the lake side of the hills there was some scrubby bush and much grass. Lumbermen removed the tree protection and continual cattle grazing killed the grass, after the prevailing northwest winds a chance to loosen up the soil. By 1853 the whole mass was in motion, steadily covering the grown lands beneath thirty feet of sand and wasting nothing but a marsh behind.

Little serious attempt was made to halt the banks of sand until private holdings became menaced. The some local effort was put forth, grasses were experimented with and Holland willows were planted by layers in trenches in shallow trenches. The attempts only succeed in hindering the sand and roads and good fields were buried and buildings had to be moved out of the path of the drifting hills. On the north side, West Lake was shortened by seven hundred feet, while east of this, with nothing to stop it, the sand swept forward more than half a mile in the past seventy years. On the southeast side, dense clumps of cedars have halted the banks, though many of the trees have become buried and all of them, until last year, were imperiled.

Last season the Ontario Forestry Branch came on the scene and under the direction of A. E. Richardson opened hostilities against the "banks." Profiting by the experience of private planters, shallow trenches were dug in part on the landward side of the "banks" were filled with willow branches and cuttings of cedar and willow were planted between the trenches. While the cuttings have not done so well, the limb plantings have made a splendid start, the average growth of three feet being registered while some of the roots or tossed have grown fifteen feet and all were found out last year, and Mr. Richardson.

The past winter, according to Mr. Richardson, has been the most severe from the standpoint of winds in the past decade, so that even against the willow shoots barking them, and the fact that some cases severing them off close to the ground. This has left but the appearance of having been sandpapered. The layer of trees along the treacol growth is most satisfactory. Mr. Richardson officials are satisfied that they have the "banks" under control.

The work is being purchased by the Forestry Branch at the cost of $1,000 a year, and in order them for the purposes of establishing a forest nursery and plant 1,000,000 to give the owners some compensation for the land they sell them. At this station planting material will be grown which will be needed to cover the entire "banks" with belts of willow and cedar. The first plantings of locations between limb plantings with the Holland willow will be made available trees. One hundred and fifty-acre have been purchased for the purpose — between four and five hundred acres—will be covered in the near future.

While the Sand Banks of Prince Edward County afford a witness of what may be expected when timber growth is removed from light soil and the same excessively pastured, the forestal repellings of Ontario's dunes near West Lake is going on in many parts of the province. Along the south shore of Lake Erie, particularly in Norfolk county, several former fair agricultural fields have been almost abandoned, while along the north shore of Lake Ontario from York county to Prince Edward is not only of little value itself, but threatens surrounding fertile agricultural land.

Will Carry Old Flag.

For the first time since 1856, when it was escorted into the city by the Sandwich Company of volunteers, formed to oppose the invasion of Fenians a tattered old British flag was borne at the head of the parade of Canadian soldiers, when Lord Byng of Vimy, visited Windsor recently.

The flag, which was presented to the Sandwich volunteers of which the late Senator C. E. Casgrain was captain, was carried by the late Emelyn George Gray, when the Fenians threatened to cross the Detroit river. The British emblem was passed on to the sisters of Emelyn Gray, Sandwich, who gave it to the Chapter of the Daughters of the Empire.

Emphatic Brevity.

The evening party was over, and most of the guests had gone. As one young man took leave of his hostess, the lady said, "I am sorry you found Miss Higson a poor conversationalist." The conversationalist promptly disclaimed the guest. "She's the limit! Why, the only thing she said to me the entire evening was 'No,' and I to propose to her to get that out of her system."

TORONTO'S ANNUAL REVIEW

(Woodstock Sentinel-Review)

Toronto is becoming quite a large city.. During the past year it had 233 deaths from unnatural causes, an average of more than one a day. Motor cars killed 48, the majority of them children. Such figures give some indication of the price modern civilisation pays for its privileges.

ELECTRIFYING RAILWAYS

(Kitchener News Record)

Sir Henry Thornton, the new General Manager of the Canadian National Railways, seems to be enjoying an interesting flirtation with those who would commit the C.N.R. to the large undertaking of electrification of the rail lines in and about Toronto and the Niagara District. With the National Railways showing an annual deficit of many millions of dollars, and the expectation that it will be some time before outgo and income can be made to balance, we much doubt that Sir Henry has any serious intentions of presently embarking upon any heavy capital expenditures; and particularly, since he has not yet had time or opportunity to fully accquaint himself with the needs and resources of the system he has undertaken to administer. But the Toronto-Niagara district lends itself readily to this kind of railroading, and Sir Henry is probably quite conscious when he states that early action may be taken to electrify the national railways in this district.

PREMIER'S MAJORITY GROWS

(Kitchener News Record)

Following the example of Mr. Hamnett, the former Progressive member for Muskoka, in joining the Liberal party, another Progressive M.P. has announced the transference of his political allegiance to Premier King. Joseph Stephen Bury, Progressive M. P. for Prescott declares his intention to cross to the Liberal side.

Thus the growth in number of members supporting the government is an advantage to the country, although we do not agree with those who say recruits can fairly justify their action to their constituents without first explaining the situation. We govern best, however, will look a gift-horse of this kind in the mouth. Premier King will probably welcome with great fully the allegiance of his new friends. The responsibility for their action is a matter which rests with Messrs. Hamnill and Binette.

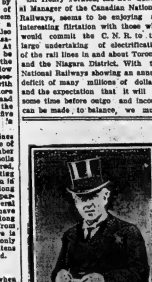
INDISCRIMINATE CHARITY

(Ottawa Journal)

To give money is to pauperize, even to the extent of helping a hungry man. It is infinitely better to put him in the way of earning his own dinner, and then he will be able to give many dinners and find his self-respect conserved as well as his self-contentment strengthened. To build up independence should be the aim of all sound philantropy. Anything short of that almost invariably does more harm than good.

INTEREST IN GOLF SWEEPING ENGLAND

(By Canadian Press)



London, Jan. 3.—Britain is in the grip of the golf fever, if the number of new courses being constructed can be taken as an indication. There are at least thirty courses now being built, the largest number laid out in a single year since 1902, when the rubber-covered ball revolutionized the game. The courses are costing on an average of $90,000 each.

An innovation in courses especially designed for the use of elderly people is being begun, which is also being installed by many of the English clubs.

LIST OF DONATIONS

Victorian Nurse May Be Engaged for City Work

The regular monthly meeting of the W.C.A. was held on Jan. 2 in the Council Chamber, the president, Mrs. Miles, presiding.

After devotional exercises, the reports of secretaries and committees were presented.

The late bequest helped in a marked degree to make the financial report very gratifying.

The matter of the W.C.A. working in conjunction with the Royal Victorian Order of Nurses in providing a nurse for the city at small cost to those employing her, was taken up. A Ford Coupe would be necessary for her.

The following resolution was passed:

That the thanks of the Indigent Department of the W.C.A. be extended to the churches, Sunday schools, Y.W. C.T.U., the G.W.V.A. and the Ministry Committee, who filled Christmas baskets and milk to the needy at Christmas time.

Mrs. French is the lady in charge at the Home for January.

Donations for the Home in December were as follows:

Mrs. (Capt.) Farrington, pair rubbers; Mrs. C. M. Short, bed with spotless cups, saucers, bowls, feeding cup; Mrs. J. W. SITUATION CLOUDY AT REPARATION'S COUNCIL

French Aviators Reported Over Neutral Zone—Turkish Delegation Left the Meeting

A SERIOUS CLIMAX POSSIBLE

Germany to be Given a Hearing and is Invited to Send Experts to Monday's Session

Paris, Jan. 6.—Germany will be given a hearing by the Reparations Commission before any action is taken on the French proposal to have her declared in default on coal deliveries, the Reparations Commission decided to-day.

When the question came before the Commission it approved the German request for a hearing. Berlin was immediately notified and asked to send experts so that they can be heard by the Commission next Monday. Sir John Bradbury, the British member attended the session. There was no discussion of the merits of the case. The Germans are entitled under the Treaty of Versailles to present their arguments and Louis Barthou of France, proponent of the default measure, offered no objection to granting the hearing.

Lausanne, Jan. 6.—The Turkish delegation to the Near East Conference left the meeting hall to-day as a protest against the Allied insistance upon the establishment of an Armenian national home.

According to the Turkish account of the incident which produced a sensation in conference circles, Chairman Montagna of the sub-commission on minorities read a statement forcing the Armenian home and was followed by Sir Horace Rumbold of Britain who spoke in advocacy of establishing a home in Silicia. Sir Horace also wanted the Turks to give an independent district to the Ahayro-Chaldeans, in the region South of Lake Van and west of Lake Urmia. Riza Nur Bey said he understood the Allied interest in the Armenians and others because the Allies had incited them to revolt and therefore felt morally bound to help them. He said he must consider to-day's Allied declarations as not having been made and that it was his duty to leave the meeting. He walked out amid murmurs of other delegates.

Berlin, Jan. 6.—Great activity on the part of French aviators is reported from Mannheim where airmen are said to be crossing over the neutral zone. Their planes are reported to have been over the city for a considerable time last night.

COMMISSIONERS INVESTIGATE FIRES

Police Board Holds Meeting Regarding Fire Alarm System—Public Instructed

The Board of Police Commissioners at their meeting had an interview with Mr. Alan E. Cokers, District Manager of the Bell Telephone Co., in reference to fire alarm operations, who said his company would be pleased to give the very best service possible. At the request of the Board Mr. Cokers said he would instruct the operators to "break in" on 81 when a fire alarm was being sent in and failing that would give instructions to "listen in" on the call so that the operator would know that the call had been sent and given to the police. There was a slight delay at the time of the Campbell street fire and an investigation was made by the police and Board. The result was that the Telephone operator was doing her duty, the Chief of Police and the Telephone Co. in the Police Station, but the energetic person who "rang up" and got connection with the station became so excited that he forgot to give the necessary information and left his phone. Citizens will kindly remember in case of fire promptly. Be sure to say the words "fire" and "81." Also that a moment's delay may be particular to the Police Officer at the Police Station. The officials at the Telephone office and Police Station can be depended upon to do their duty.

The passenger train was derailed by the shock. Two of the injured were taken to a Dublin hospital.

FRANCE HAS NEW PROPOSALS TO MAINTAIN BIRTHRATE

Paris, Jan. 6.—Because of the falling birthrate in France there is a proposal that any person who dies childless shall be permitted to leave only one tenth of his property to his kin and that the remaining nine tenths shall be distributed among the citizens who have more than three children.

TOBACCO "WAR" IS COSTLY

Regular Tobacconists to Make Combined Effort to Put an End to the Price Cutting Competition

The "tobacco war," which was declared about the beginning of December, seems likely to "end in smoke" before long. There was a meeting yesterday of a wholesale and retail tobacconists, who came to the conclusion that they would have to work together and do something to put an end to the price-cutting campaign being carried on by certain "chain" or "syndicate" stores. A general meeting was held last night at Toronto when a decision was reached as to what the trade generally—which represents some 3,000 dealers—can do to protect themselves. Some of the bargains offered by the contending interests, the 'regular' tobacconist is meeting a serious loss in patronage. Of course, it is expensive for the price-cutters, too.

At present it is cigarette users who are benefitting, chiefly, certain popular brands selling retail at less than wholesale cost. Well known lines of cigars are also down materially, as are numerous varieties of "smoking mixtures."

The reduced prices due to the rate cutting has helped a lot in reducing the smuggling of cigarettes from the U. S., which began after the tariff changes had caused a boost in the here.

LOOK OUT FOR BAD CHEQUES

Warning Issued to Western Ontario Police

Gentleman May Work Eastward and Try to Operate

London, Ont., Jan. 6.—Another cheque faker is on the warpath in western Ontario.

So far his operations have been confined to Hamilton where yesterday he passed a worthless cheque for $600 but when last seen he was headed for this city, and his next effort may be undertaken here. Police departments all over western Ontario have been advised to be on the lookout for the faker.

This is the second case of cheque manipulation to come to the city lately, the local police within the last few weeks. The case of the slick gentleman who "borrowed" three London banks out of sums approximating $3,500 is still the subject of keen investigation, although to date clues are lacking as to the whereabouts of the mysterious Mr. "Simpson" or "Palmer" who worked London banks with a hoary trick. It is understood that the gentleman's real name is Farmelo, and that previous to coming to London he lived for a time in the eastern townships of Quebec.

WOMAN AND LOVER TO HANG AT SAME HOUR TUESDAY NEXT

Will be First Execution of Woman in 15 Years in England

A SOLEMN CLIMAX

Few People Sought Reprieve For Mrs. Thompson

London, Jan. 5—The executions of Mrs. Percy Thompson and Frederick Edwards Bywaters next Tuesday for the murder of the former's husband will take place at the same hour, but in separate prices. Mrs. Thompson will be hanged in Holloway Goal and Bywaters in Pentonville prison. When Mrs. Thompson goes to the gallows it will be the first execution of a woman in England for fifteen years.

The King still has power to override the edict of the courts and but the Home Office on the advice of his Ministers, but his intervention in such a situation would be unprecedented.

It is an exceptional crime that sends a woman to death in this country these days, as public sentiment in recent years has turned against such executions, but so great has been sympathy has been shown for the beautiful woman of thirty who, the testimony has established the heart of a mere youth and through cunning innocents, brought to the point of slaying her husband that they might be free to pursue their sinful associations.

Numerous people, it is true, have asked that she be reprieved because of her sex, but the movement as a whole, while shocked by the necessity of the death penalty, declined to take her part. On the other hand, nearly a million people signed petitions to the Home Office asking that Bywaters be reprieved on account of his youth and the mitigating circumstances, but the authorities held that the law must take its course.

Thus ends a case which has stirred the country to its depths, and which takes a leading place in the annals of England's great murder trials.

MEETING OF PROPERTY OWNERS IN CITY HALL

A LARGE ATTENDANCE

Corby Baths, Coleman Ward School, Cinder Tracks, Market Lease, Pollution of the Moira—Mayor-Elect Bennett and Some Aldermen There—Resolutions Passed

The meeting of the Tax Payers' Association was held evening held in the Council Chamber and was largely attended.

As the chairman, Mr. W. H. Panter had not yet arrived when the meeting started, Mr. W. C. Mikel addressed the gathering. He said that no personalities would be allowed, but that the city's business and affairs would be discussed, and that the purposes of the organization was not to support any disgruntled faction to dictate to any civic bodies such as the Council or School Board. It was the purpose of the organization to try and have current interest in the affairs of the city. He said that it was regretable that so small a percentage of citizens voted at the last election. He urged that the organization get interested in the affairs of the city and have every voter get out and vote and get over the idea of being driven to the polls. Mr. Mikel referred to the ancient city of Athens, that its greatness was due to its unity and organization. He said that the loyalty of the citizens that Aristides when banished from the city still continued to work for the good of Athens, and that he explained that similar conditions existed in Rome.

Mr. Mikel said that it was one of the intentions of this meeting that the Council take up the matters of the past year of interest to the city.

Corby Baths was an unfortunate question. Senator Corby gave $650.00 towards baths to be built in Queen Victoria Park. Five years have passed by and we have not yet built them. It was only right that we should carry out this contribution. The money could not be diverted to any other use. Belleville has a beautiful waterfront and we had not a proper place to dress or to swim. Another question was the Coleman Ward school. Special circumstances have arisen which have compelled citizens to take interest in the matter. The contract called for the erection of a school by October 15th. The school is not completed and the contractor has appealed to the citizens of Belleville through the public press for an extension of time. Application in the erection of the school, also letters from the architect have been written taking a different line which are quite serious and called for the citizen's special consideration. It was a serious matter, when the citizens had agreed to get their education.

We should get experts and investigate these matters and find out the reason why it is that such troubles have arisen. The question of insurance was also one of the subjects named for discussion. We pay too much for insurance. A new method should be adopted the city's insurance and the association would look into the matter and if it was necessary to pay so much money in premiums.

Mr. Hunter—I invited Mr. Manley, Mr. Mikel and Mr. Jarvis, architect, here to-night.

Mr. J. Lang—I want to know if the fees have been paid on the school.

Mr. Mikel—I know nothing except what I saw in the papers.

Mr. Lang—The committee is not to blame. The inspector who was paid to look after the work should be held responsible.

Mr. J. Manley—The work has been carried out according to plans and specifications and the building is found to stand by what we have said in the papers, and we invite the public to inspect the work.

Mr. W. A. Woodley—Was there any specified time?

Mr. Manly—It was to October 15th, we were held up on account of strikes and delay in securing brick.

At this part of the meeting Mr. Woodley moved to have minutes of last meeting read but the chairman Mr. W. H. Panter, had arrived. Minutes were then read and approved.

Mr. Panter, president, then took over the meeting. He said he was pleased to see such a large attendance. He said, every expenditure of the city was charged to the ratepayers and they which was mortgaged for that much money. The tax rate was about 42½ and it was no inducement for manufacturers to

XMAS TREE AT EMMANUEL CH.

Annual Prize Distribution and Splendid Concert—Rev. Marshall Presided

The annual Christmas tree and prize distribution took place on Friday evening, at Emanuel Sunday School, there was a good crowd present, both adults and children.

The rector, Rev. George Marshall presided, and in extending a social welcome to the parents and friends of their scholars, alluded to the seemingly brief twelve months since they were assembled on a like occasion.

The parents were thanked for their co-operation, in the whole their children were punctual and regular in their attendance and he regarded that as an indication that everything at home looked after the getting them off in good time. The teachers appreciated that, and on their behalf he asked them as possible to take even a greater interest in the Sunday School, it would greatly assist their little ones to retain their lessons in mind if parents would encourage them to relate what they had been taught.

The scholars were then called upon to render the various items of the programme, which they did with great credit.

At the close scholars were all awarded book prizes, candies and oranges.

FIRST SESSION OF NEW COUNCIL

Inaugural Meeting Will Take Place on Monday Morning

At 11 o'clock on Monday morning the inaugural meeting of the City Council for 1923 will take place and the prospects are that it will be an interesting event. The chairmen of the various civic committees will be selected, members of the Board of Health appointed, three members to the High School Committee at the Board of Education and two members on the Public Library Board. Some other matters of interest will no doubt be brought up.

MUSIC and DRAMA

HENRY B. WALTHALL AND MARGUERITE SNOW AT REGENT.

To think of all the Universal film stars coming to think about them, and Jack Conway, the picture he has directed have invariably left their impress on the popular mind. Such a possibility is "The Love Charm," which is being exhibited at the Regent tonight and in which Henry B. Walthall, Marguerite Snow and Ralph Graves costar, it is a gripping Peter B. Kyne story of youthful love and the lovers gold and it well worth seeing.

A Vodvil Novices with the high class vaudeville program at the Grand Weight" comedy and amusing Century comedy with Reverzie and the Wonder dog playing an important part, and Pathe News, are being exhibited on the same program.

FIVE REEL MACK SENNETT COMEDY AT REGENT MONDAY—"BEAUTY AND THE BEAST" WITH US AGAIN.

Mack Sennett's latest and greatest Five Reel comedy for First National, titled, "Home Talent" has been booked for the Regent, Belleville, for offering at the Regent, Belleville, Monday to Wednesday, matinee daily, from all accounts from other cities where it has been exhibited it is rated as the best production that has emanated from the Sennett studios in many months. The entire company of famous Sennett frankness appear in this comedy and includes Ben Turpin, Phyllis Haver, Charlie Murray, "Dot" Farley, Harold Hammond, James Finlayson, Andy Clyde, Eddie Cribbon, and Kala Pasha. The closing chapter of the popular "Lotus Crusoe" serial, a two-reel Vitagraph comedy, and a tropical reel are being exhibited on the same program.

KU KLUX KLAN SEEN IN "COME CLEAR CALL."

"One Clear Call," the First National attraction which will be the feature at Griffin's Monday to Wednesday belongs to the local amusement field one of the most illustrious contributions of the heart ballad of different author-cast transivrists that has ever been interested in the same production. Some of the best of the current productions are "The Child Thou Gavest Me" and "The Song of Life." Frances Nordon, who is one of the country's foremost fiction writers, is responsible for the story.

Henry B. Walthall, a favorite of long standing, has the lead.

"One Clear Call" finds its locale in a small southern town where the routine of daily life is interrupted by the arrival of a sweet faced woman of mystery at the local hospital. Dr. Hamilton, the leading physician, falls in love with her; but the shroud of his affection is followed by her sudden disappearance. Nightly riding of the Ku Klux Klan and a tense climax that combines romance with thrills brings the story to a surprising and unusual end.

"Hello Man" is the title of a Century comedy which is being presented on the same program along with a two-reel Jack London Sea Story, and a novelty reel.

"THE DOVES ROAD" WITH ORIGINAL CAST HERE FRIDAY.

An interesting aberration at Griffin's next Friday night, January 12th, and Lee and J. J. Shubert's presentation of Guthrie McClinic's "The Dove Road," the comedy by A. A. Milne which first established Mr. McClinic among Broadway producers, and had a run of ten months in New York and has just had four prosperous weeks in Chicago. The original cast headed by Charles Cherry and including Molly Pearson, Kathleen Comegys, Reginald Mason, Agnes Scott, George Riddell and others will be seen here.

Charles Cherry, last seen in Canada in the "Scandal," gives one of the mellowest and most delightful performances of his long career, as Mr. Latimer, a wealthy English gentleman, living on the Dover Road, who spends his time and money to further the love affairs of the many runaway couples who pass his home. Cherry gives a notable illustration of the art of good acting. Mr. Latimer doesn't always have an easy time with his eloping couples. They recently have had their plans interfered with by an utter stranger, and some of the men, learned, for instance, become quite disheartened. But Latimer with the aid of Dominie, his large, efficient butler, smooths matters and every affair ends with an assurance that one of the parties, at least, will "live happy ever after." He saves June and Jonathan, two charming girls, from unsatisfactory marriages and wins a loving wife for himself.

The play is clean and refreshingly wholesome. There are no triangles, just lots of funny situations and lines which send the audience away chuckling in its sleeves at the antidotes Mr. Latimer's meddling. Every part is perfectly acted by perhaps the best company to be seen on a local stage this year. Mr. McClinic has staged his play in perfect taste. There are three acts and four scenes.

GREAT CAST ASSEMBLED IN PARAMOUNT PICTURE, "IS MATRIMONY A FAILURE?"

There are six married couples represented in the cast of "Is Matrimony a Failure?" the new Paramount special comedy, directed by James Cruze which is the feature of Griffin's Grinding tonight.

As suggested by the title this is a comedy of matrimonial errors and although the picture portrays the difficulties in a highly humorous vein, the question, it doesn't attempt to answer it, which, as it begins, will be a large interrogation point.

The six families are played by the following well known screen artists: T. Roy Barnes and Lila Lee, Lois Wilson and Wallace MacDonald, Kate Price and Hobart Bosworth, Lillian Leighton and Tully Marshall, Sylvia Ashton and Chris Haefeli and Charles Ogle and Ethel Wales. In addition to these there are several other important characters, which made this cast one of the largest assemblages of screen luminaries ever seen.

The story across "The Open Door" was the basis for this new comedy, which was scenarized by Walter Woods.

"Toonerville's Trials," another of the Toonerville Trolley series, a interesting Travelogue, and a reel a year of the "Buffalo Bill" serial are being exhibited on the same program, ranging from last night's interval taken by the crowd in attendance the bill is a completely balanced one, favorite people appearing and all is led with such film, as that Fontaine Fox Creation of Toonerville and the feature picture regarding the trials and tribulations of married life, is well worth going miles to see. It is to be hoped that Manager Forbes will book many pictures of as equal quality as he has running this week.

34th BATTERY TEAM TRIMS NAPANEE SQUAD

In a Rather Listless Game Last Night the Locals Did Not Have to Extend Themselves

FINAL SCORE 9-4

Whalen Played and Fields Was in Harness Again—Visitors Entertained to Oyster Supper After the Match—Local Team Now Have Two Wins Tucked Away

Score 9—4.

The 34th Battery jumped into first place in the Bay of Quinte League by virtue of their win over the Napanee team in a rather listless game here last evening. The visitors were outclassed in every department and it was only when the Gunners eased up on the play that they managed to score. The locals have a speedy outfit, and from all appearances are due to rep the silverware. The team is practically made up of ex-O.H.A. players, some of whom played together for years.

The ice was in good condition and a fair-sized crowd was present.

The Napanee team showed a decided lack of team-play; their passing was wide and erratic, and their shooting was far from being accurate. On securing the puck, they attempted to pass Belleville's impregnable defence, which was almost an impossible proposition, Belleville have a well-balanced aggregation, and it will take a fast team to trim them. They screw it fortified in net guardiant with Fields and Clapper. The latter was between the posts last Monday when the Young Irishmen were handed a trimming, and he showed considerable class. Last evening Hibbard was given an opportunity to show his wares and he turned in a stellar exhibition. The Napanee forwards bombarded him with shots but they failed to register. He picked off the long shots with the ease of a veteran, and clean, nicely. It will be a merry battle for the net position between him and Clapper, both first-class performers.

Bill Fields played his first game with the Battery and has lost none of his old time speed. He used his weight to good advantage, and rushed well. Bill Canning, his partner on the defence, put up his usual steady game. His rushing and all-round playing was a treat.

Ted Whalen, who is old-timer of the game, worked in nicely at centre. He dazzled the opposing forwards with his brilliance. Dan Whalen worked hard and out-guessed his man time after time. His bullet shot was working like a charm. He always managed to pass the disc at the opportune moment. Sammy Symons, the veteran of them all, was there with the goods. Some say his hockey days are over, but Sammy is still there with the punch.

Albert Armstrong, the youngest member of the team; subbed on the forward line. "Army" is a hard worker and will no doubt prove a valuable acquisition to "Butch" Brisbin's outfit.

Nap Goyer, the remaining member of the squad, is a very consistent player and is improving rapidly in every performance. He possesses a wicked shot which is bound to worry the opposing goalie.

The homesters did not work themselves into exhaustion, but took things easy after they had secured a good lead. Babcock, who replaced Vanalstine in the nets for the losers, had a very busy night and kept the score from mounting into the teens. Vanalstine had a nasty habit of chopping the Belleville sharpshooters over the shins, and the management decided to replace him. His goal keeping was rather weak. Smith, at centre, and Loucks on defence, did the scoring and looked the best of the visitors. They got in some wide-open shots on the net, but in the majority of cases they missed the goal entirely.

Shaw, Hall handled the bell and kept the play fairly well in hand. The visitors treated the vanquished to an oyster supper in the Battery headquarters after the game.

With two games tucked away, the locals have a good lead in the race. The story of the game by periods follows:

First Period.

Play opened fast, and both goalies were kept busy. Daw Whalen opened the scoring after three minutes of play. Sammy Symons also scored after the locals had continued to bombard the enemy net. Smith tallied for Napanee on a nice shot. Ted Whalen drew the first penalty for tripping. Armstrong netted number three for the homesters. Finkle was sent to the house-gow for an accidental trip. Canning scored on a mix-up in front of the goal. Vanalstine and Canning had a slight set-to, but it was amicably settled. Score, 4-1.

Second Period.

Babcock replaced Vanalstine in the nets for the visitors. Play was fast and Babcock saved nicely on several occasions. Daw and Huffam came to blows and both got the gate. Play centred around the Napanee net but the Gunners could not score. Finkle finally shoved one past Babcock for the initial tally of the period. Symons let Huffman's skate and the rubber rebounded into the net. Canning solod through and scored on a nice shot. The visitors' shots were high and they could not find the net. Score 7-1.

Third Period.

Napanee were given many chances to score but failed to dent the twine. Babcock saved some hot ones. Nap Goyer shoved one in from a mix-up. The locals merely toyed with Napanee and then they couldn't score. Smith dented the twine for the visitors' second counter. Ted Whalen scored Belleville's ninth goal. Loucks added number three for the visitors, and tallied again a few minutes later. Final score, 9-4.

The line-up of the teams was as follows:

Barrett—referee.

SCOTTISH CURLERS LOSE

SHOW IMPROVEMENT

Second Day at Halifax Gave Them Three Wins and Draw on Thirteen Rinks

The touring Scottish curlers won five of their thirteen games at Halifax Thursday and drew one. The winning visiting skips were—J. Keanie (Renfrew); Col. Aikman (Scotland); M. H. Kennedy (Dumbarton); W. R. Jackson (Renfrew); H. Bramwell (Dumfries). In addition J. McGoosh (Border) played a draw.

The visitors did much better in the aggregate than on the first day and were beaten only 136 to 132.

The Scottish team was entertained to a farewell banquet before leaving for New Glasgow, where they play today. They go to Truro for Monday; St. John, Tuesday; Quebec, Thursday.

Some Notes On the Scots

"What's sendin' they curler folk over from Scotland, Sandy?"

"Dae ye no hear, Geordie? Whusky's up to half a crown a dram and they're driven to ither forms of diversion."

Six different tartans are worn by the Scottish curlers. So if they curl as fiercely as they look the Canadian clubs should find them pretty tough packing.

Some curlers merely want to play against the Scotchmen in order to improve their golf accent.

O. H. A. JUNIORS GO TOO TRENTON MONDAY

Belleville juniors are playing at Trenton on Monday, January 8, instead of Tuesday, January 9, the date originally scheduled.

STATUS OF PICTON PLAYER UNDECIDED

Further information will be required regarding the removal of Fred Heffernan of Picton to Oshawa last spring. This will be furnished by the Oshawa Club at the request of Port Hope.

WILLIAMS NOT ELIGIBLE

New evidence was produced in the case of Russell Williams, and his residence was defined as Bowmanville. Williams has been employed in Oshawa for the past four years, but last summer, to play baseball in the Central Iodoor League, declared his residence as Bowmanville, where his mother lives, and it was decided that there is where he should play hockey.

CO-OPERATIVE MOVEMENTS

Although the exchange in courtesies and the different addresses made at the recent Dairymen's Convention, held later this week, have been obviously sincere and befitting the occasion, yet, the one outstanding feature of the gathering was the opportunity of personal discussion and the periods of open discussion at the meetings. Much indefensible and incommunicable talent was present which was given only another bashful in coming forward with ideas, but one significant item which was put forward, and particularly so, in view of the pressing arguments for co-operative movement, was the communication presented by Mr. Mark Sprague, cheese exporter, of this city, stating that the Co-operative Union of British Columbia had miserably failed in their endeavors, showing a deficit for the year of nearly $300,000. In this letter it was stated that the independent shippers were far more successful in their trading, and, naturally, the trading will cause considerable thinking by those individuals who have been more or less converted to co-operative marketing by the forceful arguments presented at the convention. The failure of the U.F.O. stores this last season is another centre case, and while it is admitted that the Government Department's have shown no laxity or laggardness in their energetic spirit relative to the movement, is there not a slight chance that such steady pressure, permeating throughout these Departments, displayed with such vigor and vigilance, has resulted in too great a degree of heighth efficiency in the planning and inauguration of co-operative marketing plans? From those too confident in any movement, there are apt to be exaggerated ideas presented to substantiate more forcibly the plans in progress.

The country does not want to see the Government deviate from their true administrative capacity, to set itself up as a gigantic middleman, financing and regulating the distribution of farm products. Nothing which calls for trade exemptions or arbitrary nationalization of credit deserves anything but commendation, and when governments begin to pull down the commercial institutions of the country, their ever destruction is foretold, and no government should ever appear to sanction and injure the great institutions of trade, which are and have been symbolic of our country's nobility of aspiration and the agents of its high development.

It is not denied that governments should not assist to the highest degree in their power to open channels of trade and keep them open. Officials should be continually investigating and supplying the public with the latest information, tariffs and trade agreements should be so constructed and entered into that there will be no hindrance to foreign commerce. No national patriotism should be placed in the way of trade; but when reports and economic theories movements are not successful, much care and forethought should be given the proposals before they are finally entered into.

RUSHING INTO DEBT

Curious that the Drury Government, members of which shouted so loudly before attaining office of economy in provincial affairs, should now be attacked from all sides for the vice of extravagance. Citizens may watch with mild interest, or even amusement, the U.F.O. wrangle over "broadening out," but when it comes to continual increases, by many millions, in the expenses of Government and in Ontario's debt, there is no comic side to it. When the Government administration achieved power in 1919 the provincial debt was $67,000,000; Today it is $204,000,000 and will undoubtedly be much greater by the close of the fiscal year. Actual rubbing expenses have increased in similar proportion.

Not only is the farming community concerned over what is going on; financiers also declare it is time to call a halt. It is not enough for Premier Drury to declare that bigger grants are now being paid for education in the rural sections, that the roads are costing huge amounts, and so on. The people know all this—especially those in the urban sections, for if the Drury administration had ousted the rural districts it has made it more difficult for the dwellers in urban sections to live by the manner in which taxes are piled on.

"There are different methods of piling on the taxes, and Hon. Mr. Raney and his colleagues appear to have studied those methods out very nicely.

If the Ontario Government is suing education liberally it might be interesting for Mr. Raney to tell how much of the increase comes from the Dominion Government, which under Conservative administration made large grants for Provincial industrial education, agricultural developments and good roads.

If it were not for the fact that Ontario has its Hydro and other investments good security for some of the outlay, the situation would be viewed more seriously than it is. Some curtailment in expenditure, however, will have to be made and the Drury Government does not appear to be strong enough to take a firm stand in this or any other respect.

PASSINGCOMMENT

Too many young college fellows are at present devoting themselves to the accumulation of a past to live down.

The resources of civilization are not yet exhausted. If New York and New England combine to cut off our hard coal supply we can always retaliate by cutting off New York and New England's supply of hard liquor.

o o o

Hydro-Radialists complain that Sir Henry Thornton talks too much. But we wouldn't care to back him in a talking match with Sir Adam Beck.

The latest proposal in the way of forest conservation is made by Premier Poincare of France. It is that France take over and keep Germany's timber resources.

Peterborough's police magistrate has given due notice that after New Year's Day all speed fiends brought before him will receive the maximum penalty. This can be regarded as a kindly aid to the forming of good New Year resolutions by speed-fiends.

And of course if the application of the Six Nations Indians were granted and they were admitted into the League of Nations, they would demand that they be conceded six votes in the League assembly—one for each nation.

We heard a man say that a Progressive was merely a ripe Liberal. No, he did not say over-ripe.

The operating deficit of the National Railways was cut down $17,000,00 last year. That is an achievement worth bragging about. Hanna has set the pace for Thornton in economy.

Every person who stamps a receipt has a right to regard himself as a business partner of the federal government.

Here's hoping that new leaf which was to have been turned over, has not yet been turned down.

Oddly enough, now that the new stamp regulation is in force, receipts mean expenditures.

The new year is very young, but is it too young to have outlasted that good resolution already

o o o

Now that the Toronto municipal elections are over it is sincerely to be hoped the city press will recover from its journalistic hydro-phobia.

Slate-making for the chairmanships of the various committees should now be confined to the aldermen themselves.

Perhaps this may have happened in Belleville Monday:

"And whom did you vote for, Miss Sophy?"

"Well, you see, the Conservative candidate was simply stunningly good-looking. But the Liberal had always been splendid to his family, so I marked both ballots, closed my eyes, shuffled them, put one in the box and love up the other. Nothing could be fairer than that."

HERE AND THERE

ORIGIN OF THE FLAPPER

This "modern" term, "flapper," as most persons think it is, really is nearly two centuries old. Early in the seventeen hundreds growing-up girls were first called "flappers," from a fancied resemblance to young geese, neither fledgling nor grown-up, but dashing about with a good deal of noise and flapping of wings.

For geese in this stage "flapper" has always been a sportsman's term, but the word has only within the last few years been revived in connection with girls.

A secondary meaning is probably derived from Miss Flapper's pigtail, with its broad ribbon bow flapping against the nape of her neck.

GATES.

I like to pass thru a gate. I like to open and shut a gate. I like to look at beautiful gates.

Gates have great meanings.

But I do not like cold, big gates that shut out human sympathy and emphasize ownership and superior worldly reward. I like to see an open gate, an unlocked gate easily opened.

When I was a boy I used to see gates that were opened by pulling a rope and adjusting a long pole that made the gate latch as it swung open for you.

A winding path—often trod by many feet—passing thru a gate or a series of gates,—can you think of anything more romantically restful and appealing?

I like to think of life as a little journey thru many gates. Every once in a while I like to retrace my footsteps and go back to the gate that I have learned to pass thru and again experience the thrill of youth or of past associations—and then come back again to the task at hand, beyond the last gate.

I don't like locks on gates, tho. I want anybody to come into my life at any time and ask me questions, talk to me, exchange thoughts and thereby help me better to mingle as a human traveller in the world.

The happiest people are those with the most people in their lives.

How many truths have been made at gates! There the little toddlers from the home door have waited for the father or the mother.

Gates should never be made to keep people out—but to let them in.—George Matthew Adams.

PRESS OPINIONS.

THE REPARATIONS QUESTION

Kingston Daily Whig

It would appear to be the opinion of statesmen and of financial experts that before anything like settled conditions throughout the world can come about the question of the Hun reparations must be satisfactorily dealt with. The great mistake with regard to these was that they were fixed by the Treaty of Versailles at a sum which it was impossible for the Huns to pay. It would be rather interesting to know who was responsible for this; but such a mistake can be easily forgiven in view of the huge sum which the Huns had accumulated in their great, and, so far as they could be made, secret, preparations for the war they had determined to wring upon the world. If they could do this, it was a fair assumption that the reparations which they could and should be made to pay in the same measure for the ruin and destruction they had wrought which they had caused in the world.

The British Premier has now come to the conclusion that any definite fixing this matter, to which, however, France does not seem agreeable, and British opinion appears to be that of Mr. Boner Law, that it is absurd to try to force the Huns to pay such enormous sums as would practically bankrupt them. That would most certainly not aid in bringing prosperity to the world. What the end of the whole matter will be no one seems able to say but that some method must be found to settle it is very obvious. It would did this if the United States would help, and there are indications that its Government is quietly bringing its influence to bear.

There is one point which ought to be clearly set up, and that is are the Huns up to their old deceitful tricks? Are they hiding money or sending it out of the country? Are there any reports which have appeared this does not appear to be unlikely.

CANADA AND AUSTRALIA

Kitchener News-Record

The net public debt of Canada on November 30th was $2,391,635,818. Australia's national debt is $4,210,-000. The sister Commonwealth has only five millions of people, lacks Canada's resources, assets, and is minus all the natural wealth we possess. As compared with Australia Canada's burden of debt is a light one, and with reasonable economy for a few years we should be able to set our national house in order.

THE BOOTLEGGERS' PARADISE

(Literary Digest)

In the bar-rooms, at the dining-tables, in the lobbies and on the porches of the hotels and boarding houses at Nassau, the capital city of the Bahama Islands, the bootleggers and whiskey smugglers "talk of their plans, tell of their profits and laugh at Uncle Sam." There, according to Frank K. Dolan, who went to the Bahamas to study the rum-running methods for the New York Daily News, "a man is either 'right' or 'queer'." If a man is suspected of being "queer"—thought to be a revenue officer, a detective, or otherwise likely to interfere with the rum-smugglers' operations—"he is curtly told to leave town, and in some instances black-jacked and beaten." Nassau, Mr. Dolan tells us, is now the "Klondike of the Bootleg and smuggling trade" and a visit made under the "parched shadow" of the Volstead Law—millions for the Government if a man-o'-war's department that enforces a duty of $5.80 a case on all liquors that comes to the United States docks.

The lazy and dreamy old Nassau, that in other days traded in sponges and tropical fruits, is now a busy commercial centre. The sponge-boats are now used, Mr. Dolan tells us, as the small craft of the smugglers to reach South Atlantic coast of the United States, while vessels of all sizes that formerly were engoing tugs to a converted Spanish battle-cruiser, carry the cargoes to New York and the New England coast.

BOTH EXPIRED

The defendant, who was held in an Ohio court on the charge of stealing a dog without a license, repeatedly tried to interrupt the evidence, but was hushed each time by the court.

Finally the clerk turned to him and said: "Do you wish the court to understand that you refuse to renew your license?"

"Yes, but—"

"Then you won't, you must renew your license or be fined. You know it expired on January 1st."

"Yes," said the defendant, "and so did the dog."

Woman's Sphere

YOUR PLACE IN LIFE'S PLAN

Have you ever considered your place in life's plan
Should be larger than that which you fill;
Or have you unwittingly just settled down
In the grip of your grind and your grill?

Perhaps you have thought that you had no great show,
That the "plums" to the other men fell,
Now reckoned that greatness of spirit and pluck
Any bodies always will tell.

If you are ambitious to win in life's race
Think not of your ease or your rest;
The things that count most will come only to those
Who enter the contest with zest.

Yet, not just the hours for which you draw pay
Is what your best work will be
But the fine you make of the leisure you have
Is more.
Count most in the race which you run.

Then tighten your belt and take on a new stride—
Be home who falters and shirks;
Make much of the hours as they come,
to your hand—
He wins who both wields and works.
—Fred Scott Shepard.

WINNERS LOSERS IN GAME
SALVATION ARMY GETS POT.

St. Catharines, Jan. 4.—"The pot will go to the Salvation Army," said Magistrate J. H. Campbell in the Police Court. He was talking to a young man who was one of a party who had been fined for playing hockey on Sunday.

"It was not much of a game to the winners as a rummy game," protested the man.

"Pity, that is the case."

The "pot" was $1.75, which the police had gathered from the table.

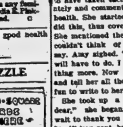
YOUR GRINDERS

When war broke out in August, 1914, the medical examination of the volunteers was the first thing necessary. Would you believe it, nearly seven men in every twenty of the first lot of volunteers were rejected owing to the loss, or condition of the "back" teeth.

The majority of the first contingent were Englishmen, and bitter was their comment upon the regulations.

It was at that time that their plaint went up "We don't want to eat the Germans we want to fight them."

And what were these terrible requirements. Would you believe it? All the Militia Department required was that the man should have one upper and one lower tooth that met one another on either side of his mouth.



Think of that for a moment. He has three upper and three lower grinders on each side. He could be minus ten of these twelve and yet be accepted. Yet we lost, as I said before, about seven in every twenty.

Now why are these grinders so important.

Their name tells the reason. Our front teeth are simply to bite off a portion of food. They have no real action beyond this. The grinders or back teeth, however, separate the little food that is thus bitten off and permit it to be moistened by the saliva and changed chemically. Unless ground up fine in this manner, the food would enter the stomach in an unfit state and indigestion with its attendant evils would ensue.

Any kind of food is good food, but it needs some chewing, some grinding. Hence the Militia regulations regarding teeth. Fortunately the Department somewhat later permitted the use of good "fitting "plates", and thousands more were thus enabled to go overseas. Don't neglect your back teeth. If any are missing have them replaced. It is a good health investment.

LINKED LIVES

By

D. Kinmount Roy

'Ah!' the man said, with a malicious gleam, "Is that more you know best?" and he looked around the room significantly, remarking, 'It appears to me you have a few things to know; but I have led a wandering dog's life, and may not understand the sweets of comfort. Or perhaps you forget such little things.'

'I forget nothing,' the Squire said sharply; 'you remember the letter.'

'The Lord help you then,' Kinkman said piously; 'I sometimes lie awake at night myself.'

'Is that so?' the Squire questioned sr, and now that I think of it, it is indifferently. 'I am an excellent sleeper-rather late, or early, I should say.'

'You are right, Squire,' the fellow said, holding out his hand. Hardcastle reflected a moment; he was clearly at a disadvantage; this situation must end, and it was now nearly dawn. In fact, he had no choice.

'You must answer my question,' he said, with as much dignity as he could command, 'and if you do, I will double what I have promised.'

'There now!' Kinkman said, rising with alacrity, 'that is spoken like your old self!'

It never troubled Hardcastle to pay money for the furthermore of his own liberty; he had no scruples in that line, if he course of his life to shake his faith in money as the great moving power of the world—but he hated to pay to Kinkman was soon ready for his journey.

'Well, about the girl?' Hardcastle asked.

'She is in London,' the fellow answered, 'Maitland can tell you where to find her.'

For a moment the Squire stood in silence, then he said, 'Maitland!' he gasped, 'and known to Maitland! Wretch! Traitor!' he hissed in a sudden torrent of passion, and drawing a pistol he covered Kinkman with unerring aim. He was one of the best shots of his day, and Kinkman knew it. The miserable creature turned deathly pale, his shaken wits rose at peril to both, who can say? He handled his own weapon with cold, nervous fingers, while his eyes never moved from the Squire's face, and then, either by accident or design, he allowed it to drop.

'Fire!' he shouted in a frenzied defence- less, 'fire, and have done with it. A dead man is no worse than a dead wo- man, and there was no doubt make suitable explanations. Perhaps the one may balance the other!'

The Squire's figure thundered, forgetting all prudence, 'pick up this thing!' and he kicked the pistol toward him with supreme contempt; but instead of giving him time to obtain it, he seized him, and shaking him in the fulness of his wrath, he thrust him out into the night, which was then darkening toward dawn.

He had hardly closed the shutters when there was a knock at the door. The Squire opened instantly. It was McGregor.

'I thought I heard voices, sir?' the man said, with a look of concern.

'So you did, McGregor,' the Squire said, promptly. 'I had an unpleasant visitor, and was glad to get rid of him; he is gone now, fortunately, and I have decided to make the journey I had intended before those gentlemen came. Call Jenks, without disturbing any one, and tell him to make haste.'

'What? now sir?'

'Yes, now of course, and without delay. Meanwhile, can you put the Squire's things together?'

'Oh yes, sir!' the fellow answered, evidently well-pleased to be of special use.

While Hardcastle was carrying out his master's orders, the Squire made some hasty preparations for his journey.

'Explain the matter to the gentlemen in the house,' he said, as he entered the carriage, 'and beg them to wait my return. Mr. Maitland will entertain them, of course, he is a capital hand at that sort of thing, and enjoys it thoroughly.' In all the years the man had served Hardcastle, he had never known him make such an unreasonable journey, and with such slight preparation; but he concluded the Squire knew his own business, and Hardcastle knew his sufficiently to observe the master's movements in silence.

CHAPTER XIV.

A SICK MAN AND AN EVIL CONSCIENCE.

It was a grave enough party that sat down to breakfast next morning.

Maitland could not conceal his keen disappointment at Hardcastle's sudden such a move on the part of the Squire, for of course none of them were in the secret of his affairs, or aware that his journey had been decided upon before their coming, and was only hastened by the information he extracted from Kinkman.

Sherwin was the only one in fair good humour. He was immensely pleased with himself. To his thinking, Hardcastle was the prince of good fellows, and in his heart he vowed eternal gratitude to him. In fact, it was to the Squire's purse he owed his delightful, if only for a short time, to do the honours of Fosseway in the name of the Squire, a piece of good luck quite unlooked for.

After opening weak yesterday, the New York market has regained most of its overnight losses, and many of the issues show substantial gains. Baldwin is up 1¾ at 127¾, Prod. & Ref., 1 point at 49, Studebaker 1¾ at 119¾, Coca-Trucks 1¾ at 68¾, Ind. Alcohol 1¾ at 68¾, Chandler 1¾ at 69¾, and Amer. Can. 1¾ at 79¾. Rails are very quiet, and no special activity is to be noted amongst the industrials. No important losses have been suffered since the opening today.

W. W. Butler New Director For Hattie Gold Mines, Ltd.

At a special meeting of the directors of the Hattie Gold Mines, Ltd., W. W. Butler, president of the Canadian Car & Foundry Co., Montreal, was appointed to the board. Mr. Butler replaces the late John Irving on the board, and along with a Montreal syndicate has taken over his holdings in the Hattie company. The other directors are as follows: W. F. St. Charles, Arthur G. Slaght, Carlos Arsenld and John K. Papanicolaou. Mr. Butler is a brother of Mr. E. J. Butler, local barrister.

Silver.

The history of the ill-fated Farmers' Bank, which pinned its faith on the Cobalt silver and went broke largely through financing it, is recalled by the statement of the board of directors of Goldfields of Wonderful Lake, which is now operating the Keeley. He states that profits on the Lorrain silver property have been considerable despite the low price of silver that a dividend will be paid early this year.

The three big gold producers all advanced substantially yesterday. Dome 50, McIntyre 10¼, and Hollinger to 12½, while Lake Shore slipped to 2.60. "Broken hold that the mining market is running true to form and that a move extended and violent is likely very soon, embracing cheaper stocks.

Formal announcement is made of a combination of West Shining Tree properties, predicted in these columns some time ago. The company will be known as West Shining Tree Consolidated Mines, Ltd., and will embrace nine unpatented claims. Its capital is placed at $5,000,000 and it will embrace Churchill, Atlas and Algonquin and Buckingham on a two for one basis. Wahanda and West Tree on a four to one, and Miller Adair on a three for one basis.

The Wheat Situation.

Unfavorable political developments in Europe coupled with heavy sellings of cash interest in Chicago and at Winnipeg for foreign account, resulted in a break to a new low on the present down-turn, and while the flurry was on a small rally, not losses were ¾c to 9c, with May leading. Winnipeg was off 1¾c. Corn was unsettled, being strong early and weak later and lost ¾c to 1¾c. Oats were ¾c to c lower and rye off 1¾c.

At no time were wheat prices as high as the close of the previous day. Houses with foreign connections were free sellers of May early, and, with a weakened technical position as the result of the short-covering the previous day, a break was easily sustained. May dropped to $1.17¾, or 9c under the recent high, with stop loss orders caught at $1.18. But offerings around that figure were quickly absorbed on resting orders, and a big trade was in evidence every time the price slipped to around that price.

Prices of wheat—May, 1.18¾; July, 1.16¾; Sept., 1.07.

The Cotton Market.

One of the most exciting sessions experienced in some time occurred today. A heavy speculative buying movement during the morning rushed May to $7.10c, as high as that position has sold this season.

WHO PROVIDES STAMP WHEN PAY ROLL IS SIGNED

Interesting Point Arises in Connection With the New Receipt Tax

COST SALES ESCAPE

Counter Slips When Not Marked Paid Are Held To be Exempt

Who will pay for the two cent stamp which must be paid in all cases where an employee gives a receipt for his pay? This is one of the interesting questions that has arisen in connection with the receipt tax. It is a small matter, but some employers raise the point as to whether employers should not be made to affix the stamp to their receipts as a matter of principle, to show the latest tax on business.

The matter was taken up with a number of employers and the fact came to light that the tendency is away from taking a receipt for wages. Several of the largest employers of labor in Toronto and elsewhere have abolished such a plan, though they still pay their workers in cash. Some of the banks continue to employ the payroll but they state the matter of the stamp is such a small matter with them, they have not considered it. It is likely that the banks will affix the stamp in this case.

There is quite a rush to change cash registers. Many of these print on the customer's slip "This is a receipt." Such being the case a stamp is necessary. To get away from this the tax-imposing words are being removed from the registers. There seems, to be some confusion as to the counter slips of stores. However, the opinion generally held is that these slips are not taxable if they are not marked "paid" but if they are so marked the tax must be affixed. It seems agreed that the intention of the government was not to tax cash sales over the counter.

The stamp tax is much the same as the act in force in Great Britain where it was introduced in 1883 at 1d, and increased to 2d., in 1920.

The voluntary giving of a receipt is not compulsory, but subsection 3 of the Canadian Act provides that a penalty not exceeding $100.00 in case a person refuses to give a receipt duly stamped. And when a receipt is given—for an amount of $10.00 or upwards the affixing of the stamp, or the use of an embossed receipt, is compulsory. Where a payment of $10.00 or upwards is made, the dividing up of the amount paid, and the giving of a number of receipts, each for an amount less than $10.00, renders the person or firm who in this manner attempts to evade the law, liable to a penalty not exceeding $100.00 and duplicate as made out, now for a number."

"And when the customer wants to return or exchange the goods?"

"That won't may any difference. Very few of them present the slips now, anyway."

Belleville merchants do not seem to be having much trouble, but it is usual the new tax will be inconvenient until citizens become accustomed to the system.

In the meantime Collector of Customs Rorke Geoghan and his staff are busy answering enquiries and explaining the new tax tangles of a perplexed populace.

SOME FACTS ABOUT OUR NATIONALS

The Autumn Movement Summarized—Heavy Traffic

Despite the necessity of operating on the inadequate basis of refrigerator car supply at freight rates wrought about by a united opposition of Canadian cars by United States lines, the Canadian National Railways are completing the heavy autumn traffic season with record handlings in grain, live stock, coal, lumber, pulp and paper—practically all of the basic products of Canada.

Since the first of September, when the big prairie grain crop began to be moved, and when the rush of summer in both Canada and United States resumed work in the mines after the prolonged strike, the Nationals have been called upon to handle a tremendous tonnage, not alone in point of quantity, but in individual cars, in flat cars, box cars, pulp and lumber cars.

In the handling of the products of the pulp, paper and lumber mills—some shortage of freight cars developed as a result of conditions in the United States. An unprecedented volume of traffic, coupled with a shortage of freight cars to handle it, prevailed on United States lines as they could not furnish their proper share of cars for the international traffic originated in Canada. The chief market for the Canadian pulp, paper and lumber mills is in the U.S.A. The Canadian Nationals was well aware that the movement of key cars of equipment to U.S. would result in temporary loss of such cars, but since, on the other hand, a shortage of cars for from this international traffic would have resulted in the probable closing down of, and financial tie-up to the Canadian paper, pulp, and lumber industries, the C. N. R. perform protected these Canadian industries to the utmost of its ability and the large number of cars were loaded that moved south. Absolution followed, as had been expected. The National Lines made a logical and persistent effort with the neighboring United States lines, and with the American Railway Association to secure return of the cars with all promptness but the abnormal conditions prevented. Efforts of the organization, officers and employees, were bent the more strenuously to the task of meeting the local demands.

During September, October and November in 1922, the C. N. R. moves over its rails from the prairies in the head of the lakes 83,227,000 bushels an increase over 1921 of more than 18,000,000 bushels. In 1921 from September first to November 30th, only 811,916 bushels of grain were moved to eastern Canada for domestic use, and for exports to the Atlantic Seaboard over C. N. R. rails. This year, due largely to the severe congestion at southern lake ports, the total was 7,629,769 bushels an increase of 6,816,853 bushels, this increase is more than 8 times the total handled in the same months of 1921.

In the coal traffic the increase this season has been striking. Last year, during September, October and November, total of 646,465 tons of commercial coal were moved to market from Western Canada mines. This year the total was 300,135 tons an increase of more than 50 per cent or 340,670 tons. 1921, 1922.

In addition to this tonnage the "National" lines were called upon to handle a large output from the mines of the Maritime Provinces. There the sharp increases were registered in the figures of coal handled in months as compared with the same months in 1921. In September 1922 the total coal handled over lines in the be ne was 64,449 tons; in September 1921 the handlings totalled 108,091 tons In October, 1922 total was 171,17 tons, while in October 1922 some 115, 573 tons of coal were moved to market and in November 1922, the movement of tons shipped via the publicly owned rails in November 1922 there were 119,446 tons. In November 1921 there had to keep in view, along with the commercial coal, its own considerable supplies, in the total movement of Canadian coal during the autumn has been large and greatly in excess of that of 1921 for the same period.

During July, August, September and October this year, in Eastern Provinces, forest products other than pulpwood used 39,379 cars and pulpwood 10,979 cars.

During August September and October this year, a total of 9,111 cars were loaded with live stock (not Western Lines). These shipments being made mainly to the stockyards at Winnipeg, Calgary, Edmonton and Saskatoon.

A great number of cars were required east after passing through the stockyard at Winnipeg and the Canadian National accordingly handled to the Eastern Canadian points all rail, 2916 cars or 68 per cent. of this traffic, and into United States by way of Emerson 1370 or 85 per cent. of the total movement.

A very enjoyable evening was spent last night at the home of the Misses Madeline and Mona Dougherty, when they entertained their Sunday School class of Bridge street Methodist Church, "Help Others." LONDON TO ECOKOMIZE IN ELECTRICITY

London, Dec. 30—London's electric lighting bill will be cut by $5,000,000 yearly it is believed, when a project now in course of completion is made effective.

This providing for the uniting of all electrical supply companies in London and the suburbs, covering an area of 1000 square miles and affecting a population of close on eight million people. There will be only twelve generating stations in the whole area, against about fifty now in existence, and the saving will allow of a reduction in cost of something like 15 per cent per unit.

Mr. Arnold Kerr was in charge of the telegraph office at Picton recently while Mrs. Hamilton was away for a holiday.

MEETING OF PROPERTY OWNERS

locate here. No man could build a house for less than $2,000 and get $25 per month for same. Take a laboring man who works a lifetime to get a home; he must pay 4% on his investment in real estate. He thought we should impress upon the City Council the need of a lower tax rate. He referred to Coleman Ward school and the market lease. A resolution was passed. That the instructor and architect for King George School be requested to attend the next meeting of this Association to discuss the contract in reference to said school, also the Chairman of Site, Building and Repairs, be requested to attend and that the School Board be requested to authorize the Chairman to attend, also the architect should attend. Carried.

The next subject for discussion was the Corby Baths, which was a flughy one. Ald. McCreary suggested a more central place than Zwick's Island as also did Ald. Donoghue. Mr. Pauter thought Zwick's Island the proper place. Mayor-elect Bennett thought Victoria Park unsuitable as it would cost so much to have a solid earth bed there and that the $5000.00 bequeathed to the city would be insufficient.

Mr. Kerr, of South Front street, said that on account of the condition of the harbour from the Dundas street sewer and private sewers on Front street the park would be unsuitable for a bathing beach.

(Boyr Mayor) Bing Hayes said that speaking for the Junior Council, they were unfavorable to Zwick's Island as it was too far from the city. He suggested a site near the new dock which Mr. Panter spoke of sometime ago.

Mr. Panter said he thought Zwick's Island the proper place.

A lady in the audience told of a bathing beach at Worchester, England, which was on a river. It had two parts, one for boys and one for girls.

The matter was finally left for the City Council to ascertain if the Trustees and the Corby family would allow the beach to be built elsewhere than at Victoria Park.

Messrs. Woodley, Hope McGinnis and Ald. Greenleaf, spoke of the odor from the Moira River and different causes were assigned to the trouble.

The next question was the leasing of the Market to Mr. A. S. Large at $2000 per year when Mr. F. Kingsmer tendered $2220. Ald. Robinson and Donoghue spoke against the action of the Council which they were unanimously opposed to. Ald. McCreary and Foster tendered their reasons for favoring Mr. Large. Mayor-elect Bennett said he hoped that the matter would receive the attention of the 1923 Council because as yet, Mr. Large had not furnished suitable bonds as security.

Mr. Mikel introduced the insurance question and said that a local insurance firm had been paid $1000 more for accident insurance than another properly qualified firm would have given the same insurance for.

Ald. McCreary and Foster said they had fought it in council but that it was carried in spite of them. Ald. Donoghue endorsed the action of the council.

Mr. Mikel moved a motion "that the City Council be requested to furnish Association at the next meeting with a statement of the cost of insurance for accident and offers for same that were not accepted for the year 1922."

Motion carried.

On motion of Mr. Woodley the meeting was adjourned for one month in order that the Council would have the opportunity for meeting before the next meeting of the Association.

RUINED BY HIS BIRDE

Booth Tarkington was praising colored people.

"They have a hard time of it," he said. "Yet they never sour. They are, in fact, a delightful race.

"I know a minister who married a young colored couple.

"How much do wwes you, reverend?" the bridegroom asked at the ceremony's end.

ANOTHER NORTHERN DISASTER

Spruce Falls Mill is Scene of Fatal Outbreak—Officials Trapped in Big Blaze

DISASTROUS FIRE

Citizens Fight Flames For Twelve Hours in 46 Below Zero Weather

Kapuskasing, Jan. 7.—Two men lost their lives here today in a fierce battle with fire that destroyed important parts of the new $4,000,000 paper mills of the Spruce Falls Company.

Men and women of Kapuskasing formed a voluntary fire brigade and fought the flames for 12 long hours with an intensity characteristic of the pioneers of the high North. The battle took place while the temperature was 46 degrees below zero.

From the time the fire was first noticed until the flames were brought under control the shrill whistle of the big plant screeched alarm and split the cold silence of the snow-covered land with its ominous cry.

TRAPPED ON HIGH ROOF.

The two men who paid with their lives met death 150 feet in the air. They had taken up their position on top of the ship house, which are located on the top of the main building. When the flames suddenly sprang through the highest windows they were engulfed in a sea of flames and smoke. The remains showed that they had died of asphyxiation. The dead men are: R. E. Dobson, Superintendent of Power for the Spruce Falls Company, and William Shingo, a Japanese mill worker from the same company. Mr. Doherty was from Ashland, Wis., and Mr. Shingo came from Oakland, Wis.

FRANCE HAS DECIDED TO INVADE GERMANY

Army of Occupation Slated to Move Forward on Thursday—Italy and Belgium Are Likely To Concur

WANTS TO SHOW GERMANY SHE IS IN EARNEST

Turks Will Be Given an Ultimatum—Must Sign the Near East Treaty or Take the Consequences

Paris, Jan. 8.—The occupation of Essen by a small French force, accompanied by engineers and customs officers, is now slated for Thursday morning, it was stated on good authority to-day. Belgian and Italian engineers and technical experts will accompany the French but only the Belgians, it is understood, will contribute to the force of occupation.

The only matter in any doubt is whether the commission will succeed in getting through its work in time to make the necessary declaration to-morrow evening.

Arrangement has been made to begin hearing the German delegation at 3 o'clock, and it will be contrary to all experience if they succeed in finishing their explanations in one afternoon. Obstructionist tactics are also expected by the French from Sir John Bradbury, against whom as author of the British plan, newspaper attacks have during the last few days become particularly virulent.

Sir John is certain to vote against M. Barthou's proposition, but the French seem confident that the Italians as well as the Belgians will side with them, and so the decision will go by a majority.

If this is given to-morrow orders will be at once sent to Mayence and Dusseldorf to begin the troop movement which Marshal Foch has planned.

It was decided at to-day's Council of the Ministers that Premier Poincare should inform Parliament on Thursday next regarding his policy toward the Ruhr district. "France is going just far enough in action in Ruhr to show Germany she is in earnest" it was said in official circles.

London, Jan. 8.—The draft of the Near East Treaty will be presented to the Turks at Lausanne within a fortnight, it was said in official circles to-day. The Turks will be told to sign the documents or to tear them in pieces and take the consequences.

NO FARMERS' PARTY IN THE QUEBEC CONTEST

Provincial Minister Says Organization Attempts Are Futile

INSPIRED FROM CITIES

Quebec, Jan. 7.—"There is no Farmers' party in the Province of Quebec, and it is a good thing for the farmers that this is so. The only men who allege the existence of a Farmers' party are city men themselves, and the party has been founded only within their minds and imaginations. It has no existence in fact."

With these words Hon. J. E. Caron, Minister of Agriculture, disposed of one of the parties that were supposed to be preparing for the forthcoming electoral campaign in the Province.

"It is not through selfish political organizations that the farmers, or any other class, will accomplish anything, either for themselves or for the country," he said, "but through co-operation with movements which do not work solely for the betterment of any group, but for the advancement of the country as a whole.

"The organization which has been going on in the Province in the name of the farmers, and ostensibly in their behalf, by certain individuals who operate their campaign machinery from Montreal, cannot be termed a Farmers' party at all in the sense of the word," he said.

"It is merely a political movement inaugurated by a certain number of the Conservatives with a few dissatisfied Liberals. Scarcely a single one of the promoters whose names have been associated with the movement from the start belong to the agricultural themselves with this movement do not represent the agricultural element, and the proof is that the majority of them have given up agriculture and sold their land to go and live in the cities."

ALL SERENE IN POLICE CIRCLES

LIVELY RUNAWAY ON COLEMAN ST.

Team of Horses Collide with Mayor Bennett's Car, Damaging Same

Saturday afternoon shortly after 5 o'clock a lively runaway occurred on Coleman Street resulting in damage to Mayor Bennett's auto. It appears that a team of horses attached to a sleigh which were in charge of Mr. Albert Peckwith of Mountain View, P. E. County and owned by Mr. Earl Anderson of the same place, ran away from near Cooper's Mill and in their mad career collided with Mayor Bennett's car. No person was in the car. The affair was reported to the police who investigated, when the above facts were ascertained.

ROTARY CLUB HOLD LUNCHEON

Reeve Wright of Deloro was a Guest—Some Fines Levied—Rotes Want New Songs Introduced

At the Hotel Quinte to-day noon the weekly Rotary Luncheon was held and nearly every member of the club was in attendance. A good programme was promised by those in charge, particularly an address by Mr. Messing of Toronto, on Poland, but he unfortunately missed his train this morning, and, therefore, failed to put in an appearance. This was indeed to the loss of the club as he is one of the foremost lecturers in connection with the Y. M. C. A. and is well versed on the subject of the address.

Mr. Wright, President of the Deloro Smelting Plant at Deloro and now just returned Reeve for that village for the fourth time was a guest and gave a short address upon the beauties of his jurisdiction. A cordial welcome was extended to the Rotarians to visit Deloro, where he promised to take care of the "inner man" after which an inspection of the plant would be forthcoming.

"Mack" Robertson, Gordon Moffatt and Stewart Robertson were fined for infringement of the "Rotarian Smoking Act." Mack's fine was equal to the fines of others and he tried to shift Sergeant-at-Arms "Bob" Wray in regard to his, but "Bob" made him come across and he collected. For his activities in looking after crippled children, whose parents were unable to defray the cost of necessary medical treatment for them.

Some of the Rotarians seem to think that new songs should be added to the song sheet and used at the gatherings as the members are quite proficient in the rendition of the present selections and sing them with the confidence of a Caruso.

Rotarian Vipan Deeze was in the chair and directed the procedure as well as levied the fines.

United States' Plan For Reparations Settlement Despatched to the French

Washington, Jan. 8.—A plan for the settlement of the reparations controversy outlined by Secretary Hughes in his New Haven address, has been communicated to the French Government through official channels. No final reply has been made by them, although it was learned today that a preliminary answer had been received here from the French Foreign Office.

BRITAIN WANTS FAIR SETTLEMENT OF WAR U. S. WAR DEBT

Washington, Jan. 8.— Britain wants a fair business settlement of her five billion dollar war debt to the United States on such terms as will produce the least possible disturbance in the trade relations of the two countries, Stanley Baldwin, British Chancellor of Exchequer, declared today in an address before a joint session of the House and United States debt funding commissions.

"We are not here to ask for favors or to make appeals to sentiment," said Mr. Baldwin. "We want a fair business settlement, a square deal." Mr. Baldwin's address was in reply to one of welcome by Secretary Mellon, Chairman of the United States Commission. The United States Treasury Secretary declared that Britains action was proof of the right spirit of her financial integrity and he was proud to say had always animated the two great English speaking nations.

CANADIAN M. P. HOPES CANADA WILL BE A SOVEREIGN STATE

New York, Jan. 6.—"I fondly cherish the hope that step by step, gradually, with the best feeling to other British peoples, and with their cordial co-operation and counsel, Canada will at no distant date achieve the full stature of a sovereign state," declared A. R. McMaster, member for Pirome, in the Canadian House of Commons, in an address before the Union Club of New York on Saturday on "Some Canadian constitutional developments."

INAUGURAL MEETING OF CITY COUNCIL HELD TODAY

Mayor Bennett Invested and City Aldermen Installed in Office—Representative Crowd Witness Ceremonies

CHAIRMEN OF COMMITTEES APPOINTED

Ald. French Heads the Executive—Ald. Greenleaf in Charge of Parks Pending Appointment of Commission—Independent Boards Selected—Mayor Delivers Address—Market Lease, Insurance, Closing of Street, Financial Statements, Free Wood and Other Matters Discused

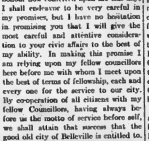
As was anticipated, a number of citizens, including a few ladies, were present this morning in attendance at the inaugural meeting of the City Council for 1923, presided over by His Worship Mayor Bennett. The aldermen present were: French, Foster, Thompson, Donohoe, Robinson, McCreary, Greenleaf, Ketcheson, Aslane, Lynch, Treverton. Alderman Patterson was the only absentee.

City Clerk Holden made his declaration of the result of the municipal elections held on the 1st instant.

On motion of Ald. Greenleaf, seconded by Ald. Robinson, Ald. Ketcheson and Ald. Lynch escorted Mayor Bennett to the chair, and he was invested with the insignia of office.

Rev. A. S. Kerr, pastor of St. Andrews church, opened the proceedings with an appropriate prayer.

Mayor Bennett delivered his inaugural address, which was as follows:



MAYOR'S ADDRESS

Ladies and Gentlemen:

Gentlemen of the City Council:—It has fallen to my lot this year to preside as your Mayor over the meetings of this Council, and to perform the many other duties pertaining to that office.

I thank you for the confidence expressed by your ballots and the high honour now conferred upon me this day. I shall endeavor to be very careful in my promises, but I have no hesitation in promising you that I will give the most careful and attentive consideration to your civic affairs to the best of my ability. In making this promise I am relying upon my fellow councillors here before me with whom I meet upon the best of terms of fellowship, each and every one for the service to our city. By co-operation of all citizens with my Fellow Counsillors, having always before us the motto of service before self, we shall attain that success that the good old city of Belleville is entitled to.

It is usual upon this occasion to represent a budget of business for the coming year, and to express more or less positively some views in regard to same. It is not my endeavor to keep in touch with civic affairs as an interested taxpayer, and although I was not with you last year at this Council, my experience of the previous years is helpful.

So far as our City is concerned from a financial standpoint, our bonds are readily saleable at par in competition with other first class securities. However, we should proceed very carefully so as not to incur any liabilities that would increase our bonded indebtedness. If a large sum be needed, however, for the civic advancement, the citizens should be given the opportunity of expressing their views upon such expenditure, by ballot or petition or such other means as may be found to obtain same, so that the Council may act with the knowledge of the people who will have to pay the debt thus incurred.

In the Public Works Department, which is the greatest spending one in the civic organization, we must remember that we have now a very large fund for expenditure upon the paved roads. We must, however, maintain and improve the roads not paved, and in doing so must use our best endeavour and practice proper economy.

The roadway on Highland Avenue is to be paved in the spring, as the contract is already let. The roadway on Mill and Railway Station streets will no doubt receive your careful attention, and will be dealth with as the people desire, placing no undue burden upon the property and tenants. The sidewalk pavements should be laid wherever it is possible, always having in view the proper disposition of the cost of such pavement. I am in favor of fair wages being paid in all work, both on direct City employes and indirectly as an employes of a Contractor, and that in all contracts with the City that the fair wage clause form part of the contract.

I am assisted with the decision of the citizens in the passing of the Parks Board Law. We can take this matter up at an early date. It involves probably a greater expenditure than has been anticipated, but if the Park Commissioners expend properly and wisely, the beautification of the City will appear handsomely the increased appropriation. In the Parks Commission the needed provision for an assistant will be made. The lands known as the Agricultural Grounds lends itself for the furtherance of this purpose. This land was given by the City to Albert College to provide a campus or athletic ground. It would not interfere with the Albert College plans if these lands were returned to the City for suitable purposes, or used in common between the City and Albert College and used by both for athletic purposes.

All parties concerned should co-operate actually and practically, instead of the word of mouth, and show that spirit has the best interest of the other's heart. Albert College cannot use this land for some years. It was given for a specific purpose, and paid for by the money of the citizens; that specific purpose has been postponed from time to time. Then why should Albert College demand a rental from the donor for land which cost them nothing and they cannot use.

There are many matters that must come before you, and I will just mention some of them shortly.

There are certain fixed assessments, not many, some dozen or so which should receive your earnest attention. The Assessor's duty is to assess at true values at their actual cash values, and the Council has on occasions varied the assessment so that the amount is fixed at a sum very much less than such value, and in some cases practically granting a bonus without the direct approval of the citizens. It is my view that no such assessments should be accepted except by the direct vote of the citizens approving the reduction.

There should be a further effort made this year by the City Council in a joint junction with the Assessor, to bring about an improvement in the equalization of the assessment. It is impossible to have a perfect assessment under the law as it exists, but the improvement is easily obtainable—by reasonable and fair judgment.

A matter of great importance to the Municipality is the question of fire risks. Our attention must be drawn to the improvement of the Metro River by the dredging at the mouth to give a clear passageway, and the removal of the obstructions in the bed north of the Railway bridges. The floods we suffer from each spring are increased in their damaging effect by the shoals at the bottom of the River by the refuse and material brought down each year. No doubt this will be attended to this year, it would be a splendid attainment for the City in conjunction with the Dominion Government. (Continued on page seven)

WOLVES IN PRINCE EDWARD

Hunters Near Consecon Kill a Wolf at Smoker's Point

Consecon village had its share of sensation on Thursday, when a big grey wolf was shot in that vicinity. It was seen on the Smokers' Point on Wednesday but eluded its pursuers. Thursday it was seen proceeding leisurely along the railway track on the north side of Consecon Lake. After crossing the ice, bounds belonging to Matison A. Phillips, gave chase and before long it was shot by Cecil Morland, thus ending its career in Consecon.

The animal is a small specimen, weighing only 99 pounds.

FRANCE FEELING THE ... OF WAR COST

(By Canadian Press)

Paris, Dec. 30 (By Mail).—The French budget for 1923, now undergoing discussion in the Chamber of Deputies, shows that it costs a great deal of money not only to make war, but also to wind up a war.

Of the total appropriations of 23 billion francs asked for by the government, eight hundred million are to defray expenses due to hostilities. This amount includes no pensions or outlay for reconstruction. The biggest item is 388 million francs for the maintenance of French troops in the Near East. It costs France 56 million francs a year to share in the occupation of Constantinople, and the troops located in the Saare district cost 94 million a year.

Little odds and ends of expense, such as decorations of persons and towns for valor during the war; the expenses of missions sent abroad, etc., reach the respectable figure of 166 million francs.

DENIES PARTY HAD LIQUOR

Oakville Tragedy Inquest Held—Dr. Hilker, First Witness, Called; Denies There Was Drinking at Hotel En Route

Oakville, Jan. 4.—Dr. J. H. Steed, coroner, opened an inquest this afternoon into circumstances connected with the death of Dr. W. J. Gray, dentist, of Hamilton, who was killed on the Highway some weeks ago when on his way to attend the big football match in Toronto. A number of people, half a dozen or more, were injured in the collision, when the car in which Dr. Gray was riding hit an auto owned by H. C. Cox.

Crown Attorney W. L. Dick conducted the inquiry, and counsel represented Dr. A. E. Hilker, who was in the back seat of the car in which Dr. Gray was riding, and which was driven by H. Hawkins.

Dr. Hilker stated that the party left Hamilton at 10.55 a.m. to go to Toronto, driving about 25 miles an hour. They had stopped about five minutes at Gibson's Hotel at Oakville at 11.55.

No Drinking

Dr. Hilker admitted he had a drink before starting. He took it in his office. None of the others had been drinking to his knowledge. Witness had known Hawkins for twenty years. He was not addicted to drink and, so far as witness was aware, had never driven a car while under the influence of liquor.

"I am told one of you parties took some liquor from a bag and it was drunk at the bar?" said Mr. Dick.

Witness denied this. He admitted that Dr. Gray had a leather satchel. He did not know if it contained liquor. Hilker had carried the bag into the bar, but it was in his possession all the time, except during telephone conversation, and when he was in the washroom.

Mr. Dick—"What would you say if a witness said: 'I was in the hotel and saw a bottle produced from a bag and had a drink with the party?'"

Witness—"I would say it was not true."

MUSIC and DRAMA

FILM GIVES NEW ANGLE ON ETERNAL TRIANGLE

Despite the trite axiom that nothing new exists beneath old Sol, Frances Nimmo Greene has outlined a new plot in "One Clear Call", her successful novel of last year, which involves an unusual love triangle in which two men are ruined by their love for the same woman only to find regeneration at the same source.

This is an insight into the story which has been produced as a motion picture with watchful care by John M. Stahl and will be shown as a First National attraction at Griffin's to-night to Wednesday. "One Clear Call" embodies all the ingredients that contribute to screen success. The story supplies love interest, mother love appeal, comedy relief and pathos, but above all, an abundance of action-packed scenes.

With its locale in a small southern town, "One Clear Call" opens with a view of Dr. Alan Hamilton, noted surgeon, who finds himself infatuated by the pranks appeal of an unknown woman who has been a mysterious visitor at the local hospital. The discovery that places a seemingly insurmountable barrier between them starts him on the road to degeneration. At the same time, the man to whom he owes everything, a grief stricken husband, has lost track of the woman who built been his sole inspiration. In both instances the woman in case is identical.

From this unusual triangle the story swerves into swift running channels of suspense and thrills with a climax that required a small army to depict. Recalling the palmiest days of the southern organization, Ku Klux Klanism sharp up the streets of the small town. Henry B. Walthall, Milton Sills and Claire Windsor are the principals of the all-star cast.

"Fresh From the Farm" a funny Christie comedy featuring Bobbie Vernon. A two-reel Jack London Sea story, and a novelty reel are being exhibited on the same program.

BENNETT INTRODUCES MANY NOVELTIES IN "HOME TALENT"

It has been pointed as the difference between the art and standing in the motion picture world of Mack Sennett and D. W. Griffith that the latter devoted himself, following the old Biograph days, to thrills and pathos while the comedy king cultivated thrills and laughter. Each committed himself to the policy of developing the spectacular elements of motion photography.

What Mack Sennett has done as a creator of thrills, laughter and spectacle in previous productions is an established exhibition. Now comes a featured production done likewise in a comedy vein and called "Home Talent", and as the feature attraction at the Regent tonight to Wednesday, matinee daily. It is a five reel creation that is calculated to add lust even to the fame of Mack Sennett.

DOVER ROAD", HERE FRIDAY

Keen interest is displayed in "The Dover Road" coming to Griffin's Opera House, this Friday night, January 12th, for one night only. Rumors of the quality of the offering have preceded its appearance and theatregoers are eager to see the most comedy by the pen of the author of "Mr. Pim Passes By," A. A. Milne. "The Dover Road," is the play which established Charles McClintic among the ranks of high-class New York producers last December in which he is associated with Jed Harris and J. J. Shubert. It had a run of ten months in New York and is a great success at the Haymarket Theatre, London. The London production was copied exactly after Mr. McClintic's offering. Charles Cherry after years of brilliant acting as leading man for the most beautiful and prominent of our women stars has at last come into his own with his creation of a character that will live in stage history, the eccentric Mr. Latimer who plays Providence to eloping lovers.

500,000 Russians Doomed to Awful Death

Moscow, Jan. 4.—Nearly half a million men, women and children are doomed to death from starvation in the famine districts of Russia before the winter is over, it was said here today. Nearly 8,000,000 persons in the starvation zones are living upon rations scarcely fit for animals.

GRAND TRUNK IMPROVES SERVICE

Montreal, Jan. 4.—In order that the maximum of comfort may be obtained for passengers travelling on the line, the Grand Trunk Railway has arranged to place in each of the Pullman Sleeping Cars on the system the following notice to patrons:—

"Quiet is requested for the benefit of those who have retired."

This appeal will be displayed on three cards in each Pullman between the hours of 9.00 p.m. until 7.00 a.m., one of the notices being placed in the smoking room and the others at the passageways leading to the cars.

It is believed that they will serve as an effective means of preventing loud talking by some thoughtless travelers which tends towards the discomfort of other occupants of the sleeping cars.

WOLVES NEAR MARMORA

Wolves are becoming a real serious menace to the farmers in the north country. Last week Mr. Louis Briggs, who resides about 15 miles north of Belmont, had two head of cattle destroyed by them, and on going out found two wolves. He found the cries of the animals feeding on the dead cattle. He returned for his gun, but on going back to the scene of slaughter found the wolves had departed. The moral is do not have to return for a gun.

HAMILTON TRIMS CANADIENS

In Overtime Game Tigers Win 3-2

Furnishing another surprise, Hamilton Tigers triumphed over Canadiens at Mount Royal Arena on Saturday night, winning their scheduled National Hockey League fixture by 3 to 2 after eight minutes overtime play had been played. Who was substituting for Bouchard in the extra period, goes the credit of winning the game. Arbour has seen fit to replace Bouchard and he is one of the first overtime period and secured the puck on a pass from Wilson following a face-off near Canadiens' nets. He was inside the French Club's defence when he broke back, and 'swung over to the side and shot. The rubber hit the goal-post and rebounded in behind Vezina, who had little or no chance to save.

OTTAWA DEFEATS ST. PATRICK'S

Winning Goal Scored Two Minutes Before End of Game

In one of the hardest fought hockey games that Ottawa fans have seen for long time, the Ottawa Senators defeated the world champions, St. Patrick's of Toronto, on Saturday night by 2 to 1 score. The result of the game was hanging fire until the final whistle blew, and for a greater part of the match the quality of play was not exciting, snappy combination and exceedingly close checking.

M.O. LEAGUE LIVES

Takes Three Central Towns —Brantford, Kitchener and Port Huron Dropped from M.O.

Amalgamation of the Michigan-Ontario and Central Baseball Leagues was consummated at a joint meeting at Flint on Friday of magnates of both clubs.

The league will continue as Michigan-Ontario Baseball League, with Thomas J. Halligan, of Flint, remaining as president, secretary and treasurer of the circuit. While the transaction was an amalgamation of the two leagues, the fact is that the Michigan-Ontario League remains, replacing Port Huron, Brantford and Kitchener with Grand Rapids, Muskegon and Kalamazoo, two of the disbanded Central circuit.

The former Central teams come in under the Michigan-Ontario constitution and by-laws, which will be retained.

Earlier in the day the M-O. League took over the franchises of Port Huron, Brantford and Kitchener on a financial basis, which was not made public, and the Central League disbanded.

LATEST NEWS FROM TRENTON

Dominion Combine Mills to Start Operations—Interesting Hockey Game With Picton Score 2-2

Picton Vs. Trenton.

Trenton hockey fans remember with a great deal of interest the splendid brand of hockey these two teams displayed in their games of last winter and which necessitated an extra one to decide a winner. They therefore turned out en masse last night to witness the opener, as far as the intermediate series is concerned. We were certainly disappointed at the final result, but not with the grade of hockey provided. Many recalled to mind the final game last year as both teams battled for supremacy last night with no decisive result at hand, the score ending 2-2. But that does not denote the play at all. Campney, Picton's goalie, was in the class with John Ross Hooey, for last night's performance, at least. He stopped dozens of shots which, with an inferior net guarding would have been disastrous to Picton. We were surprised, yet delighted, to see a familiar face in Brock Hopkins, who deserves much unsaid good style of hockey. We were under the impression ourselves that Jack Hopkins, Jr., Osborne and Earl Croft not behind the big pads, that Picton would be materially weakened, and that very heavy money for Freeman's scratch; but they are as hard a nut to crack as ever. Trenton started the scoring early in the first period, but Picton evened up before the close. In the second, Trenton forced the play, but this score remained until about four minutes before the final song. Harry Batstone, of Rat Portage fame, handled the game to the satisfaction of all. He exclaimed the ice was in a poor condition, which undoubtedly accounts for our boys not being able to pile up a score, as they do love good fast ice. To avoid a lot of details that are necessary in every contest, and to quote one hockey fan, not a bad "appetizer", referring to the game, of course.

Dominion Combine Mills to Open

To appreciate the vastness of the structure, the completeness of finish and newness constitute up-to-date detail, one must needs pay a visit to the splendid building now known as the Dominion Combine Mills. Here the Canadian ensign flying from its standard on the roof to the basement below, gives ample proof of that spacious edifice is made from material grown or built in some part of the British Empire. Having witnessed the laying of the corner stone about four weeks ago, and not revisiting the site until yesterday, the writer could stand only in amazement and wonderment at the swiftness with which so complicated a construction could be advanced. Engaging in the installation of the machinery and receiving the finishing touches in every department, we have joly to wait a short time when the wheels of operation will be set in motion and the combine mills will be an accomplished enterprise. Every comfort of the many hands who will be employed in the process of wool-combing, is being considered by those who have charge of the erection, and it is certain a more complete building in this respect does not exist in this fair Dominion. Justly proud is President E. A. Rea and his staff for such splendid progress and justly proud should every citizen of Trenton be that our town should be chosen as the centre for such a thriving industry and the site for such a huge structure. The public, although welcome to visit the mills at any time, will be given a splendid opportunity in a few days, when the mills will be thrown open for public inspection on the occasion of an official opening, when the annual Trainmen's dance will be held. The dancing will take place on the main floor, where, immediately after, machinery which has now reached Halifax from, England, will be installed.

Several young people enjoyed a delightful sleigh-ride party last evening, behind a team of prancing ponies they were driven about for two hours.

A VETERAN STILL IN THE RING

Out at Stirling, one of the old hockey veterans is still in harness this year, captaining the team. Billy Whitty, widely known throughout the Province to Commercial men and sportsmen has been chasing the rubber for twenty-five years and is still as good as the most of them at the game. His younger brother Vincent, who paid the supreme sacrifice overseas, was at one time a valued member of the Belleville squad and was selected for the all-star aggregation to play in Toronto.

It is noted that Bill Whitty is active in the High School League of the county and all branches of sport in the town comprising the Trent Valley district owe much to his organization powers. He not only dopes and plans for the youngsters coming up, many of whom have developed extraordinarily, but he plays the game himself and always has done so.

May he see fit to don the steel runners for many seasons to come.

NO BOXING PERMITS UNTIL NEW CODE IS CONFIRMED

The Hamilton Boxing Club planned to stage its next show on January 15 with Tiger Smith and Frankie Fogle in the main bout, but this will not be possible until the Ontario Boxing Commission puts its new regulations into effect. None of the clubs in the province will be given a permit to operate until the new code is confirmed. That means that the bouts planned for Bobby Kline in Toronto will also be held up. Will Tremeer Hallat be able to fulfil his contract with Eber to supply four bouts for him, including a torpedo engagement, by the second week in March?

WORK FOR PARLIAMENT WHEN IT OPENS

The King Government according to the recent announcement has scheduled the opening of Parliament for January 31st. The whole of the program to be enacted into legislation is uncertain, but it is likely that a long list of recommendations will confront the House, many important bills are to be introduced and there will surely be an abundance of controversial matter. It is already evident that the government's proposals will be closely scrutinized and will come in for a good deal of criticism. Owing to the narrowness in majority, Premier King is doubtless reckoning on the Opposition and this will prove to be one reason for jettisoning before long a good deal of the cargo with which he sets sail at the opening of Parliament. Some of the by-elections have not augured any too well for Mr. King but possibly his confidence has been somewhat restored by the political flopping of the two Progressive members recently. His courage may have been strengthened by practicing the precepts of the cheerful Coue—"day by day, in every way, my government is getting stronger and stronger."

The usual ten year revision of the Bank Act will be an important question for discussion and in view of the attitude of the people relative to the Merchants Bank debacle, this will require most careful handling to give entire satisfaction.

The National Railways are one of the main problems and we wonder why the message has, just on Saturday, come from Ottawa, that the "No Politics" order of the Board of Railway Commioners, inaugurated under the regime of the deposed D. B. Hanna, be rescinded. Employees of the Nationals will be glad to learn that their political status is recognized and that they are not compelled to accept public elective positions. Possibly this announcement will make the railwaymen smile and whistle but Hon. Mr. King may be resorting to subterfuge such as was much in evidence in the Lanark by-election. The question to be considered among the ranks is whether or not there will be any heart or humanity recognized in their hearts if their political behaviour is not comely and straight Liberal. A railway employee will not be prone to accept such treatment from those who wield the power. An employee who is too sullen to applaud the good is unworthy of his pay envelope and is born unto maladministration as the sparks fly upward. Therefore this matter requires careful treading on the ground.

It is hoped that the recent announcement will not leave a loophole to cover the appointments of political workers to the service. If so, it looks very much as if we will eventually revert back to those Intercolonial days so greatly reverenced in the Maritimes, by the faithful.

It does seem singular that this order should have been promulgated so soon after Sir Henry Thornton's pronounced edict of "hands off the Nationals, politicians," and so very previous to the opening of Parliament.

Hon. Mr. King evidently believes by this new order issued "give unto Caesar those things that are Caesar's" and by his inertia to date, with Jefferson that the best government is the one that governs the least.

However, with the return of those two commercial travellers from their European tour, Fielding and Lapointe, and with the assemblage replete with the stalwarts inclusive of a few wayward and erstwhile Progressives, the stage will be all set for an exciting session.

ALDERMEN AND INDEPENDENT BOARDS

If the new City Council had to-day appointed its own members as its representatives on the local Independent Boards, it would be exercising its legal rights. And no doubt such a reversal of the usual policy of shooing private citizens to represent it, would not be without provocation. Very frequently, the independent boards, including the representatives of the City Council assume an attitude of antagonism to the civic authorities, as though they had become convinced that the interests of their boards clash with the general public interest—an erroneous and mischievous idea.

We are pleased that in their wisdom, the City Council at their inaugural to-day have not abandoned the old custom entirely. Upon the whole, we believe the public will be better served by having independent and public-spirited citizens chosen and appointed by the City Council serving on these independent boards, than it would have been if the representatives of the City Council had been Aldermen from their own ranks.

The two functions are apt to conflict and better harmony will be forthcoming, if these positions are not filled dually.

SAFEGUARD BODY FROM WOLVES

When the body of Patrick Kelly was found frozen stiff in the snow on the Nattagami river, his trapping partner, William Fowler, tramped along an unblazed trail to Kapuskasing to inform the provincial police of the fatality. Hampered by stormy weather and dangerous ice on the river, Provincial Constable Keeley and a party of three men, along with three dogs and a toboggan, broke trail through the fur trapping country of the north to bring back the body. On the return trip with the dead man travelling conditions became so bad that the party had to abandon the body while they walked ahead for a day to break trail. The lower picture shows a halt along the trail to give the dogs a rest after a hard pull. While on the trip the party ran short of food and it was only through the scanty provisions received from a French-Canadian trapper that they were able to survive. The inset shows Constable Keeley, William Fowler, the dead man's former trapping partner, and Trooper Burns, outside the French-man's shack, situated on the 70-mile route.

CANADA'S COASTLINE DISCUSSED AT OTTAWA

Dr. Dawson Addressed the Civil Service

(By Canadian Press)

Ottawa, Jan. 6.—An address on "Low Water Datum in Relation to the Tides," by Dr. W. Bell Dawson, D.Sc., F.E.C.S., superintendent of Tidal Surveys, featured the inaugural meeting of the Hydrographic Group of the professional Institute of the Civil Service of Canada, held here recently. The meeting was held in the Marine Department Library, and was well attended by members of the Hydrographic Survey of Canada and the Tidal and Current Surveys. Mr. J. Stewart, Chief Hydrographic of Canada, who introduced the lecturer, gave a review of the early days of the hydrographic survey in Canada from its inception in 1882, after the loss of the steamer "Asia" in Georgian Bay. Dr. Dawson laid emphasis on the consideration concerned in determining the low water datum for hydrographic chart and time tables. The types of tide, by which these are governed in the region of the survey, was, he stated, a controlling feature in determining the datum.

Reviewing the history of the hydrographic surveys, Mr. Stewart said that the assumption that the "Asia" had been wrecked on an uncharted rock in waters of which no accurate chart was in existence, brought forth an agitation for the charting of the Great Lakes. The government of the day took action and obtained from the British Admiralty the loan of one of their hydrographic officers, Capt. J. G. Boulton, R.N., and he, with a staff of assistants, commenced the surveying of these waterways.

Misdirect Enough Money to Keep Huge Staff of Clerks

Ottawa, Jan. 6.—Carelessness on the part of the public generally is resulting in approximately 3,000 letters a day being opened by the dead letter office, according to officials of the Post Office Department. A special staff is continually occupied with this work.

One of the special troubles of the dead letter office staff is the number of fruitful citizen who encloses from $10, to $30 in a letter, signs himself Joe, Jim or Charlie, and then improperly addresses the envelope. This money nearly always finds its way into the Government treasury, because the sender failed to write his own address somewhere in the body of the letter.

Post Office Department officials say that the money from letters of this type, together with the returns from the auction sale of misconducted parcels, practically pays for the upkeep of the dead letter branch.

CANADIAN TRADE WITH BRITISH COLONIES

Increased Considerably During Past Year

(By Canadian Press)

Ottawa, Jan. 6.—Canada's trade with the British colonies increased considerably during the past year, according to figures issued by the Department of Trade and Commerce. Imports from the colonies totalled $19,000,000 and exports $24,000,000, as compared with $15,000,000 and $18,000,000 respectively in 1921.

Trade with the West Indies showed a substantial increase, imports totalling $6,000,000 and exports $8,000,000, as compared with $4,000,000 and $5,000,000 in 1921. Trade with Australia, New Zealand and South Africa also showed increases.

PRESS OPINIONS

CLEANER DANCING IN NEW YORK

(Daily Whig)

Out of the conference between Mrs. George W. Loft, Deputy Police Commissioner of New York City, and the dance hall proprietors who visited her to talk over the management of their resorts, there has grown the New York Ballroom Association, which it soon to be incorporated. The proprietors of the various public dancing places compose the membership of the new organization, and they have assured Mrs. Loft, that they will do their best to improve conception of the dance. There was certainly nothing in their names to suggest that they were the haunts of obscurous public diversion. The words waltz, polka and gallop always had their significance. But what sort of dancing could "parking," "balconading," or the "scandal walk" be? What were their kind was. New York's Deputy Police Commissioner decided that the cause of public propriety demanded that they cease.

New York City is not the only place where unseemly dancing is practised. It is hoped that police interference will not be needed to put a stop to objectionable manner on the floors of devotees of the waxed floor in many centres.

THE DRUG ADDICT IN AUSTRALIA

(Sydney Bulletin)

A fast-increasing evil, which Australian legislators have, so far, practically ignored, is the spread of the drug habit within the Commonwealth. Like a number of other ills from which at one time or another, have threatened the human race, this, the principal items of merchandise, came originally from Asia; and the moralists might find several texts in the fact that at the period when opium-smoking lodged as though it were about to eat, England fought a war with China in order to revive it, by forcing the product of the opium factories of India on the Chinese natives. This greatly benefited the Indian revenue of the time, but it also saddled British, later, with an appalling social problem in the shape of a widespread opium-fiend among all classes—a problem that is growing with every year that passes. Drug-taking, unless dealt with vigorously, is a thing that might quite easily undermine a great empire than guns and wither a few generations.

BOSTON HARBOR CROWDED WITH SHIPPING

(By Canadian Press)

Boston, Jan. 6.—The unusual shipping boom since the days of the world war is now at its height at this port. Week by week foreign vessels, and the bad at the trans-Atlantic terminals, it is said. At the rate of 70 cents an hour for day work and $1.05 for night work, the pay envelopes of those now on the job are well filled.

The boom started when coal laden vessels from England and Wales arrived last summer. Coal has arrived in addition, at times since the miners' strike in this country.

A score of ships laden with perishable foodstuffs from Scandinavian countries, have arrived in the past few weeks, and the army tube and Commonwealth piers, where much of the freight is handled, are filled to overflowing, according to vessel agents.

British coal steamers have been forced to wait a week or ten days in the harbor for berths, the shipping facilities and many of them rather than delay for that long, have gone to other ports.

Since the closing of the St. Lawrence river there has been an increasing flow of grain to this port. More than a million and a half tons were shipped in one week in December.

All the elevators here, but one more than 1,000 men have been employed and nearly 30 vessels with "holdups" waiting their pay-roll money. Passenger space has been taken over freight. Piles of wheat, corn and flour in bag and shipments valued at between $18,000,000 and $18,000,000 have been stored at the Commonwealth pier at one time.

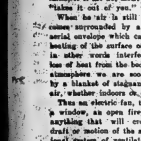
That Body of Yours

By James W. Barton, M.D.

DO YOU REALLY NEED MUCH AIR SPACE FOR VENTILATION?

Some years ago Leonard Hill of Blackwell, studied eight students in a small sealed chamber which held three cubic meters. He states that at the end of half an hour they had ceased laughing and joking and their faces were congested. Three adults were then allowed in which nearly doubled the air space, but as it was. The effect was like magic; the students fully recovered. Then, unfortunately, the fans were stopped they again felt as bad as before. What does this teach us. That a small amount of space is necessary for an individual if the air within that space is kept in motion.

Sanitarians agree that the discomfort you experience from an ill-ventilated house is due to increase in temperature, increase in humidity or dampness, and to the stillness of the atmosphere. And when you come to think, it is the hot moist still air that makes it out of you."



When the air is still the body becomes surrounded by a warm moist aerial envelope which causes an overheating of the surface of the body to its other words interferes with the loss of heat from the body. In a still atmosphere we are soon surrounded by a blanket of stagnant and impure air, whether indoors or outdoors.

Then an electric fan, the opening of a window, an open fireplace, all tend to anything that will create a slight draft or motion of the air in the rat tional system of ventilation.

Many places get their reputation as health resorts because of the trade or other factors which being constant in motion insure pure air at all times.

So you see large rooms, and high ceilings are not so very important after all.

Provision for moving or circulating air is the secret of perfect ventilation.

WHY PARIS DRESSES ARE SO COSTLY.

Paris, Dec. 18.—Why do women's dresses cost so much? This eternal man's question was put to Madame Jeanne Paquin, and her epyptic answer was "They don't."

For 35 years Madame Paquin has been making dresses in Paris for the wealthy from all parts of the world. It may be that her idea of what is expensive has been influenced by the class of trade which automobiles up to her doors, but nevertheless her answer was the sincere expression of a business woman. Even in the next breath she said: "Or rather, dresses do no cost the buyer so much, when it is considered what they cost the producer."

Madame Paquin employs about 900 people, and turns out 4,000 dresses a year. About 25 cost of every hundred of her gowns have to be discarded because they are not properly "made." This accounts in part for the high cost of those that are marketed.

"To obtain an art product, there must be waste," Madame Paquin explained. "A painter may make many sketches before he finds the one on the canvas that is called art. It is the same way with dresses. I employ people who do nothing but create models and criticise my dresses, and if a given dress doesn't satisfy them, a new one must be made for the client. The material must be paid. Some of them get a hundred thousand francs a year. There are 1,500 of her people who are engage in the profession of beautifying women with clothes. These few must be paid accordingly."

"Women object to the high cost as much as men. But I like to think that women like to pay high prices for their dresses. You can tell all the husbands that women dispose their bills to the last penny."

"How much don't cost to make a dress that will for a year?" Madame Paquin was asked.

"There are many women who spent a hundred thousand francs a year before the war on their dresses, and if they did the now their bills would run to a million," said Madame Paquin.

"But I believe, for the average woman who can afford to dress in such luxurious a style, that 50 thousand francs a year would do it, giving her about 15 dresses a year. This would give her in each season about four dresses, one for the street, one for sport, one for evening, and one for afternoon receptions. Add one for a fancy dress ball, two for bals, shoes, umbrellas and underclothing and the total would come to about $5,000 in American money.

CANADA'S NEWSPRINT OUTPUT IN 1922

It Totals Over One Million Tons and Exceeds All Previous Years

In a review of the pulp and paper industry in the Monetary Times annual, the opinion is expressed that the industry is off on a fresh start in the way of both activity and prosperity. All newsprint mills are running to capacity and the high price level is maintained for the past few months points to a total output of well over 1,000,000 tons for the year. The previous record was in 1920, when 983,315 tons were produced, the total for 1921 being somewhat lower at 912,900 tons.

The increased output was principally due to the bringing into production of the International Paper Company's new 300-ton mill at Three Rivers and the increased efficiency of the Canadian Power Company's mill at Quebec, a new machine bringing the out put up to 380 tons per day, while Abitibi secured nearer to the mast item of its 800-ton output plant.

Spanish River, with its three plants is the largest producer, with 670 tons a day, while Abitibi come next with 500 tons, with Laurentide thir with 380 tons. The other producers with their tonnage are as follows:—International, 300; Price Bros., 300; Ontario, 300; Pacific, B.C., 220; Powell, B.C., 200; Rolland, 200; Booth, 150; Fort Francis, 135; St. Maurice, 130; Brompton, 120; Donnacona 100; Eddy, 90; Canada, 60; and News, 30.

The new productions which will come into effect in 1923 are: Bathurst N.B., 60 tons; Belgo, increased by 40 tons; Fort William, 120 tons, and St. Lawrence, Three Rivers, 120 tons bringing the estimated output for 1923 of 3,825 tons per day up to 4,185 tons per day. This would bring the annual production up to 1,395,000, an increase of over 100 per cent. since 1916.

PHIL'S TIME SAVING PLAN

"Philip, come here and just look at this room." Mrs. Cook's voice was heavy with displeasure. But Phil merely climbed up the stairs, looking very guilty, for he knew what was coming.

"I should think you would be ashamed!" Dramatically she pointed first at Phil's trousers lying in the middle of the floor, then at his muddy shoes beside them, at his school books tossed carelessly on the bed, and at his cap sticking out from under the bed. Philip had the grace to blush.

"Oh! mother, "he complained," you're so dreadfully particular. You should see Bobby's room. His mother has him keep it just the way he wants to. She never makes him put anything away. Why mine's neat and tidy beside his."

Mrs. Cook smiled in spite of herself. "But what would yours look like I'd like to know if I didn't clean up after you every day. As she spoke she was busy putting things in their proper places.

"I wish you wouldn't," Phil complained. "I can find things so much quicker myself. Dramatically at the pointed first at Phil's trousers lying in the middle of the floor, then at his muddy shoes beside them, at his school books tossed carelessly on the bed, and at his cap sticking out from under the bed. Philip had the grace to blush.

"Oh! mother, "he complained," you're so dreadfully particular. You should see Bobby's room. His mother has him keep it just the way he wants to. She never makes him put anything away. Why mine's neat and tidy beside his."

Mrs. Cook smiled in spite of herself. "But what would yours look like I'd like to know if I didn't clean up after you every day. As she spoke she was busy putting things in their proper places.

"I wish you wouldn't," Phil complained. "I can find things so much quicker myself. It's an inefficient to keep things hidden away in the closet. You waste so much time looking for them."

This was too much for his mother. "Well," she said, "if you really prefer to live in a room I don't see why I shouldn't let you for a while at least."

"Oh," thought Phil, "just think how much time I'll save with everything right out where I can see it. "He felt that he had won a victory. He was old-fashioned and inefficient to keep everything tucked away out of sight. He had always envied Bob, whose room looked like it had been stirred with a gigantic spoon.

Mrs. Cook carefully replaced Phil's trousers in the middle off the floor. "I'll just leave them here where you can find them," she said quietly.

Phil looked at her in surprise. They were in the way, he thought, but it wasn't until she went down stairs that Ei kicked them under the bed. See, it was good to be able to do as he pleased in his own room.

The next morning, after one horrified look at the room, Mrs. Cook decided not to investigate within.

"Mother, where are my trousers?" Phil called down to her.

Mrs. Cook smiled to herself, but called back evenly, "The last time I wore them I hung them in the closet."

"Well," Phil complained, "you're always putting my things away and I thought—but then he remembered that she was no longer straightening his room.

By D. Kinmount Roy

The guests, however, were not very responsive, although Maitland accepted a mount, and rode out with his own man. Aynsworth remained behind, and decided to spend the day after his own fashion. His destination was Woodcombe, where a trusty old retainer still-perforce reigned.

Sherwin was disappointed, he would have found it much more agreeable to have remained occupied in getting up some impromptu recreation, a hunting-party, or some such thing, but Aynsworth's manner, although perfectly courteous, was decidedly discouraging, and consequently it happened that every one went his own way.

It the course of the day, Maitland sought out MacAlpin and told him the new turn of affairs. Donald was unusually agitated over the news, and confided that in spite of all their precautions Dora Woodcombe must have become known to the Squire. In this surmise we know he was only partially correct.

Hardcastle had indeed heard that she was in London, and that Maitland knew of her being there; but the information went no farther.

Reginald, in writing to his father, was too angry and amazed to be precise in his information. The sudden enlightenment as to his own unfortunate position so completely overwhelmed him that bow the Squire might be affected by it never entered his mind. Both MacAlpin and Maitland agreed, under the circumstances, that Oosh and Janet should return as soon to their own cottage. There were, of course, many difficulties and objections to such a step; explanations were exceedingly inconvenient, and in fact, impossible until farther developments were assured, and yet no other way was open to them.

"But when they are safely brought here," MacAlpin asked, "what then?"

"Then, then?" Maitland echoed. "Why, the Squire has to be confronted with the living proof of his villainy, as well as the written evidence of Lord Glenmore!"

"But the lady, Mister Maitland, the lady knows nothing of her father's misdoings, not even that she has a living brother," MacAlpin said anxiously.

"Yes, yes, I know," Maitland said, with a touch of impatience, for in truth he was himself ill at ease on that point. "It's a hard case to deal with, a very hard case, MacAlpin, a very hard case, and I have not found my way clearly through without wounding some of the principal parties concerned—this young lady, for instance——"

"——and the young laird,' MacAlpin added.

"Well, yes, perhaps the young laird, as we must, for a time continue to call the young Glenmore. Of course he does not yet know of the young lady's existence."

"They have met," Donald said, quietly.

"Met!—met!—bless me! bless my soul, sir, that cannot be! Who has told you such a thing?"

"I was an eye-witness of their meeting, two years ago, and moreover it was a Sabbath morning, and Janet also were aware of it; but neither recognized the other for what they are, and most likely have forgotten all about it."

"MacAlpin,' Maitland said gravely 'I should have known of this."

"Nae doots," Donald said shamefacedly, falling back into his native Scotch as usual, 'but to what end?"

"Yes, yes, to what end indeed! It is a hard case, MacAlpin, as I have said, a hard case, and one part of the hardness consists in the fact that I must set aside all personal feeling in order to reinstate the son of an injured man in his ancient rights, and recover the wealth which justly belongs to him, sad to do so, I may be obliged to bring a very serious charge against Evie Hardcastle. I see no way out of the difficulty which does not involve serious unpleasantness to someone, and I have no way without going into painful particulars that cannot but be grievous to this young lady, to Lord Glenmore, and to all of us.'

"Faither,' said a small voice near by, 'Mister Sandie,' Donald said, 'shouldna I' had forgotten you!'

Ye winna let ony harm come to the lady o' the Manse, Mister Sandie?' she looked from one to the other, hastily.

'No, no, bairn,' Donald said, 'we mustnot let harm come to her.She is coming back to live here, you know.'

'Oh faither!' Sandy exclaimed, in breathless excitement, 'making' sandwiches for to-day, I fell here, when she came. I'daresay,' he added, shyly, and could to Maitland that he had 'news' and heaps of things' to tell here, when she came.

'I daresay,' Maitland said, smiling, observing the lad with great interest, 'and when you have told her all the fine things you have learned, we must, my if we cannot have you set upon your feet again.'

A tarvet look, half of pain and longing touched with wonder, crept into the boy's eyes. 'It hurts,' he said, plaintively looking up.

'What hurts, my boy?' Maitland said kindly.

Just a Few More Winks.

These cold winter mornings are excellent for late sleeping. In this respect they are much like spring and summer and autumn mornings.—Kansas City Star.

Boy Adventurers

Nelson and His Bear Hunt

Lord Nelson, who ranks among England's greatest naval heroes, became a midshipman during his boyhood. Early in life he showed the great skill and daring which were to make him famous in after years.

One of his early voyages was into the arctic regions. Young Nelson was one of a party allowed to go on shore one afternoon. No particular attention was paid to him by his shipmates, so he left the party and started off alone. After some time had elapsed, one of the sailors happened to look up suddenly, when he caught sight of Nelson and a huge polar bear in the distance. The bear was about to attack the boy and was gradually getting closer to him. The rest of the party could see that he was in great danger, but they were too far away to help him them, and they feared that before they could reach him he would be killed.

Can Misses Fire

Nelson raised his musket to fire at the animal, but there was no report. Some unknown reason the gun had failed to go off. The only thing left for him to do was to attempt to fight off the creature bear by using his musket as a club, and he got ready to do this. At this point a gun was fired from the ship, speaking for the benefit of the sailors. The noise frightened the bear, which turned and ran swiftly away.

Then the return to the ship in Nelson, when asked why he had undertaken a hunt single-handed, replied coolly that he wanted the bear's skin to take to his father.

Following this experience, he sailed on many voyages and distinguished himself by his skill as a sailor, and also his great courage. He steadily rose from the ranks. At the time Napoleon was planning to invade England he host a French fleet off Cape Trafalgar in 1905 and gained a great victory. It was during this battle that he signaled from his flagship the words which have become so celebrated: "England." The saddest part, however, was that Nelson was killed in this battle, but he lived long enough to learn of the complete defeat of the enemy.

How much does the history of Great Britain would have been if the bear had not been frightened away by the gun from the ship?

PICTURE PUZZLE

THE WORDS PICTURED HERE FORM A WORD-SQUARE.

Answer to last puzzle: Robe, sober, bend, ends.

"Why, Phil what are you wearing your good hat for?" she greeted him.

"I couldn't find, my cap," he explained.

"So look under the bed," she said. "Oh, Phil, look at your basketball sock, your skates, your good coat, and your old trousers!"

That evening when she went to bed she noticed that Phil's room was in perfect order. But Mrs. Cook was a clever mother and said nothing.

Brompton to Make Distribution

It is rumored that Brompton will shortly resume payments of 8 per cent. preferred stock. The common stock is in line for a dividend next autumn.

It looks as if Canada Steamships would face considerably more competition on the lower lakes during the camping season, as ten canal freighters have been ordered in the Old Country for delivery in May. Buffalo interests holding a Canadian charter, while the Ogilvie company are bringing back a like number of boats from France to handle their own grain. This will add to the competition inaugurated last season by the Playfair interests' 'glen' boats.

LARGE BOND OFFERING IN TORONTO TOMORROW

Advice from Toronto says that the $10,000,000 bond offering previously reported to be offered in New York today, will not be offered until Tuesday.

The total amount is $10,053,000, made up as follows:

Due in 2 years bonds, $373,000; 4 to 5 years bonds, $622,000; 10 to 20 years bonds, $4,980,000; 21 to 30 years bonds, $3,578,000.

The average maturity of the bonds is 17½ years.

It will be observed that the four to nine year bonds, which maturities are generally regarded in investment circles as inclined to be deadweight, form a very small proportion of this offering. This naturally enhances the attractiveness of the issue as a whole.

HOLLINGER MINE

Whether Hollinger will increase its dividend rate to five per cent. quarterly is a subject again under discussion. That is about the most that is expected at present, as a 600-ton unit of ball and tube mills is likely to be installed this year, which will be followed by the scrapping of present stamp battery and its replacement by another tube mill unit, probably in 1924.

U.F.O. APPLY THE RECALL

Members of Muskoka U.F.O. Indignant at W. J. Hammell, M.P., for Joining Liberals

Bracebridge, Jan. 8.—At a meeting of the Executive Council of the Muskoka U.F.O., held this afternoon, W. J. Hammell was called upon to resign his seat as member of Parliament for this district.

Mr. Hammell was roundly criticized for his recent announcement that following the retirement of Hon. T. A. Crerar as Leader of the Progressive group in the House of Commons, he had decided to support the Liberal Administration.

The resolution read in part:

"That we, as United Farmer supporters in meeting assembled in Bracebridge this fifth day of January, 1923, declare our disappointment with his (Mr. Hammell's) action, and demand that he implement his pre-election profession by resigning forthwith, in that he no longer retains the confidence of the electorate."

Copies of the resolution are to be sent to all local clubs in the district for their approval.

INAUGURAL MEETING OF CITY COUNCIL

bour Conciliaseners, to undertake this necessary work. There must be active work done to minimize or entirely remove the nuisance existing along the whole bed of the Moira River caused by the deposit or emptying of sewerage or noisome matter into the city limits.

Another subject of importance under the heading of Health, is the sale and distribution of milk. I would commend to you the necessity of an ordinance that should call for your consideration, and requiring all cow's milk to be pasteurized before being sold to your citizens.

I wish to say in regard to the Belleville Hospital that we appreciate very highly the efforts made by the ladies of the W. C. A. in carrying same on. It should be run by a large institution. There is, of course, even with the charges collected from the patients, a deficit each year which is met by grants from the taxpayers of our city, amounting to nearly a mill, and assessment on the County of Hastings. The institution should now be managed, not only by the Women's Christian Association Executive, but should be set up on the Board of Directors at least two representatives from the City Council and three from the County Council. I am sure we all wish to have it carry on this public utility, but when the ratepayers of the Municipalities are called upon to contribute by grants such Municipalities should have representation upon the Board of Directors.

Before closing I would recommend to your consideration the passage of a By-law to require taxes to be paid in two instalments. I also a By-law requiring the election of Mayor, Aldermen and School Trustee, to be held on the last Monday in December in each year, and the Poll, if any, to be taken on the first Monday in December.

In order that the business may be carried on with every reasonable despatch, I would recommend that all applications be received in open Council, and not before the regular Committee unless directly by a motion duly passed by the Council.

The arrangement of the City offices in the City Hall building do not lend to efficiency of service. A remodelling should be considered by the Market Committee.

In conclusion I trust that harmony and good-fellowship should maintain throughout all our dealings and conferences, and that we in conjunction with the Directors of the Chamber of Commerce and the other Associations of good citizens, will co-operate to the fullest extent in maintaining and advancing the enviable position our city occupies today.

I thank you for your patient hearing, and wish you all and all our citizens a Happy and Prosperous New Year.

On motion of Ald. Lynch, seconded by Ald. Foster, that a vote of thanks be extended to His Worship the Mayor for his address, the same was tendered and was appropriately acknowledged.

Ald. McCreary moved, seconded by Ald. Treverton, that the Council resolve itself into committee of the whole on the appointment of chairman and members of the various committees. The motion carried and Council went into committee of the whole, Ald. French in the chair.

The chairmen of the various committees were selected as follows:

Executive—Ald. Foster.

Light—Ald. Adams.

Waterworks—Ald. Thompson.

Public Works—Ald. Donohoe.

Fire—Ald. Treverton.

Market and City Property—Ald. Robinson.

Gas—Ald. Potter.

Printing and Stationery—Ald. Kelcheson.

Industries—Ald. Crawford.

The committee rose and reported. The report was received and adopted.

Council went into committee of the whole on accounts, reports, etc., Ald. French in the chair. A number of accounts were passed.

Mr. C. M. Reid, who has been a High School trustee for some years, asked the Council not to re-appoint him as a member as he desired to be relieved from the position. The matter was laid on the table.

A motion from the Ratepayers' Association was read, relative to city insurance against accident.—Referred to Council meeting.

Mr. A. S. Large deposited with the Treasurer $400 as bonds of the market.—Referred to Market Committee.

The committee rose and reported. Report received and adopted.

By-Laws.

Rules were suspended for the introduction of the following by-laws:

A by-law to confirm the chairmen and members of the various committees; to appoint three High School trustees; to borrow $150,000 to meet current expenditures; to appoint officers of the Board of Health; to appoint members of the Public Library Board; to extend the time of the collector's rolls.

Council then went into committee of the whole on by-laws, Ald. French in the chair.

All members of the Council will be on the various committees of the Council.

Messrs. H. W. Ackerman, J. G. Mitchell and Thos. H. Marshall were appointed as High School trustees.

Messrs. S. Robertson, L. P. Herbert and Mayor Sanna were appointed members of the Board of Health.

Col. S. S. Lazier and Mrs. D. Donohoe were appointed members of the Public Library Board.

The committee rose and reported. Report received and adopted.

The several by-laws were passed through their various stages and read a third time respectively, 2443, 2444, 2445, 2446, 2447, and 2448.

Motions.

Ald. Robinson moved, seconded by Ald. French, that financial statement of the city for the years 1921 and 1922 be published in book form immediately.

Ald. Robinson spoke in support of the motion, stating that these financial statements should be prepared.

Ald. McCreary moved, seconded by Ald. Foster, that Ald. Greenleaf act as chairman of the Finance Committee. Commission is appointed.—Carried.

Ald. French moved, seconded by Ald. Adams, that Ald. Thompson, French and Kelcheson be a committee to look after the disposal of wood.

After considerable discussion the motion was adopted.

Unfinished Business.

Under this head Ald. McCreary asked Ald. Thompson who he was referring to when he said that wood was being provided to parties in the city who were burning from one thousand to two thousand a year.

Ald. Thompson—I will tell Ald. Greenleaf in a week if he does not know.

Ald. Donohoe referred to the failure to open Catherine street. Catherine street hill during a sleighing party, he was told, in his opinion, advisable to close the street for sleighing.

Mayor Kennett—No street should be closed except for repairs. The Council of next year have some streets to open it had no money to provide sidewalks. He was anxious to get more places where sliding down hill could be enjoyed by the boys, but the public streets was not the place to coast. That matter could be taken up in committee.

Market Lease.

Ald. Robinson said he desired to have a meeting of the Market Committee tomorrow (Tuesday) evening for the purpose of the consideration of the market lease.

Ald. Foster—Mr. Large has put up, with the City Treasurer, $400, which is equal to over two months of the amount of his tender. This was in lieu of the bond which Mr. Large is arranging for. There was no need of a meeting.

It was, however, decided to have a meeting tomorrow night.

Council adjourned.

THEY KILLED DOCTORS

Russian Heads Are Now in Peril From Plague

London, Jan. 6.—The tragic lesson of the death of the Soviet of the Soviet Government for foreign medical men to combat the plague, which has appeared at Saratov, Moscow province is a serious shortage of doctors in Russia.

Why? Because the Red dictator ship murdered nearly 9,000 Russian medical men.

That is the story of the Communist revolution in a nutshell. Lenine and his associates would tolerate no opposition of any kind. Their attitude with dissent was destruction. Communist fanatics wished to destroy all civilization based on the theory that education was an unjust privilege. They demanded absolute equality, equality even in ignorance. So they either wiped out the class whose knowledge was essential to the reconstruction of Russia, or compelled them to escape to flee the country—doctors, scientists, engineers, experienced directors of industry.

Then followed months of futile experiment, confusion, deterioration and finally a vast famine. That has compelled even the bigotry of the dictatorship to give way. The new economic policy, a return to capitalist directorship and capitalism, were brought back by decree. The latest is an appeal for doctors.

POULTRY SHOW

A number of fowls arrived here to day for the annual show of the Belleville Poultry Association which opens tomorrow in the market building and will continue day and night until Thursday night. The prospects are that it will be a successful show.

COLD WAVE HITS CITY

Friday evening the weather took a decided change and the temperature began to drop. On Saturday morning the mercury reached zero mark and during the day the temperature varied from 2 to 5 degrees below zero. Eighteen below is reported from some quarters to be yesterday's lowest record in the city.

P. O. DEPUTY RESIGNS

Dr. R. M. Coulter, C.M.G. Relinquishes His Post

Ottawa, Jan 4.—Dr. R. M. Coulter, C.M.G., has been retired from the position of Deputy Postmaster-General of Canada, and until an appointment is made Mr. T. P. Murphy, private secretary to Hon. Charles Murphy, Postmaster-General, will be acting deputy. The change is effective from the beginning of the year.

The retiring official who is 65 years of age, has not enjoyed vigorous health lately. He entered the civil service as the active head of one of its largest departments in 1897, in the regime of Sir William Mulock. Formerly he had been a medical practitioner in Aurora, Ontario. In the latter part of his quarter of a century in office, the department has been undergoing reorganization and the last few years have seen many of the men of long service, who handled the country's remarkably good postal system, retiring into less strenuous private life.

Canada was represented by Dr. Coulter at the Universal Postal Union convention in Rome in 1906, and again in 1907 he was a delegate to New Zealand and Australia. He was created C.M.G. in 1907.

LONDON COUPLE ARE DELIGHTED

His Wife's Two Years of Trouble is Now Ended, Says Frank Westlake

"Tanlac has made all the difference in the world in my wife's health and we are both delighted now," declared Frank Westlake, valued employee of the Public Works Department of London, Ont., residing at 49 Langarth St.

"About two years ago my wife underwent an operation that left her badly run-down and she simply couldn't get back her strength. Her appetite left her and she could hardly get enough to keep going. The least exertion would tire her out completely, and her house work was an awful burden. She would lie awake hours at night, too, and morning found her just as tired as when she went to bed. She suffered terrible splitting headaches, her nerves were on edge and she got very little pleasure out of life.

"But three bottles of Tanlac simply put her on her feet again. She can do her housework easily now, sleeps like a top, she sleeps soundly and her appetite is a joy to behold. I can't find words to express my gratitude.

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists.

Over 35-million bottles sold.

GEN. GRANT'S PHILOSOPHY

"Every one has his superstition," wrote Gen. Grant. "One of mine has always been when I started to go anywhere or do anything, never to turn back or to stop until the thing intended was accomplished."

He was right. Those who act aright will find that his first lesson is to know himself, and he who rightly understands himself, will never mistake another's work for his own.

Love's honor is ever found
As the lark that sings in heaven
Builds its nest upon the ground.

IN MEMORIAM.

BURGESS—In loving memory of my wife, Hilda Burgess, who departed this life one year ago today.

Jan. 8, 1922.

Happy were the years we spent together;
Sad and lonely are our hearts today;
Dear, you are always in our memory,
In the grave and far away.
Sleep on in peace, dear Hilda,
Where no sorrow can you see,
Are today.
—Her loving husband and little daughter.

PARRY—In loving memory of our dear Stanley, who died January the 7th 1919.

In our hearts your memory lingers
Sweetly tender, sacred and true.
There is not a day dear Stanley,
That we do not think of you.
—Sadly missed by Father, Mother, Sister, and Brothers.

FORMER BELLEVILLE BOY ELECTED MAYOR NAPANEE

Last Monday, Mr. Alex. McGregor was elected Mayor of Napanee, over Dr. K. Minz. Mayor-elect McGregor is well known in Belleville, having been associated with McIntosh Bros. for many years in their commercial enterprises.

He was manager of the store at Madoc for some time and was removed from that village to Napanee, where he retired but ran his own account and has carried on successfully for the past few years.

Mr. MacGregor has had considerable experience in Napanee Council and will no doubt fill the mayoralty chair with credit to himself as well as the town.

BIRTH AND BREEDING

Aberdeen, Jan. 8.—MacLean's dog was intelligent. One day he was missing. He came in a dead faint in the midst of a busy street. Calling and whistling had no effect, and at last he had to be taken home. Then the discovery was made that he had his paw over a threepenny bit. The dog was an Aberdeen terrier.

TRAGEDY AT KINCARDINE

Seven-Year-Old Girl Sees Parents Murdered—A Cold Blooded Crime

Kincardine, Jan. 7.—A tragic story of the murder of her husband and the probable fatal shooting of herself was told last evening at her home here by Mrs. George Kay, who lay in bed, a bullet hole in her wounds inflicted, it is alleged, by Donald T. McDonald, a returned soldier, now in custody on the charge of murder.

McDonald was brought to the woman's bedside after Mrs. Kay had stated she was "in imminent fear of death.' According to the Provincial Police the woman identified McDonald as the man who shot her husband and also inflicted the bullet wounds upon herself which may prove fatal. Mrs. Kay is in a critical condition tonight, and little hope is held out for her recovery.

Dr. Ferguson stated at noon today that Mrs. Kay who was shot by "Scobie" McDonald Saturday is in a precarious condition, but that he did not expect her death today. She is partially paralyzed.

SIR ADAM BECK ON THE HYDRO RADIAL DEFEAT

"I regret the result of the election very much," said Sir Adam Beck, after the final results were known, "but I cannot say that I am surprised. I have never had any illusions as to the natural hostility of powerful and influential corporate interests who regard Hydro-electric interests as an unwarranted invasion by the people on their preserve. Moreover, I have had warnings in plenty as to what would transpire if the municipalities proceeded with the Hydro-radial enterprise.

"The municipalities in the State of California secured legislation for waterpower development similar to that of this Province. The privately operated electrical interests formed an association to fight the whole movement and threw themselves into the campaign. It has been shown that they openly debauched the electorate, instituted a campaign of misrepresentation, and spent an enormous amount of money to kill the project. Encouraged by their success in defeating the California scheme, they determined to employ similar methods here, not only to defeat the Hydro-radial project, but also to destroy the whole Hydro-electric power movement. Their campaign was centred in Toronto and Hamilton.

"These were serious warnings," continued Sir Adam, "and I was not unaware that, notwithstanding the success of the Hydro-electric power in the field of power and light, there were still those who would rejoice in its destruction. Yet I felt there was no reason to change my attitude. You cannot expect to make progress without struggle. Public ownership cannot achieve success without battling for it. My duty, as I saw it, as Chairman of the Commission, and as one of the trustees for the municipalities, was to go on and place before the people, in an honest, fair and straightforward way, as I tried to do, the facts concerning the municipal radial scheme.

"I knew I could honestly endorse it," declared the Hydro leader. "I knew it was for the great advantage of all the municipal partners. I knew the wonderful possibilities of the district between Toronto, St. Catharines and Niagara Falls. I knew the estimates of our own experts were confirmed by the best outside advice we could secure.

"I knew that I could recommend the project to the municipalities as a thoroughly practicable scheme, and was fully convinced it would be a highly successful and profitable one. Why, then, should I not have gone ahead, even in the face of a possible setback?

"What has happened has been—I don't for a moment want to hide or belittle it—a deep and rather keen disappointment, yet I have no regret in taking the course I did. The result is a warning—a very serious warning —to municipalities that they are not yet out of the woods on their Hydro-electric power. It is a setback to self, and makes it not unlikely that some sort of strategy and the exercise of attack which has proved successful for the moment in stalling the radial project may be applied further and initiated against the whole public ownership movement. It is a timely warning to the municipalities.

"There is only one road to ultimate success as I see it," concluded Sir Adam, "for the Hydro-radial enterprise, like the Hydro-electric enterprise, can be successful only if all the municipalities co-operate in the one scheme. And let me add again to those who, like myself, may be disappointed at the result, that no victory worth achieving was ever won without a struggle. We need the same courage and faith that we have had in the past, and I am convinced that, when the people realize the seriousness of the situation, the municipalities will, as they always have done, ultimately stand together."

TIRE PRICES ADVANCED ON SATURDAY

Pneumatics For Autos Jump 15 p.c. and Solid Truck Tires 10 p.c.

DECIDED FRIDAY

Manufacturers Ascribe Action to 100 p.c. Increase in Rubber Costs

Starting today, users of automobiles and motor trucks will face an increase in the price of tires. With the first rates in force today there will be an increase of 15 per cent. on all pneumatic tires for automobiles, and ten per cent. on all solid tires for motor vehicle trucks.

This, however, is not all, as the advance of 15 per cent will only stand from today until the 20th of January, and orders for tires at the new rates will not be taken for later than that date. It is expected that by that time the manufacturers of rubber tires of all kinds will have decided on another increase in price. Nothing can be said as to what this will amount to, although it is understood that the present raise in prices is quite inadequate to meet market conditions.

The decision to advance prices was reached Friday at a meeting of representatives of the big rubber tire manufacturing firms operating in Canada. It was stated that the meeting had been called in order to discuss the position the tire men were in, owing to the sharp advances in rubber, which had gone up from 35 cents to 100 cents, within a short time. The result of this had been that the tire makers found they were losing money at the prices prevailing, and had to do something without delay to put themselves right with the market, while still preserving further action to the 20th, to depend upon the then state of the rubber market, should seemed to be still on the upgrade.

Following the meeting of tire representatives, which was a protracted one, an official of one of the large companies said that these increases would naturally mean considerably higher costs for those using motor cars, but the position had been forced upon the manufacturers.

The new price lists would mean an increase of 81 apiece on the cheapest Ford tires, while with expensive tires running up to $90 each, the increase would be around $6 to $9 per tire. While a less percentage increase had been made on the solid rubber tires for motor trucks, the ten per cent. extra would add a good deal to their cost. For instance, it was stated, on the average size motor truck tire, 36 x 5, which now costs around $47.50, there would today be an increase of $4.75 per tire. The cost of the 34 x 7 tire on trucks, using 40 x 12 tires, would have to face much heavier charges, since the big tires, costing $125, would at once be increased by $15 to $175, or an increase of $64 for a set of four such tires. The increased prices apply to all tires sold throughout Canada, while prices in the United States will, of course, be adjusted by the manufacturers there.

Rubber market conditions, it was stated yesterday, will also probably affect the cost of other goods. The prices of rubber belting, packing and similar articles had already had a slight increase on January 3rd.

All these price increases, it was said, were entirely due to the sudden speculation in the market of rubber on the British market, which supplies most of the tire manufacturers. Rubber in London and New York six months ago was selling around fourteen cents a pound, the lowest quotation being 12 cents, while it had risen in a series of jumps to 26 and 30 cents a pound today. This jump in value is stated to have come in more within a couple of months, with indications of further advances.

The increase in the cost of the raw rubber was believed to be due to control of output by the big plantations, with a view to stabilizing the rubber supply, while it was not considered improbable that the restrictions on output had been made with an idea of stabilizing prices upwards, after a year of wild downward and then upward fluctuations. Some of the big tire firms had bought heavy supplies of rubber when it was around 54 cents, and most severe losses when it dropped until the low price of 13 cents was reached. Now they were being squeezed on the upward trend.

In view of all this, and the likelihood of further rises in rubber, it was stated that with a jump of 100 per cent. in rubber, and a sharp increase in the cost of cotton used in tires, the present increases of 10 and 15 per cent. for tires were considered very moderate, with a likelihood of further advance when prices were again revised by the 20th of January.

VERDICT IN THE CLINTON CASE

County of Hastings Lose Appeal and Are Assessed With Damages With Costs

In the legal minds of the City during the past three or four days there has been considerable uncertainty and variance of opinion relative to the verdict rendered by the courts in the matter of the County of Hastin's appeal against the decision of Hon. Mr. Justice Mowat in the Clinton case.

This morning Mr. F. E. O'Flynn of O'Flynn, Donnelly and Flynn, local barristers, who acted for the plaintiffs, received a communication from F. L. McCarthy, K.C., Toronto, who was also retained in the case, stating that the verdict was as follows:

The amount initially awarded in favor of Miss Jean Clinton was increased from $4,000 to $10,000, the damages of $1,000 to Dr. Clinton and $600 to Mrs. (Dr.) Clinton were confirmed but not increased, and the appeal of the County was dismissed with costs.

It will thus be noted that the plaintiff's cross-appeal has been successful and the County in the adverse verdict in the beginning. With a total sum of $11,600 and costs, having lost their appeal.

MOST PALATIAL IS RAILWAY KNIGHT'S TRAIN

Fort William, Ont. Jan. 8.—"The most luxurious train that ever crossed Canada." This is how local observers comment on the palatial outfit that retired in here to-day carrying Sir Henry Thornton, the Canadian National mogul, with his retinue. It is said that the equipment set apart for the Prince of Wales, About twenty-five officials of the line are on the party, and the expenses of operating the great Junket is estimated at many thousands daily, taking into account the high salaries of the big chiefs in the entourage.

MAN SLIPS TO ICY GRAVE IN VIEW OF RESCUE PARTY

Victim Sinks From Exhaustion With Help Near at Hand

Windsor, Jan. 8.—With rescuers a few yards away, unable to see him because of blinding snow, a man who for more than an hour had clung to an ice pinnacle as it floated down Detroit River gave a last despairing cry and slipped into the water to his death today.

For more than an hour the fire-boat James H. Elliott cruised in the darkness through heavy ice floes, with members of its crew out in the boat's yawl, searching for the castaway. At intervals they heard his cries, each growing weaker, but were unable to locate him.

The last appeal was: "Oh! I can't last any longer."

Then there was silence, broken only by crunching of ice as it pushed against the boat or as floes crashed together.

Rivermen were at a loss to account for a man being about on that section of the river, unless the victim had been engaged in bringing a cargo of whiskey from the other side and had been trapped on a large cake of ice as it broke away from the main body.

GERMANY VOTED IN DEFAULT BY COMMISSION

Sir John explained that he was unable to vote for the proposition because he felt that this action took the matter out of the hands of the Commission and placed it under the jurisdiction of governments.

SECOND VICTIM OF KINCARDINE TRAGEDY MAY BE CLAIMED

Wife of Slain Man is in a Critical Condition—Murderer Confesses to Crime

Kincardine, Jan. 9.—Mrs. George Kay, wife of the victim of Saturday's tragedy here, was tonight engaged in hovering between life and death.

Mrs. Kay's right side is completely paralyzed from the bullet fired by Nicholas Dan McDonald while the family was at dinner on Saturday. The leaden pellet is embedded near the woman's brain. Doctors have probed for the bullet, but failed to locate it, and her slender hold on life renders any further operation almost impossible.

GRANDMOTHER HAS MILDRED

Little seven-year-old Mildred Kay, heroine of the tragedy, rendered assistance to her mother and gave the alarm, in spite of her terror, is in her own home in the care of her grandmother, Mrs. George Campbell, mother of the stricken woman.

Provincial officers stated today that they cannot get final details surrounding the tragedy until tomorrow, when they will take photographs and obtain evidence from all who have knowledge of the crime. The inquest will be held here at 730 o'clock Wednesday evening. The preliminary hearing has been set for Saturday, but there is every likelihood that the Crown will ask for a week's adjournment.

While Kincardine and the surrounding district was still gasping in horror at the gruesomeness of the whole affair, this afternoon McDonald slept like a log in his cell in the County Jail at Walkerton.

CONFESSES TO CRIME.

"Scobie Dan" McDonald has formally confessed to the murder of George Kay of Kincardine on Saturday afternoon. This morning in his dingy cell in the county jail he made confession of guilt before two Provincial officers.

The slayer related in detail almost identical with the details given by Kay and himself for the rifle after he had demanded the signature by Kay on a receipt for a promissory note, which he believed Kay had alleged against him several years ago.

FRANCE'S ARMED HOST READY FOR ADVANCE INTO GERMANY

Order is Issued to Concentrate Forces in Area at Dusseldorf

OCCUPATION INEVITABLE

British Without Official Knowledge of French Plans—French Troops Massing at Portal of Coal Area Ready to March Forward

Coblenz, Jan. 8.—Before dawn this morning the concentration of French troops in the Dusseldorf area had begun in earnest. By nightfall 26,000 men had passed through Coblenz to detrain at the gates of the Ruhr, prepared to march into Germany's richest industrial district when the word is given.

The movement order, expected all day yesterday, was issued just after midnight to-day through all the area southward occupied by French troops.

It was communicated to the barracks, where companies and regiments had been ready for eighteen hours.

The soldiers of France will soon be marching into Essen.

This long-talked-of occupation is now accepted as an almost accomplished fact, and Government officials, business men, even the bankers, worried by the exchange problem, regard it calmly. They display a reasonable amount of confidence in the results, as evidenced by the resistance of the franc to the reported bear movement in prospect from London.

There is expectation in certain circles close to the Premier that the first phase of the Ruhr action will have been carried out when the Premier takes the floor in the Chamber of Deputies Thursday to make his statement before the House.

London, Jan. 9.—The present French movement into the Ruhr involving Dusseldorf will terminate at Essen, according to information received in British official circles from their own observers in Rhineland. The British maintain they are still without official knowledge of the French plans.

Essen, Germany, Jan. 9.—Advance troops of the French army, largely with technical equipment, have already reached the neighboring town of Kettwig, (seven miles southwest of Essen) and the section between Dusseldorf and Essen is half covered by French military forces, according to private advices reaching here to-day.

English Murderers Pay the Penalty

CONDEMNED MAN AND WOMAN WERE EXECUTED IN LONDON THIS MORNING

London, Jan. 9.—Mrs. Edith Thompson and Frederick Bywaters were executed to-day for murder of the woman's husband, Percy Thompson on October 4th, 1922.

Bywaters was executed in Pentonville prison at nine o'clock and Mrs. Thompson followed a few minutes later in Holloway jail.

Bywaters met his death calmly while Mrs. Thompson had to be carried to the scaffold in a semi-paralyzed condition. She met her death with strong protestations of her innocence. The condemned man visited in their last hours by relatives. In her interview with her parents, and brother and sister, Mrs. Kay claimed, however, that when he invaded the Kay home with his rifle on Saturday he wished only to terrify the household and did not intend to commit murder.

McDonald contends that the first shot was fired during a struggle between Kay and himself for the rifle after he had demanded the signature by Kay on a receipt for a promissory note, which he believed Kay had alleged against him several years ago.

WEEK OF PRAYER DULY OBSERVED IN CHURCHES

Series of Meeting Opened at John Street Last Night—Devotional Exercises to be Continued Throughout the Week

Seventy-five years ago the Evangelical Alliance of Great Britain issued a call for the churches to observe the first full week in the New Year as a week of prayer, and since then both hemispheres have been held in all the larger centres, and every year an increasing volume of people gather together for devotional services.

The first in the series of meetings in this city for this year was held in John street church last night evening, and a very helpful meeting it was. The attendance was good, the singing was hearty, the prayers were earnest and fervent, and the address very timely. Rev. D. C. Ramsay, pastor of the church, presided, and led in the opening devotional exercises. Prayer was offered by Rev. Messrs. A. S. Kerr, Wesley Elliott and George Marshall. A Scripture lesson on prayer was read by Principal Baker of Albert College.

The general topic for the week is the Lord's Prayer; and Rev. Dr. Brown, Holloway Street church, dealt with the first petition, delivering a very practical and helpful address on Reverence. He made an earnest plea for greater reverence for God's name. His word, His holy day, His works and His ordinances.

Mr. Bankier sang a beautiful solo in his usual appreciative manner.

The meeting this evening will be in the Tabernacle, and Dr. MacNaughton will be the speaker.

DOG SAVED FROM BURNED BARN

Emerged From Ruined Building Alive with His Coat Singed

Deseronto, Jan. 8.—A dog belonging to Mr. Jack Marrigan was the only living thing that emerged from the burning of Mr. Marrigan's premises on the 4th concession yesterday morning, alive. At about 6 o'clock after the fire, when all buildings had been consumed by the flames, the dog emerged from under some charred hay. He was badly singed and burned about the eyes, but was ready for his breakfast, which he ate eagerly. It is supposed that the dog fell with the hay which was on fire and that the water from the fire hose put it out before consuming it, for the fact remained under the charred hay till daylight before coming out. To see dogs alive from such a raging conflagration as was this morning nothing short of a miracle.

NEW BOOTLEGGING DEVICE

Police Find Automatic Machine to Dump "Evidence"

Pittsburgh, Jan. 8.—Something new in bootlegging accoutrements—an automatic dumping machine—was discovered by the police this morning in a raid on John Lucas's grocery and butcher shop in Butler Street. Five bottles of moonshine and the apparatus were taken and Lucas was charged with violation of the State dry law.

Had Lucas not been a little distinctory the police would have lost their evidence, the bottles of liquor were each in a holder which was part of the dumping apparatus. A lever in the front of the store was connected by wires with the apparatus and a slight downward pressure was sufficient to pull the cords and turn the bottles over, dropping the "evidence" into the bottom of the ice box, where all the liquor ran into a pipe leading to the sewer.

According to the police, several places have escaped prosecution recently through some method of disposing of their booty before it was found, but the apparatus uncovered in Lucas's store is not believed to have been used in these places.

Charles Cherry, who is being feat ured as the Lieutenant Gothrie Mr Cinnie in his production of the A. A Milne new light comedy, "The Dover Road," coming to Griffin's this Friday Night, January 12th., has been leading man for more of America's we men stars than almost any other act or on the stage. His ease and savoi faire the is a graduate of Oxford Uni versity, the son of Lady (Jane Cherry) created a demand for hi services as leading man soon after hi first appearance in the United Stater at Wallack's Theatre in 1899.

His first supported Mary Manner ing, and then Henrietta Crosman in "The Sword of the King."

When Elsie deWolf was starred in "Suzanne," 1904, Mr. Cherry was her leading man. He also played th same part when the play was pr duced in London with Ethel Barry more in the leading role.

Then for several seasons he acte leads from Master Elliot—in he two big Clyde Fitch successes, "He Cows Way" and "The Great Mac Neil and in "Under the Greenwood Tree."

He was the Elliott Grey in the tr rical of Lester Wallack's old play "Rosedale," in which Elsie Ferguso was the star.

He was the Gregory Jardine, sup porting Ethel Barrymore in the stag version of Anne Douglas Sedwick's novel, "Tante."

Then he played Andre D'Egaux with Anna Meredith in "The Glorious Adventure," and Jeffrey with Elsie Ferguson in "The Outcast."

One of Mr. Cherry's big hits was h Clyde Fitch's "Girls." It was so big a hit that he was starred in Fitch' next comedy, "The Bachelor" and ap peared in it for two years. He has just completed two and a half year as one of the co-stars in Comee Hami ton's "Scandal" with Gaithrie Mr Clintic engaged him for Mr. Latime in "The Dover Road."

QUARTET OF COMEDIANS FUR NISH SNAPPY COMEDY IN McKENETTY'S "HOME TALENT"

Mack Sennett's latest multi-reel photo-fantasy is a five-reel As sociated Producer's masterpiece re vealing all the qualities with which the celebrity of its creator has been identified as Master. It came gaily yesterday to the Regent Theatre.

In a spirit of hilarious comedy the plot opens, introducing a quartet of standard vaudeville performers in a country hotel, where-they can neither remain nor leave. They owe the land lord (Charlie Murray) too much money.

The four unfortunates stranded on the shoals of the Three-a-Day are Bert Turpin, James Finlayson, Eddie Gribbon and Kalla Pasha. Their acts are a score of years behind the time—almost as old as their board bill and the exhibition of their "stunts" supplies much of the surly and lugubrious comedy. After a furious quarrel between the two "teams," a reconciliation is effected and they decide under Ben Turpin's leadership to pool their talents and put forth a great show that ones they enter into rehearsals calling the help of the hotel-man's daughter (Phyllis Haver), who, it turns out, is more beautiful than she looks in her scullery clothes.

The slave mart of ancient Rome is shown wherein more than a hundred beautiful captives or bought and Kalla Pasha, in the guise of a Nara-minded person bids against the gallant and heroic Eddie Gribbon, recent ly from the country but built like a gladiator.

Out of these episodes Phyllis Haver emerges in the radiance of loveliness not to be duplicated on the screen, and she rounds out a picture of unusual beauty.

"The Applicant" an amusing Vitagraph comedy, a pleasing closing to the "Robinson Crusoe" serial, and an interesting Travelogue are being exhibited on the same program.

St. John, N.B., Jan. 8.—On board the S. S. Metagama which arrived here to-day from Glasgow and Liverpool was C. E. D. Wordlig, K.C. of Montreal, a director of the C. P. R. He said he had spent ten days on the other side but his trip was unofficial and he had no comment to make on conditions on the political situation in England.

The Metagama brought 172 cabin and 817 other passengers, this latter including Scottish and English settlers mainly for the west.

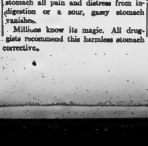
"One Clear Call" is not only absolutely free of any objectionable scenes, but its theme is one that will find a responsive chord in many spectators.

To tell the story here would detract from the alluring air of mystery and the many surprises in store in the picture itself. It is based on the famous novel of the same name by Frances Nimmo Greene, and was prepared for the screen by Bess Meredyth. The locale is a small town in Alabama.



Followers of the screen will find many of their favorites in the cast. The four principal roles are taken by Milton Sills, Irene Rich, Henry B. Walthall and Claire Windsor.

Made under the Louis B. Mayer banner, "One Clear Call" is lavishly produced and beautifully photographed. Women will find it especially attractive because of the girls' fashion creations. It is released through First National.

"Fresh From the Farm", a highly amusing Christie comedy, Reginald Denny in "Never Let Go," and Fox News were exhibited during the evening.

JUDGES GET $10,000 EACH

Order-in-Council Approved, Granting Payment in Settlement for Labors

By an order in-Council, approved by the Lieutenant-Governor on December 20, Justice, Riddell and Latchford, for their services as Timber Royalty Commissioners have been granted $10,000 each.

The order reads:

"Upon the recommendation of the Honorable the Prime Minister, the Committee of Council, that for their payment of $10,000 each be made to the Hon. Mr. Justice Riddell and the Hon. Mr. Justice Latchford, in full settlement for their services as Commissioners to investigate and inquire into the timber operations in the province of Ontario under orders-in-Council of March 9, 1920, and April 22, 1921, and that the said amounts so charged to vote 105, item 10, of the estimates for the year 1923."

Previous payments to the two commissioners were of $2,000 each.

Hon. Mr. Raney told the legislature that no more payments would be made, but later told the House that he had only given his personal view. Apparently his second thoughts have been best, so far as the commissioners are concerned.

The question, of course, will again arise as to whether the judges can accept the remuneration in view of the Dominion Government regulation prohibiting judges from accepting remuneration for outside services of this kind.

IMPUDENCE UNBOUNDED

Paris, Jan. 8.—That the impudence of the Soviet government is unbounded, says the Matin, is shown by the latest proposition from Moscow to France, transmitted by M. Herriott, mayor of Lyons, who recently returned from a journey to Russia.

The extraordinary request conveyed to Premier Poincare is that the French Government dispatch a military mission to Russia to order to reorganize the Red armies and various Russian military institutions. Apparently not content with this request, the Soviet Government asks the suggestion that the mission be placed under command of Marshal Joffre.

It is hardly necessary to say that neither M. Poincare nor his Minister of War, M. Maginot, is inclined to examine the proposition favorably.

JUNIOR CITY LEAGUE GAME LAST NIGHT

Midgets Won the Opening Game From Quinte Quad

SCORE 2-1

Some Fast Hockey—Boys' Mayor Hayes Faced the Puck—Next Game is Midgets vs. O.S.D.

The Junior City Hockey League got away in a good start last evening when the Belleville Midgets trounced the Quinte Quad in the initial fixture of the season. From last night's exhibition it is apparent that some good hockey will be furnished by the lads. The Midgets who won the Shield last year, were without the services of "Peck" Arnold, burly defence man, but Cornell replaced him and showed up well. The Arnold brothers, Ritchie and Raymond, played sterling hockey for the winners. The former possesses a wicked shot and rushes well. Ray does the bulk of the work on the forward line. Scott turned in a nice game on left wing and will be heard from later. Townsend played a nice game for the Quad at centre ice. He was out-locked on many occasions last evening. Kerr, Cawthorpe and Leavens worked hard but failed to plant the disc in the net. Deacon scored the losers' lone tally on a pass. Colling and Cole guarded the nets and were kept rather busy. Within a few minutes of time the Quad sent the whole team forward in an effort to even the score, but with no avail. Mayor Hayes of the late

LOCAL CHEESE BOARDS AND CO-OPERATIVE MARKETING

Below is published from last week's issue of the Perth Expositor a letter to the editor of that journal from the Secretary of the Perth Cheese Board which emphatically denies the statements published by the United Dairymen Co-operative of Montreal, relative to the comparative selling prices of cheese. This co-operative market society has always endeavored to convince the public that higher prices are obtained for cheese if the sale of same is made through their organization:—

"In a recent issue of your paper an article headed 'Comparative Cheese Board Prices,' issued by the United Dairymen Co-operative, was published, giving the average prices paid for cheese at the various cheese boards in Eastern Ontario, in comparison to the average price paid at the sales of the United Dairymen Co-operative in Montreal during the past season.

"This, as far as the Perth Cheese Board is concerned, is altogether erroneous and misleading. The statement gives the average price paid on Perth Cheese Board as 16.06 cents, when it should be approximately 16.60 cents. It also gives the cost of freight from Perth to Montreal, together with the selling charges of the Co-operative company, as .38 cents, whereas the freight and cartage alone on cheese is .39 cents and the selling charges ten cents per box or .12 cents per pound, making in all .51 cents. The summary issued by the U. D. C. gives the average price paid by them as 16.76 cents without deducting the freight and selling charges. Now if one were to deduct from this the .51 cents freight and selling charges, which at present are paid by the firms buying the cheese, the price paid to the producer would average only 16.27 cents, which is .33 cents less than the average received on the Perth Cheese Board. Thus instead of a margin of .32 cents in favor of the U. D. C. there is really a margin of .33 cents in favor of the Perth Cheese Board."

The country cheese boards have for many, many years proved convenient and most advantageous in the marketing of cheese and before they are supplanted with this newly conceived idea of distribution and sale from a central warehouse owned by the producers themselves and operating on a co-operative plan, the whole matter should be thoroughly sifted out.

Within the last few months, several instances have been brought to light where co-operative societies were not the tremendous success which they were primarily intended to be, and it would appear that those in charge of the organization plans covering the establishment of these new channels of trade are evidently endeavoring to facilitate considerably their earning power and are simultaneously planning to augment their income.

The salary question of the directing heads of the co-operative societies now operating has been the subject of much discussion, as the amounts paid for administration seem to be quite out of reason and constitute too large a percentage of overhead to enable profitable operation of the schemes. This is of course, to the detriment of the producer and patron who must finally pay the piper.

Such "little" things as freight, cartage, and the other "minor" selling charges which enter into organization arguments, should be clearly explained in the prospectus propositions of these organizers and the figures should not be so juggled that the facts will be misinterpreted by those interested.

Before the final decision is made, close investigation is extremely necessary. Pictures are sometimes painted quite easily, but the true color does not always come out.

THE MOTOR LAWS

In the editorial columns of our local contemporary have appeared from time to time, suggestions covering changes in the motor laws governing highway traffic, and in common with many other journals in Ontario, we hasten to heartily endorse the proposals that lights be compulsory on all vehicles travelling the highways after dusk.

It should be pointed out that these suggestions are by no means new ones, as strenuous efforts have been made by the motor leagues and other organizations to have this feature enacted into legislation. Something has to be done for the safety of motorists as well as of the public. There should be a nation-wide drive to curb speed-maniacs. Some drivers apparently wish to demonstrate how smart and important a dare-devil he is and the many ways in which he endeavors to convey this impression, are exceedingly varied and also foolish, to say the least. In the larger cities he tries to demonstrate his cleverness in driving past stand ing street cars about to stop to discharge passengers, in other districts he is experimenting in how near he can come to pedestrians without hitting them, in running down the felines and canines that are trying at the risk of their lives to cross the street, and in purposely disobeying traffic signals at the intersections. These characteristics of the "show-off" boys are indeed an object of contempt and condemnation by the careful motorist who, unfortunately, as far as the public is concerned, is adverse criticism of all drivers in general, must equally suffer with the guilty.

That magistrates are apparently through in showing leniency in violations of the traffic ordinances is evident in some recent court decisions. On Friday of last week Police Magistrate Jelfs in his Hamilton court, issued no uncertain warnings to offenders, when he announced that he had decided to impose jail terms instead of the usual fines, for infraction of the speed-laws. Magistrate Jones at Toronto, has previously adopted this same attitude and doubtless many other beaks throughout the province will deal likewise when giving judgment.

The machinery is in the Act to cover many offences, but in the matter of the red-light to be carried by all vehicles after dusk, this feature will have to be added to the statute books as it would appear that, without this clause, the present Act is concededly inadequate.

Just now a very good recipe for the avoidance of accident and personal safety for both motorists and the public would appear to be, in poetic satire:

When you walk,
And when you fliv,
Look both ways
And try to live.

CANADIAN

Hark! Canadians who remember
That eventful August Day,
When the War Dogs broke their leashes
And our Country joined the fray;
Canada, then a far Dominion,
Of Old England's, o'er the sea
To the World unknown, unnoticed,
Just a mere nonentity.

Till her noble Sons and Daughters
By their deeds on Flanders plain
Made her name revered and honored
Through all lands from main to main.
Gained the lauded recognition
From the world, of her true worth;
Canada emerged, a Nation
But—Canadians gave her birth.

And—as that great heritage
From their fallen hands we take,
Let each true Canadian strive
With best effort till we make
All our National Institutions
Worthy of the name they bear,
As they watch from over there.

Fellow Workers, now and ever,
Let our Motto every day
Be to give our best endeavor
Till we gake the National Way:
Paramount in Railway Service;
Worthy its Canadian Name;
Pride of Workmen; Pride of Country;
Symbol of our Nations' Fame.

PRESS OPINIONS

WHO PAYS THE TAXES

(Toronto Saturday Night)

Does it matter, by the way, who pays the taxes? It is a question that does not appear to be clear to many civic officials, who obviously prefer the delusion that are levied almost wholly on the land men and owners of property occupied by tenants. Hence, they can boast in gatherers from certain representations made in regard to a proposed increase tax for the city of Montreal, in connection therewith that it is suggested that those who pay really no property or household taxes should pay an income tax to the extent of the realty tax that those who are exempting large majority of the house and block owners. In other words, it is proposed that a tenant shall pay the taxes for which the owners are exempt. As has been pointed out by one writer, a man with a $5,000 salary, living in his own home, may be exempt from a municipal income tax; while another as other man with a $1,500 salary but living in a rented house or apartment would pay a tax on a portion of his income, even though much less able to do so.

Such is, of course, a very fine argument from the strictly correct point of view, particularly if there be long boom an element of speculation in the investment which tend to make all taxation most distasteful—but it is not in accord with the facts. To prove the correctness of this contention it is not necessary to go beyond the confines of Winnipeg itself. It is only within the last two or three years that an exhaustive inquiry into the exorbitant high rents charged especially for apartments, was conducted by a public commission. One of the main arguments given in support of the contention of the apartment block owners was the constant by increasing rate of taxation, which in turn necessitated boosts in rents to meet the mounting overhead costs including taxes. There was no doubt whatever in the minds an official recognition of the fact that the tenant paid taxes through his rent, and pretty steep at that, as many can vouch for.

This phase of the situation is also not confirmed but clearly pointed out in the last issue of the Toronto Bureau of Municipal Research by Mr Thomas Bradshaw, a former finance commissioner, through an article in which he says it is not uncommon to presume that the tax burden mainly falls upon the capitalist and not up on the wage earner. A moment's consideration will convince anyone that it distributes itself through all living expenses—it appears in the rent, in the food bill and in the price of everything that the poor, as well as the rich, must buy. The landlord and the merchant are municipal agents for the collection of taxes, even if they, or their tenants, or customers, do not recognize the fact. Any man who believes that he can live in a city and not contribute to its revenue is under a delusion, for he pays its costs either conciously or unconsciously, and, consequently everyone should be interested in efficient government at the lowest possible cost.

ONTARIO APPLES ARE KEPT OFF TWO MARKETS

(Evening Telegram)

Canadian apples fail to get into the British market because Old country people cannot afford to buy them, native or imported, at any place.

Canadian apples fail to get in to the Canadian table of fare because even Canadians cannot afford to buy native apples at the prices asked.

Apples are unobtainable in an Ontario village scarcely miles from Toronto except from one dealer. That dealer is retailing a stock of eighty-five barrels of apples at four pounds for twenty-five cents, or approximately $11 per barrel.

Ontario's system of distribution or non-distribution is almost an exact science. The workings of that science seem to widen the spread of profit taking between the apple grower who wants to sell Ontario apples at a fair profit and the would-be apple eater who wants to buy Ontario apples at a fair price.

Where just $1 did more than $40!

This was the case of Pte. C. Oakley of the 96th Highlanders. Writing to the Zam-Buk Co., he says: "I could have saved myself $40 if I had only known of Zam-Buk earlier. I had the misfortune to cut my leg very badly. I immediately went to a doctor, who sewed up the wound and attended me for five weeks, during which time I was obliged to give up my work. At the end of that time the wound was no better, and the doctor advised me to go into a hospital for treatment, but as the doctor's treatment had already cost me $40, and I had received no benefit, I determined to try something on my own account.

"Just then I heard Zam-Buk highly recommended, I procured some and commenced using it. I soon discovered that the healing power of Zam-Buk is simply marvellous! DIARY OF A FASHION MODEL

"I'm going to my furrier's. Would you like to come along?" Madame asked me.

"I've love it. This is just the morning for a brisk walk," I replied.

That's exactly why I'm going over to his place instead of letting him come to me," Madame explained.

"It's much too gorgeous to stay in side," I agreed.

"I wanted you to come, too, so you could see the fur frock he's making for me," Madame explained.

"Oh, you are getting one of those becoming all-fur garments?" I asked Madame.

"Yes, my dear," she answered. "I've fought against it a long time because I thought perhaps I wasn't allst enough for a fur frock."

"But, Madame—" I protested.

She interrupted me, however. "Oh, I know, I'm tall and thin enough for an average garment," she said.

"But her frocks are so stanning," I protested.

"That's why I wanted one," Madame agreed. "But I had a foolish idea it might be too bulky for me. However, the new pelts are dreams, and that dress is almost as pliable to the touch as broadcloth."

"What fur is it?" I asked.

"Broadtail," she answered.

By this time we were turning into the tailor's shop.

"It is ready for Madame to try on, said the gorgeous," the funny little bride assured us.

When Madame emerged clad in the new fur dress, I heartily agreed with him.

Broadtail is the richest, most gorgeous fur I've ever seen," I commented.

Yes, and its lustrous black surface is stunning," Madame agreed.

I think the arrangement of the pelts lengthwise on your dress is decidedly a smart touch," I told her.

That was my idea," she told me. How do like this little slant effect over the left hip?"

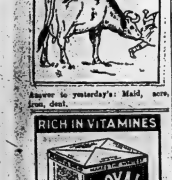
It's stunning," I said. "What metal is the brown satin that comes from the centre of the star?"

It's gilt," she answered. "It's very still quality, as you can see, although the broadcloth."

Madame had on a little brown hat with ribbed cockades that went beautifully with the costume.

This dress will be warm enough for street wear even on the coolest days," she said.

Yes, quite very smart," I agreed. But you can't wear it far into the spring."



I can have it made into a jacket sometime, perhaps," she said. "But I won't think of that for a long time yet. I've had my heart set on a fur street frock, and I am more than pleased to be the owner of this dress."

Baked Ham—Select a ham, not too fat, weight about 14 lbs., and put in enough cider or equal parts of sweet cider and cold water, or fresh cold water, to cover. Bake in the morning drain, wipe, dray, scrape and trim if necessary.

Prepare a thick dough by mixing flour and water together, roll to ½ inch thickness and enclose ham in it. Wet the edges of the dough and press them firmly together. Place ham in a large dripping pan and bake in a hot oven until dough is a dark brown then reduce heat and continue cooking slowly in a moderate oven 4 to 5 hours; remove from oven, break off shell and skin the ham, trim off ragged portions, sprinkle thickly with bread crums mixed with ½ their amount of brown sugar, stick the fat side with cloves in diagonal rows an inch apart, return ham to oven and brown a rich dark color. Slip a paper frill on the knuckles, garnish with lemon and serve on a bed of parsley, with horseradish sauce.

HINTS THAT HELP

Home-Made Soap.

If you make your own soap, use an egg beater to stir it after it is all put together. It will take much less time for the stirring.

Shines While It Cleans.

Add a few drops of kerosene to the water with which you wash the kitchen linoleum and see how it will brighten and clean it.

It Helps Sometimes.

When the thread with which you are sewing becomes knotted, pull it toward the needle and it will frequently unravel without any further trouble.

Blankets.

After your blankets have been washed and dried, and while they are still on the line, beat them with a carpet beater; this will make the wool light and soft.

Curtain Pulls.

Yarn may be twisted and tied to make gay curtain pulls for the kitchen, nursery or living room. The yarn may take the form of chic French dolls, birds or poilgy animals.

Prevent Hands from Chapping.

When handling wet clothes in cold weather, rub a little corn starch on your hands before you go out. This will prevent them from chapping.

The Potato Basket.

This receptacle should be watched carefully, for one potato gone wrong will taint the whole bunch or basket and attract vermin and mice.

PROVED RECIPES

Cherry Icing.

Take one bottle of cherries (small) and add the juice to about 2½ cups of powdered sugar (add more sugar if too thin or a little milk if too thick). After beating until all sugar lumps are out, spread over cold cake then put the cherries around the top and pat, over gently. This makes a very pretty Christmas cake.

LINKED LIVES

By

D. Kinmount Roy

"I'm think," Sandy replied, with a quivering lip, and a great effort to keep back the tears; "I canna—I canna run any mair!"

Then a silence between them, until the little fellow said cheerfully, while his eyes still glistened with tears that had not fallen, "I can make pictures for her, if I canna run errands for her," as he cut a sketch-book, he said, "I am learning. I have squirrels and birds and rabbits—and a deer, I am sure, I saw a deer, in the park, when I was there with my father."

"So Thomas is a mighty hunter, and you are setting out to be an artist," Maitland said, gravely.

"I dinna ken," Sandy said, falteringly, not quite sure of Maitland's meaning.

Donald had moved away a little during their conversation, but now returned as he had noticed his wife in the distance; she had grown anxious, owing to their long absence, and gathering up the boy in his wraps, Donald lifted him from the rustic seat where he had lain, and carried him toward his mother.

"I hear your heart beating, father!" Sandy said, as his father held him, close and tenderly in his arms.

"Oh, you are dreaming, Sandy man, just dreaming, you will be hearing the grass grow next!"

"Na," Sandy said, "I canna hear the grass grow, 'cause it grows at night, and I canna ever keep awake long enough. I think maybe it grows in the daytime too, but I never kent when."

"Well, well, we must find out! Mary Alice said confidingly. No wonder Sandy heard his father's heart beat, for his pulse was bounding under the sudden excitement of a new hope; she hoped that his wee laddie might one day regain his lost powers of movement.

The week passed without any sign from Eric Hardcastle, but evidently the world of affairs could not stand still, even for the Squire, and Maitland returned to town, leaving his confidential man, Rufus Williams, at Pomeroy, and the young people at Woodlands. Williams was a jolly good fellow, to whom nothing came amiss, and Sherwin was well pleased with his society; he was equally at home in the hunting-field or the ballroom, and could play many games under the sun; and as a fitting finish to his accomplishments he was a man of exuberant spirits and unflagging energy.

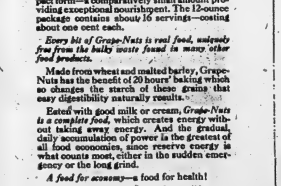
The days passed pleasantly enough for the two men; callers were quite numerous, not being aware of Hardcastle's absence; and Glenmore's return was also much commented upon with general satisfaction—all of which was very mystifying to Sherwin. All the same, no one quite understood the situation, and the feeling which hovered in the air was as perplexing as it was intangible and vague.

They was nothing remarkable in the absence of the Squire, although his journeys from home in late years had been quite infrequent, owing, it was understood, to the condition of his health, and now it was said that his journey was occasioned by the need of special medical advice, as the local physicians had found the symptoms obscure and sometimes alarming.

But Eric Hardcastle had not gone direct to London, as the faithful Mc-Gregor reported to his master's authority. He had called by the way at a small place on the borders of Yorkshire, .It was the property of his son, which he inherited from his mother, and the Squire had seen little of it for many years. His coming was unexpected, but most gratifying to the steward, who prided himself on being always ready to receive his master.

Here in comfort and safety he paused to rest and think out his plans.

It was about the time in his strenuous, self-seeking life that the necessity of weighing the pros and cons had been forced upon him, and as we shall see, the few days of uncertainty cost him dearly.



His hand, seemingly, seemed to have lost something of its cunning to shape the ends he desired, and a new element, a doubt, crept into his mind. Having found Kinkman less' faithful than he believed, he was chary in trusting another, with the result that the messenger he sent on before him to the city was too imperfectly instructed to be much service. In one point only he had scored a perfect success; he had been in time to anticipate the payment of the cheque given to Kinkman, or that when that worthy, in his usual makeup for such occasions, presented himself, it was declined on the ground of some informality, until further instructions. Kinkman acted in part to perfection, expressed the proper degree of astonishment and desired to hear the words of the instructions; he complained of the inconvenience, while he requested to have the cheque changed into gold for present convenience, and left, stating in a very businesslike way, when he would call again.

But all the same he knew that a certain doom, and a most distant death or ruin to one or other, or both.

His son, for whom he had schemed so long—whose wife, for whom he had hoped so much, could no longer benefit by his successful crimes, but neither could his son or Eric Hardcastle!' he told himself, with a wild gleam of fiendish enjoyment. "We'll be even, and cry quits yet, Stef!' and his hands worked mysteriously, like one reading some hateful thing, while his evil face showed hideous contortions. The miserable bastard Kinkman of many aliases can pull down the soaring ambition of his son who aspires to rank high on the strength of his ill-gotten wealth!' he murmured, with evident satisfaction.

What does food economy mean to you?

DOESN'T it mean good living at low cost? Foods that are "short" in nourishing value and "long" in waste are never economical.

The food, Grape-Nuts, is economical to the last serving in the package, because every golden-crisp granule really contributes to body-building.

Grape-Nuts offers the sturdy nutriment of wheat and malted barley in unusually compact form—a comparatively small amount providing exceptional nourishment. The 12-ounce package contains about 16 servings—costing about one cent each.

Every bit of Grape-Nuts is real food, uniquely free from the bulky waste found in many other food products.

Made from wheat and malted barley, Grape-Nuts has the benefit of 20 hours' baking which so changes the starch of these grains that easy digestibility naturally results.

Eaten with good milk or cream, Grape-Nuts is a complete food, which creates energy without taking away energy. And the gradual, daily accumulation of power is the greatest of all food economies, since reserve energy for what counts most, either in the sudden emergency or the long grind.

A food for economy—a food for health!

And a food with a charm of flavor all its own.

CLARA CAT AND HER TAIL

"Oh," wailed Clara Cat. "What shall I do?" She had smelt a rat and had been running excitedly from the hen to barrel and from barrel to cart in the basement. Then in her haste and excitement she knocked over a can. There was a crash and a clatter and she air was filled with the odor of fresh paint so that Clara could no longer smell her rat. But it wasn't the noise or the strong odor of paint that worried Clara. It was her tail. It' beautiful, bushy, grey tail was his, sticky, and green!

What could she do? She surely did not want any old rat to see her in such a fix. She tried to lick off the paint, but it tasted too dreadful. Then she tried rolling on the grass, but discovered that only made things worse. She was getting green paint on her back as well. Clara felt that she had never known what trouble was before. She tried to sit on her tail and hide it, but she couldn't get it all curled up under her.

Just when she was on the point of tears, who should come sauntering down the street but Percy Persian. Clara hung her head in shame. Things couldn't be worse. Percy was the lods of the town.

Percy saw the green tail, but he wasn't going to let Clara put anything over on him. Clara was the belle of the town as long as he was the very latest thing. "Why, Clara," he cried "where did you ever get it? I read in the paper they are the very latest thing in Paris, but I didn't know where to get one."

It didn't take Clara long to discover she had made a hit. All the cats came to see her and admired her wonderful green tail. "Oh, yes," she would blush, "isn't it lovely? They're all the rage in Paris, you know."

Then one day Clara's little mistress could stand it no longer. She felt so sorry for poor kitty with her green tail that she begged some turpentine from her mother and cleaned off the paint.

Again Clara was disconsolate. Now what could she do? If she told the cats they would all laugh at her. Oh, it was awful!

Down the street came Percy Persian and again Clara hung her head and blushed with shame.

"Why, Clara, what have you done to your beautiful green tail?" he cried in surprise.

"Oh," Clara murmured, "they've gone out, you know. No one's wearing green tails in Paris any longer."

"Yes, yes," purred Percy quickly, trying to let on as though he knew all about it. "Yes, so I read. What it was a beautiful style while it lasted."

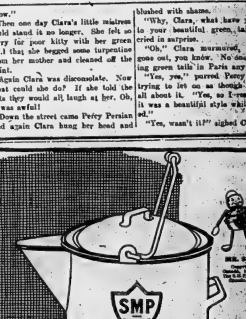
"Yes, wasn't it?" sighed Clara Cat.

Boy Adventurers

Nelson and His Bear Hunt

Lord Nelson, who ranks among England's greatest naval heroes, became a midshipman during his boyhood. Early in life he showed great skill and daring which were to make him famous in after years.

One of his early voyages was into the arctic regions. Young Nelson was one of a party allowed to go on shore one afternoon. No particular attention was paid to him by his shipmates, so he left the party and started off alone. After some time had elapsed, one of the sailors happened to look up suddenly, when he caught sight of Nelson and a huge polar bear in the distance. The bear was about to attack the boy and was gradually getting closer to him. The rest of the party could see that he was in great danger, but they were too far away to help him then, and they feared that before they could reach him he would be killed.



'GUN MISSES FIRE.

Nelson raised his musket to fire at the animal, but there was no report. For some unknown reason the gun had failed to go off. The only thing left for him to do was to attempt to fight off the onrushing bear by using his weapon as a club, and he accordingly set to do this. At this point a gun was fired from the ship, signaling for the return of the sailors. The noise frightened the bear, which turned and ran swiftly away.

Upon the return to the ship, Nelson, when asked why he had undertaken at least single-handed, replied coolly that he wanted the bear's skin to take home to his father.

Following this experience, he still-ed on many voyages and distinguished himself by his skill as a sailor and by his great courage. He died in the year from the rank... At the time Napoleon was planning to invade England he met a French fleet off Cape Trafalgar in 1806 and gained a great victory. It was during this battle that he signaled from his flagship the words which have become so celebrated: "England expects every man to do his duty." The saddest part, however, was that Nelson was killed in this battle, but he lived long enough to learn of the complete defeat of the enemy.

Who knows what the history of Great Britain would have been if the brave Nelson had not frightened away by his gun from the ship?

Market Comments Today.
(Harper & Co.)

Market appears to be entirely professional and there is no reason to expect any real reaction (unless) by a general shrewing over of long lines. There is, of course, a certain amount of profit-ing, but generally stocks are being well absorbed and apparently the market is not overbought.

(Miller & Co.)

Market strong in spots and we continue to look for the same kind of market right along with an upward tendency. We would pick carefully, trying to select stocks as should benefit most by last year's advance but did not do so. Prominent amongst these we should say are the lines and oppers. In the line list we figure Kelly Springfield the cheapest and of the oppers Chille seems most active, at the going difference.

New York funds ¾ per cent.

THE WHEAT MARKET.

Void of interest and of a purely technical nature, the local wheat market was easier throughout today's short session with both May and July closing half-cent lower. The range of prices was narrow with about one cent, and trading consisted chiefly of a little buying on the break and selling on the bulges, with some spreading between here and Chicago.

Export and domestic business in coarse grains continues very slow and there was very little change to-day. The oats and barley markets continued steady, while flax and rye were nominally higher.

Offerings continue light on the cash market and the only improvement today was a slightly better demand for numbers 3 and 3 northern. Number one northern was unchanged. Farmers are being stopped selling and elevator interests are accumulating stocks. Wheat for the opening of navigation was in demand, but little was worked. Coarse cash grains were dull and featureless.

Prices of wheat—May, 81.1¼; July, $1.03¾.

MINE GOSSIP

Ted Hughes moved up this morning within a point of the dollar mark, later reacting slightly. The movement originated in New York and again appears to be manipulative. A broker who follows the stock closely pointed out that developments at the property were very favorable, but all the same he could see that they were well known when the stock broke suddenly to the low seven-ties, and that a twenty-five cent advance indicated that stings were being pulled and possible distribution was about to be made at the normal levels last year.

Now that Conlagas has practically got its control, speedy efforts are being made to test the latter mine out. The shaft is being deepened to 1,200 feet and lateral work is to be done at the 1,400-foot level in several directions in the underlying Kerr Lake. Conlagas engineers express confidence that expert development will open up substantial deposits of high-grade at the low level.

Hollinger is developing the Schumacher property aggressively, and while no official news is forthcoming it is rumored in mining circles that development of veins running from Hollinger into Schumacher has been encountered in depth and that new purchase may prove to be done of the richest units of the Hollinger property.

FUEL OIL MINING PLANTS REPLACE HYDRO POWER

Lack of encouragement to develop hydro-electric energy in part of Northern Ontario is under serious criticism in the Porcupine and Cochrane districts.

The installation of mining plants by which to operate on fuel oil is felt of serious significance. One such plant is already in operation on the Mattis Silver Mine, Matachewan, and in course of installation on the Rochester mine, lying adjacent to the Hollinger.

Engineers are now visiting these properties, and are showing a tendency to take steps to find an alternative to "standing in line" for years for their turn to receive a small and indefinite dole of hydro-electric energy from the over-taxed plants in the district.

Meanwhile, water-power capable of developing hundreds of thousands of horse-power are running is waste, despite the fact the leading mining companies, the Hollinger included, is desirous of going ahead with the expenditure of millions of dollars on the work of harnessing one of the various falls.

SHEEP'S KIDNEY

Was Grafted to Woman Patient Who Died

New York, Jan. 6.—Grafting of a sheep's kidney to a woman patient at Bellevue hospital, proved temporarily successful, although the patient died later, it was revealed to-day.

Mrs. Alice Hammond died, suffering from bichloride of mercury poisoning, complicated by pneumonia, was the patient. The name of the operating physician was not given, but it was stated that the animal's kidney functioned in the woman's body for more than four hours, and would have saved her life had the poisoning been less virulent.

THREE-DAY-OLD BABE HAD TEETH EXTRACTED

Detroit, Jan. 8.—A weeks record in dentistry is believed to have been established here yesterday by Donald Ross Ritter, three days old, who visited a dentist's office and had two lower teeth extracted.

The infant was three last Tuesday with two well developed teeth in the lower jaw. When doctors found the mother could not properly nourish the baby it was decided that the fresh teeth must come out as they were hindering the child's nourishment.

The extractions were made without difficulty. The child is the twin of Betty Jane Ritter, who is conventionally toothless.

SUMMARY OF CONDITIONS ON FARMS

Department of Agriculture Issues Synopsis of Affairs Generally

Make of Cheese Not So Large in Hastings County

Fall wheat is referred to by several representatives as being fairly well covered by snow, and in good general condition as far as can be judged.

Marketing has been slowed up by the holidays, but a good winter's trade in cattle and logs is looked for, as more animals for beef are on hand than usual.

Farmers in Brant who have grown red clover for seed are complaining of the poor threshing results, the yield being only about half that expected.

Halton says: "Some farmers are complaining of poor silage, and at some farms which I have visited I found the silage mouldy and unfit for feed. Farmers report that considerable smut was present when the corn was put into the silos."

With the scarcity and high price of coal more farmers than usual have been working in their woodlots, making firewood for themselves and selling some for profit.

Dundas asserts that the scarcity of water is a serious inconvenience to many farmers. Kent says that a number of men in that county have to draw water several miles—some from the lake—for their live stock. Lennox and Addington report: "On account of the scarcity of water, a number of farmers have drilled new wells. The water situation is very acute, and in some cases, farmers have to drive their live stock a long distance for water."

Middlesex says that one shipper in that county had a carload of clighter wood stowed away which he has for the stockyards, as he considered an offer of 85¢-6 cents a pound too low. The transportation both ways and feed cost him $7 a head.

Waterloo states that feed cattle are coming along nicely in the stable. Some farmers are buying bran and shorts but such concentrates as oil-cake and cotton seed meal are considered too high in price for purchasing.

Elgin estimates that more cattle than usual are being fed in that county this winter, with plenty of rough fodder on hand.

Dufferin complains that too many beef animals are being sent out in an unfinished condition.

Grey reports: "As the winter is not very severe as yet, all the stock are doing well, and not consuming a large amount of feed. There are considerably greater numbers of steers being fed than ever before. Farmers are beginning to feed their cattle as they receive higher prices for it on the hoof."

North Simcoe says of the local cattle situation: "I am fully convinced, and other observers agree, that the only asset remedy is more and better dairy cattle instead of the present poor beef class."

Leeds states: "About the usual number of low grade dairy cows are being marketed at very small prices of from 1 to 2 cents a pound. Very few well fatted cows are sold in proportion to the poor stuff which is going out."

Halton says that several dairymen are asking assistance in the testing of their milk for butter fat to enable them to weed out their cow boarders.

The Hastings representative holds that while the make of cheese was not so large as that of last year, it has been satisfactory on the whole.

Frontenac claims that local creamery supplies are only about half as large as a month ago.

Brant quotes little pigs at $18 a pair.

Peel says: "Millers report that the volume of chopping business is below the average in spite of the large grain crop and the unusual number of cattle being wintered."

A WONDERFUL KIND

"There are some spectacles," remarked the man who had travelled, "that can never be forgotten."

"Dear me!" exclaimed the absentminded old lady, "I wish I had a pair of them!"

THOUSANDS OF WAR CLAIMS WERE ADJUSTED

Record Established at National G.W.V.A. Headquarters During 1922

Although the Great War is more than four years past, the claims and grievances accruing from Canada's participation in the conflict continue to flow to Ottawa in surprisingly large numbers. A survey of the adjustment work undertaken by National Headquarters of the Great War Veterans' Association during 1922 shows that more than 14,000 individual claims were dealt with, of which the high average of 37 per cent. were satisfactorily settled. The claims covered every conceivable phase of war activity, both with government departments, pensions firms and individuals. They ranged from the routine claim for pay balances, pensions, treatment etc., to one veteran's claim for damages because of the loss of his wife's "love and affection" while he was overseas. A loss which he ascribed as his long enforced absence from home "humor and pathos daily find places in the heart-rending stream of request and demands.

The magnitude of this work is revealed by the fact that six officers are continuously employed by the Dominion Command on adjustment work during 1922 they received more than 9,000 letters and conducted over 42,000 interviews with government departments and individuals. While the volume of claims slackened somewhat towards the end of the year, some 14,000 "active" files—cases in the process of adjustment—were still in hand. Without a single additional claim being presented this alone would require the energies of the present adjustment staff for several months to come. New claims, however, continue to arrive at the average rate of 240 a week.

The general procedure followed during the past year, as in previous years, has been for the claimant to lodge his complaint with the secretary of the local G.W.V.A. branch. If the matter is one of local concern on by the secretary. This applies to cases of adjustment. If it is outside the local field the claim is passed to the provincial secretary. This official in turn takes charge of all matters for adjustment with provincial authorities and forwards individuals cases to the locality in which the claim originated. All claims requiring contact with federal departments or departments are referred to the Dominion Command at Ottawa. This in general practice is how claims are processed, but the G.W.V.A. has never been tied with red tape and consequently when the local secretary finds that a claim is a particularly hard local problem he frequently sends up an S.O.S. for the provincial secretary. The provincial office in turn often appeals to the Dominion Command for a ruling or decision. Thus, in Dominion headquarters of the G.W.V.A. often truthfully described as the "clearing house for claims."

Veterans from outside points visiting the Dominion Command offices find the G.W.V.A. organization exceptionally efficient. "I had no idea that we were handling such a big job." And although the G.W.V.A. has already cut down the "active" claims, and the room full of buzzing typewriters may give the impression of big business, there have been times during the past year when double the capacity would have been easily sufficient to handle the work. The operation and administration of the Dominion Command offices are under the direction of the Dominion Secretary-Treasurer, who is responsible to the Dominion Executive. Of course it would be impossible for the Dominion Secretary-Treasurer to personally attend to every matter in which action is necessary, so the work is divided into five distinct channels: adjustments, legislation, publicity and information, foreign relations, and administration.

A considerable part of the adjustment work has had to do with the Militia and Naval Departments, and man devoting his entire time to that work. The principal claims are for pay balances, war service gratuity, separation allowance and assigned pay, working pay, officers' lost kit allowance, discharge, discharge certificates, medals, decorations, etc.

Pension matters form another outstanding feature of the adjustment work. The entire time of one man and the part time of another is devoted to this work, besides co-operation with the Dominion Secretary of the Tuberculosis Veterans' Association who attend to matters of pensions and treatment matters for tuberculous ex-service men and dependents. Under the heading of pensions it is included disability pensions, widows' and dependents' pensions, treatment allowances, burial, B.C.D., pay and allowances, vocational training orthopaedic equipment, etc. Pension claims form a very large and ever increasing greater amount of time in interviews and correspondence than militia claims. In a few instances in which pension claims have been established after four years of constant activity. Under the heading of pensions is included disability pensions, widows' and dependents' pensions, treatment allowances, burial, B.C.D., pay and allowances, vocational training orthopaedic equipment, etc. Pension claims form a very large and ever increasing greater amount of time in interviews and correspondence than militia claims. SEYMOUR POWER BOUGHT BECAUSE PUBLIC URGED

Hon. T. W. McGarry Tells of Attitude of Hearst Government

Lucas Considers the Dual Salaries Paid Hydro Officials Legal

Any speculation as to whether or not the Gregory Hydro-Electric Inquiry Commission would prolong its sessions into 1923 was set at rest yesterday when the commissioners assembled at the Parliament Buildings for the continuance of activities which will still require several sittings for their completion. The specific question in which they were interested was that concerning the purchase in 1917 by the Hearst Government of the Sir Mackenzie Power interests in Central Ontario. They were told by Hon. T. W. McGarry, former Provincial Treasurer, that public opinion in Eastern Ontario had forced the Government to buy the properties after the Hydro Commission, because of its "temperament", had failed to successfully conduct negotiations on its own behalf.

The people of Eastern Ontario, Hon. Mr. McGarry stated, had clamoured for public ownership of the Sir Mackenzie Power interests in Central Ontario. They were told by Hon. T. W. McGarry, former Provincial Treasurer, that public opinion in Eastern Ontario had forced the Government to buy the properties after the Hydro Commission, because of its "temperamental difficulties" arising on both sides. The Government had then, by public request, been forced to take upon itself the negotiations and to acquire the proper line, the idea being that it would sell them over to the Hydro Commission as soon as they could be brought under the provisions of the Hydro Act.

Satisfactory Financing.

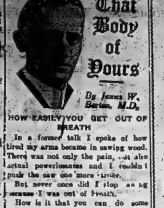
The payment of $8,250,000 in 10 years took per cent. bonds had been a condition forced by the Seymours Hon. Mr. McGarry stated, adding however, that in view of the change which the interest rate had undergone the arrangement had turned out to be a most satisfactory one for the Ontario public. The interest rate, Mr. McGarry pointed out was now falling and he was confident that by 1926 the Government would be able to borrow for less than five per cent.

The controversial question of the dual salaries which Hydro officials draw both from the Hydro Commission and from the Ontario Power Company was the point upon whic Hon. J. B. Lucas, Hydro Commissioner and at present Hydro-counsel was questioned. He expressed his ow belief that such salaries were quite legal. Sir Adam Beck was not present to be examined on the subject, the statement being that he was ill with bronchial trouble. He will be called if well enough to attend, at a session to be held on Tuesday morning next

THIS HORSE LIKES LIQUOR

Interesting Police Court Case to be Decided at Brantford

Whether mash which is said to test 24 per cent. proof spirit is really food for a French steer, or the first step in distilling a liquor, is a question which Magistrate Blake, of Brantford, has for his judgment.



In Police Court here yesterday Ira Baker, Onondaga township farmer, was charged with breach of the O.T.A. and pleaded not guilty. Eight farmer neighbors came to Baker's rescue claiming that he was a horse breeder, that mash was good for a horse, and that he had been boiling grain as feed for years.

"Nothing about spirits that is injurious to a horse, is there?" asked the Magistrate of Inland Revenue Officer Newsome, who responded that he did not know.

Crown Prosecutor M. W. McEwen added that a veterinary could prescribe liquor for a horse, but a man could not make it himself for that purpose. Mr. Baker himself told of having a $2,000 French stallion, which needed a mixture of oats, peas, wheat and molasses, boiled. Neighbors added that he had boiled grain in the open for years for horse feed, while others told of the tremendous appetite horses had for boiled feed. The defense further contended that the sample of boiled grain in court was not a fair one. The case was then remanded for a week.

WILL REMAIN AT DESERONTO

Prof. M. Ostrander, principal of the public schools, Deseronto, has decided not to take advantage of the alluring offer that he accept the position of second teacher in the schools of Smith's Falls. While the offer carried with it a considerable advancement in salary, yet Mr. Ostrander felt that the expense of moving, increase in rents and living or high board would take up all if not more than the advance and decided to stay with his work at Deseronto.

HOW EASILY YOU GET OUT OF BREATH

In a former talk I spoke of how tired my arms became in driving wood. There was not only the pain, but also actual powerlessness and I couldn't grasp the saw one more instant.

But never once did I stop because I was out of breath.

How is it that you can do some work or exercise for a long time and not get out of breath, and other work or exercise seems to render you breathless in a very short time. You walk a couple of miles at a fair pace and you have no shadow of your breathlessness, and yet you run forty or fifty yards to catch a car and you land on your poor breathless body. Simply because when you walked you did a lot of expenditure of a great deal of force with alright, but it was spread over a considerable time, perhaps thirty minutes for the two miles. But when you ran for the car you did a great deal of work in a short time. And that is the cause of breathlessness, the expenditure of great deal of force in a short time.

When you walk your body never wears its parts any more fast it always on the ground. If both feet are off the ground at the same time, you are not walking but are running. And so, when you run really your body wears weight into the air. Now, just see what that means. Every time you take a step in running you have done a lot of work, because you have thrown one hundred and thousands clear up into the air. Think what you do then when you run for a street car. You throw that one hundred and fifty pounds clear up into the air. If you have run the fifty feet in six or seven seconds at the same may be, you have really raised nearly two tons of actual weight by means of the large muscles of the legs.

In order to supply pure blood to these huge muscles for this work he had has to work hard and fast. And in order to get rid of the tremendous amount of used up carbon dioxides the lungs have to work hard and fast as the carbon dioxide in the blood passing through the lung interacts with the nerves controlling respiration.

SENT BRANDY S.O.S. WHILE IN MID-OCEAN

Liquor Was Urgently Needed in Influenza Crisis

The captain of the United States liner President Roosevelt, in mid-ocean with a ship full of influenza-stricken passengers and a dry medicine chest, sent frantic, wireless appeals for brandy.

Officers, crew and passengers swelled day by day the casualty list. The surgeon was at his wit's end. His small stock of medicinal brandy disappeared with terrible rapidity. The chief officer and the purser scanned the horizon like thirstcracked castaways in a ship's boat hoping against hope. They watched in vain.

"Rescue came from within," said one of the passengers to me when the President Roosevelt arrived here today. "Some of us had flasks hidden away in case of emergency. I shared mine with a cabin friend, who probably owes his life to it.

"We did not obtain full relief until the ship arrived here, when a supply of brandy ordered by wireless was rushed on board to the great joy of the sufferers."

HOW TO SLEEP 3-IN-A-BED

YES, it CAN be done—but not like this.

The trouble is, most people go to bed with "something" on the mind—or IN THE STOMACH!

The answer is, no matter what the day has brought forth to upset your mind and digestion—again, take Beecham's Pills when you retire.

Though in no sense a "sleeping potion," this 80-years-famous household medicine so harmonizes the system that you can sleep in quiet and perfect rest, even if too lost of bed space.

Beecham's Pills are as efficient and harmless for children as for adults—overcoming the stomach, invigorating digestion and stirring liver and bowels to natural activity.

London, Jan. 6.—There is a corner of Northern France which is now forever Canada. It was purchased at the cost of the lives of many Canadian soldiers in the Great War. It is Canada's right which was consecrated not only by the blood of Canadian soldiers but by legal documents and a bill recently passed by the French Deputies and Senators.

Vimy Ridge, the "new Canada" stretching bare and brown and bleak between Arras and Lens, will soon be planted with Canadian trees; will soon blossom under the beautiful blue French skies. The Paris correspondent of the London Times, writing about the French Government's gift of 250 acres of this land on which will be erected the memorial designed by Walter S. Allward, the Toronto sculptor, who is now in France in connection with the proposed magnificent monument, says: "There have been many war memorials, but there has never been a war memorial which has a ore striking appeal than that which will presently be designed to look for ever over the heights from the scene of a hundred fights."

Describing the present scene, and the wonderful improvement in the ruined correspondent says: "Great tracts of land plowed by shells, denuded by fire, desolated by every obscenity of war, flung into unutterable confusion, will be reclaimed, laid out artistically, and transformed into a lovely and eternal monument of human heroism."

There are also in four Canadian monuments in France and three in Belgium, the sites of which have been given from the respective governments and arrangements for which were furthered very much during the recent visit of Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux, Speaker of the Canadian House of Commons, a member of the Imperial Battlefields Memorial Commission.

With reference to the great monument which is to be placed on Vimy Ridge the Paris correspondent of the Times says: "It was comparatively easy for Mr. Allward, the sculptor, to select the fitting spot on which to erect his simple, noble and imposing monument. It is a great pylon standing up against the sky and dominating the lower countryside. It will be a sign and a symbol at all times, where it can be observed from many miles around."

The conditions under which the 250 acres have been given to Canada are simple. No taxation is to be levied. Canada's duty is to be under control of the Canadian Battlefields Memorial Commission in perpetuity, providing the terms of the contract are fulfilled. On Canada's side, she undertakes to beautify the land which will be turned into a large park, tastefully avenues leading to the monument on the topmost plateau.

The details of the Canadian plans have not yet been announced, but they are in the hands of competent landscape artists. It will require care-ful study to execute the designs with the perfection that it is hoped to achieve, and that no pains will be spared to attain. Brigadier-General H. C. Hughes is the engineer for the Commission.

EERIE EXPERIENCES

Woman Who Revived in Coffin and Walked Home

Middletown, N.Y., Jan. 8.—Mrs. Minerva Toole, 81 years of age, who has just died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Mary L. Yakle, in Burnside, was taken in a fit years ago in which she remained in such a long period that she was pronounced dead and prepared for the grave. Her body was taken to the church, and while the services were in progress she opened her eyes, and after being removed from the church was conducted safely within an hour to walk home with her sister, Mrs. Yakle, who relates the remarkable incident.

Mrs. Toode, who has for some years been a widow, a housekeeper in a Sullivan county home, came to the home of her sister a few days ago to spend the holidays, and was to have returned to Bloomingburg Friday. While seated in a rocking chair, awaiting dinner, she suddenly lurched forward and died.

ANNIVERSARY OF GOLD DISCOVERY IN CALIFORNIA

Ranches of Pioneers Were Over-Run With Gold-Diggers—Own Laborers Deserted to Prospect for Precious Metal

Seventy-five years ago this month occurred one of the most memorable events in American history—the discovery of gold in California. It was on January 19, 1848, that a laborer of the name of James Wilson Marshall, while employed near Colonia, in Eldorado County, found the first glittering nuggets of the precious metal.

This land was owned by John A. Sutter, a noted Californian pioneer, a man of great enterprises and great faith in the future of the country that he explored. When the discovery of gold was made Sutter was already old, and his enterprises, of course, that he would become swallby beyond the wildest dreams, but the discovery of gold on his property really proved his financial ruin. His valuable ranch properties were overrun by gold-diggers, and his laborers deserted him to hunt for the precious metal. Sutter finally found himself to be penniless and the California legislature granted him a pension of $250 a month.

One of the most exciting periods in the United States of a commercial character was the wild rush of people from the eastern part of the county to California following the announcement of the extensive discovery of gold. It looked as if the feet of all eastern people were turned west through the exaggerated stories that were published of the vast quantities of the yellow metal that were everywhere in evidence. The height of the excitement was reached when, on Dec. 5, 1848, President Taylor announced the discovery in his message. The tendency to exaggerate was such, he said, as could hardly be believed were it not for the reports of officers of the public service who have visited the mines.

Unique Advertisements.

The first question that entered the mind of the eastern prospector was how to reach the diggings. Till spring came the overland route was closed. But the way by sea was open and to dwellers on the seaboard was far the better.

Then began a series of most unusual advertisements in the newspapers. Manufacturers for rubber goods advertised tents, beds, gold scales and gold spittles. One publisher got out a book containing fifty-four engravings of implements used in washing gold from sand. Naturally, a turner advised all going to the gold country to take along one of his gold lathes and tools. Such advertisements as "An oyster house will be sold low; proprietor is going to California" and "For sale, for a hundred dollars, half a light, easy business that pays a handsome profit, as the proprietor is going to California," became common.

Every ship, brig, schooner or sloop that was half fit to go to sea was scraped, painted, fitted with bunks or cabins, and advertised as an Al. fair sailing, copper fastened, copper nailed vessel, bound for San Francisco direct, or via Chagres. Before the middle of December four ships loaded with adventurers left New York, and six others were to sail in a few days.

Joined Associations.

Many went out as individuals, while thousands joined companies or associations which chartered or bought ships. Many associations chartered and sent them around the Horn, while they journeyed overland. Many of these associations had odd titles—as, for instances, "the New York Yellow Fever Company."

By the end of January, 1849, eighty vessels had set sail for San Francisco via Cape Horn, fourteen for Chagres and Panama, for Vera Cruz, carrying, all told, 5,700.

Early in March the great emigration overland began, and scores of companies and thousands of men attached to no company, set off for the old fields. In less than three weeks, it is said, 2,550 wagons crossed the Mississippi at one point. The plains, it was said, for miles, resembled a great tented field. Toward autumn the first of the overland emigrants began to pass the mountains in less than two years after the discovery of gold close to 100,000 emigrants had crossed the Californian in search of the yellow metal.

LOCAL BRANCH G.W.V.A. HOLD ANNUAL MEET LAST NIGHT

Banquet and Toast List Followed the Proceedings

G. W. Dawes New President

Community Singing and Splendid Program—Officers Elected for the Year—Presentation of Gold Badge to Comrade Dr. Wilson

The sixth annual meeting of the local branch of the Great War Veterans' Association was held in the Sergeants' Mess of the Argyll Light Infantry, at the Armouries, Belleville, on Tuesday evening, January 9th, 1923, a large number of members being present to participate in the election of officers for the year 1923.

The meeting opened in the usual way, Dr. J. M. Wilson, the retiring President, in the chair, asked all comrades present to stand with bowed heads in memory of our fallen comrades who lay "In Flanders Fields."

After the regular routine of business had been taken care of, the retiring President, Comrade Dr. Wilson, appointed three scrutineers to arrange and count the ballot for the election of officers for the year 1923.

No nominations for president were called for, three being nominated, two having withdrawn their names, making an acclamation for Comrade G. W. Dawes, better known as "Billie", of the G.T.R. shops. Mr. Dawes has been a faithful worker for the local branch of the G.W.V.A. for the past four years, more so, during the year 1922, in having held the office of 1st Vice-President.

The result of the ballot for first vice-president was in favor of Comrade George Glover, another faithful worker of the Association. This Comrade has taken an active interest in every branch of service connected with the G.W.V.A., especially mentioning the great help he has given to the Xmas Tree Committee for the past four years. Comrade George Lancaster of the G.T.R. shops, was elected 2nd Vice-President for 1923. Comrade has been a booster for the G.W.V.A. former Minister of Justice in Sir Wilfrid Laurier's Cabinet, appointed to vacancy in Senate created by the death of Hon. William Proudfoot, K. C.

Complete surprise to those outside the Government, his name never having been mentioned in connection with the appointment, even by many of those who are usually on the "inside track." It has been assumed that Reuben E. Truax, of Walkerton, and a former M.P., had the best chance for the Senatorship.

PALENCIA CLUB ENTERTAIN LAST NIGHT AT THE ACADEMY

Enjoyable Affair in Every Way—Sills' Orchestra Supplied the Music

RECORD ATTENDANCE

Refreshments Served and Interesting Dance Program Carried Out—Out-of-Town Guests Present

At Johnstone's Academy last night the Palencia Club of this city held their regular dance and were at home to many of their friends, both in and out of town. The large crowd present, which exceeded all previous attendances, enjoyed a most pleasant evening under ideal surroundings and with merriment and sociability dominant.

Sills Five-piece orchestra supplied the music for the dancing and the opinion was generally expressed that our own Belleville organization can favorably compete with outside talent in this department. The music was excellent and of splendid variety.

An outstanding feature of the evening was the fact that the crowd was so evenly divided, only one extra gentleman being present. Consequently all were enabled to enjoy every number.

Al. Wilson, himself, ably rendered the music with a splendid rendition of an extra fox trot and waltz.—

A dainty luncheon was served at midnight and the dancing continued until a late hour. The delightful floors were by the committee added much to the dignity of the scene and the guests of the evening are eagerly looking forward to the next event.

Much credit must be extended to the Committee in charge of the affair. Some of those who assisted in their various capacities were:—Mrs. Ed. Thomas, President; Mrs. Ken Porter, Secretary; Miss Lucy Forster, Treasurer; and Mr. Ed. Cherry.

WHAT IS TO BECOME OF OUR BOYS?

Boy Scouts' Council Held Meeting Last Night to Inaugurate Plans for Year

OFFICERS ELECTED

Suitable Accommodation Must be Located for Carrying on the Work—Room in City Building Suggested

The now council for the Boy Scouts consisting of F. S. Deacon, W. C. Mikel, K.O., J. H. Lill, Rev. F. E. Malott, W. H. Pinkis, Dr. O'Brien, A. G. Davis, Chief Kidd and Charles Hanna, met last night at Mr. Mikel's office to organize and lay plans for the year. The meeting recommended Mr. Malott and Charles W. Hayes, (Junior Mayor) for Scout Masters. Mr. Malott will have charge of the older boys and Bing Hayes the Cubs.

The following officers were elected, Chairman of the Council, J. H. Lill, Vice Chairman W. C. Mikel, K. C., Secretary Dr. O'Brien; treasurer, F. S. Deacon.

There are eighty boys in the troop and it was stated that this number could easily be increased to two hundred if suitable accommodation could be found for training. The Armouries and the Y. M. C. A. have been tried, but apparently the accommodation in these buildings were such that accommodation for th boys could not be permanently and continuously arranged. It was urged by some of the speakers that it is now up to the City Council, or some of the active organizations of the city, or the citizens generally, to see that our boys have some place other than the "streets."

These boys do not come from wealthy homes, of the City and it was felt they they should be given a chance, as they will be our future mayors, aldermen and active citizens. Information was supplied that there is a large room in the City Buildings over the City Hall and the full size of that Hall, which would make a splendid place, but it was not floored.

DEVOTIONAL EXERCISES CONTINUED LAST NIGHT

Well Attended Meeting Held in the Tabernacle —A Helpful Service

Dr. McTavish Preacher

Rev. W. Elliott in Charge of the Services—Good Music Rendered—Missions the Topic

The Week of Prayer which began so favorably in John St. Presbyterian Church on Monday night was continued with good interest in the Tabernacle Church last evening. The pastor of the church, Rev. Wesley Elliott, presided, Rev. Dr. Brown offered the opening prayer and Rev. A. S. Kerr read the Scripture. The anthem "Take Time to be Holy" was well rendered by Mrs. Brown and Mrs. Sillman. The Rev. Dr. McTavish then delivered an impressive address upon the words "Thy Kingdom Come". "This prayer is a prayer for missionaries", said Dr. McTavish. He further stated that there were four things which we should do for missions, "Study, Pray, Go and Give". The study of the missions will reveal that the Heathen world is needy; that there are comparatively few to do the work which needs to be done; that the conditions of the heathen have not improved during the centuries and that the Gospel does improve and lift them up. Prayer can be offered for the missionaries, for the conversion of the heathen and for the increase of missionaries to go abroad. He, who prays, should give, and the young, who bear the call, should respond for service.

The meeting, Wednesday evening will be held in the Emmanuel Church.

KINCARDINE MOURNS VICTIM OF TRAGEDY

Kincardine, Jan. 10.—The whole community turned out yesterday to the funeral of George Nelson Kay, murdered Saturday by Donald McDonald (Scobie Dan.) While eulogistic references were being made to the life of Kay and widespread sorrow expressed at his untimely end, Mrs. Kay lay at her home hovering between life and death, apparently entirely unaware that her husband's body was being laid in the grave. Doctors thought they noted a slight improvement in Mrs. Kay's condition this morning, but would not predict her recovery. She spoke a few words last night, but did not mention her husband or anything relating to the shooting.

United States Forces Withdrawn From Rhine—Final Plans Made—France Will Foreclose Her Mortgage—Bradbury Leaves for London—England Grants France Permission to Move Her Army

Essen, Jan. 10.—This city and neighboring district were quiet this morning, although there was a strong undercurrent of feeling and tensity due to the uncertainty and lack of definite information, relative to the French plans.

Paris, Jan. 10.—The time for lifting the curtain in the latest act of the post war drama, the French invasion of the Ruhr was still secret to-day but every preparation for the final order to "go ahead" has been made with clock-like precision. The concensus of opinion here this morning was that the advance would not begin until midnight or early to-morrow.

Brussels, Jan. 10.—The first Belgian troops to be put in motion for co-operation with the French in occupying the Ruhr, entrained here this morning in four special trains for Aix-la-Chapelle. They totalled eighteen hundred men.

Washington, Jan. 10.—The withdrawal of United States troops from the Rhine was ordered to-day by President Harding.

BELGIUM'S STAND

Brussels, Jan. 10.—Premier Theunis formally announced to the Chamber of Deputies to-day the Government's determination to "stand beside France" in the occupation of the Ruhr district. He asserted that the allies were moving without Great Britain, but said that "neither anger nor vengeance" actuated Belgium.

Coblenz, Jan. 10.—The order for the withdrawal of the United States troops from the Rhine, the news of which became known through a despatch from the Associated Press office at Paris, caused much excitement as it spread among the men of the United States army here.

LIONS HOLD REGULAR LUNCHEON

W. Seward of the Tiger Tire Was the Speaker—Cub "Ed." O'Flynn Joins the Soloists' Ranks

The Lions met today as usual for their weekly luncheon at the Chamber of Commerce and the affair was well attended by the members. Cub "Bill" Lasigner was in the chair and "Tailwister" "Ginger" Stewart was also present.

After the luncheon a very instructive address was given by Mr. William Seward of the Tiger Tire and Rubber plant of this city. He gave a brief history of the process used in the manufacture of rubber and the different uses of the product were explained. He said there were 600,000 cars in Canada and five tires were the average consumed yearly for each car, but when at that rate Canada fell short yearly of about 600,000 tires to supply the home consumption demand. He said that there had been a movement on during the past three years to eliminate the smaller factories, but at the present time it was found to be necessary to have now the survival of the fittest. Mr. Seward said he could see no reason why every factory, large or small could not be operated on a paying basis. In conclusion he gave a cordial invitation to the Lions, individually and collectively to visit the plant, where they would be shown throughout the factory and every courtesy given them. A hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Seward was moved by Cub "Dick" Philbin and seconded by Cub "Charlie" Hanna. Cub "Ed" O'Flynn, for not joining in the general singing was ordered to sing the comicest song sitting. As a special dispensation was allowed to sing one which he composed himself which was well applauded.

ALDERMAN McCREARY RESIGNS FROM CITY COUNCIL

City Alderman Resigns His Seat as a Public Protest Against Awarding of Chairmanships

"I do not think that I should sit in Council with an Administration so constituted" said Ald. McCreary to a representative of the Intelligencer.

"A Caucus was held on Tuesday evening last when certain men were picked to fill the various chairmanships, principally on the basis of qualifications and performance of duties. Ald. McCreary alleges that as a result of that meeting disappointed members combined and made a deal whereby they were successful in carrying out the awards in accordance with their own wishes.

Ald. McCreary has decided to resign his seat in protest of such action, claiming that the efficient conduct of the city's business was not the basis of the awards made but rather that favoritism played the important role.

This added feature in local municipal affairs has caused considerable excitement in the city today.

According to the civic constitution and Municipal Law, Mr. Robert Garner will take his seat as an alderman, as he was the thirteenth man on the list on election day, having polled more votes than the other twelve successful candidates.

RUSSIAN JEWELS IN U. S. GRAVE

Two-Year Investigation by U.S. Secret Service is Nearing Climax

WERE SMUGGLED IN

Gems Buried With Sailor—Thrilling Story of Intrigue, Murder and Thievery

In the forgotten grave of an American seaman buried in the national cemetery, Brooklyn, federal officials expect to find within the next two years $500,000 in Russian Crown jewels, which have been smuggled into the United States in December, 1920, according to a copyrighted dispatch from a staff correspondent in New York, printed in the Chicago Daily News this evening. The story, in part, is as follows:

"With the finding of the grave which was definitely identified by special agents of the Treasury Department, under direction of William J. Flynn, head of the New York office, federal officials come to the end of a trail which has been followed for almost two years by one of the most astute secret service organizations of the world, that of the United States Secret Service. At its completion is disclosed a story of intrigue, murder and clever thievery which has no rival in fiction, and which has its true nature was so startling that when first presented to them it was rejected by officials as totally incredible.

On the chance, however, that the tale might have foundation in fact the Secretary of the Treasury ordered an investigation. Facts were fast and information began to obtain therefore the investigation, spreading over the entire country, moved slowly. Then during the last few weeks disclosures came swiftly and incidents hitherto hidden were brought to light.

The climax came yesterday with the finding of the grave where it is believed the jewels are hidden.

For the last month, after agents from all departments of the Government had worked on the case for more than a year, it has been definitely established, that a portion of the jewels were actually smuggled into the country hidden in a coffin by two of the plotters who "double crossed" the rest of the conspirators and then the jewels were buried with one the persons who hid them being able to gain access to them.

The jewels, the federal authorities have determined, were hidden in the coffin of James Allen, seaman who died August 30, 1920, aboard the army transport Edsley-Just outside Gibraltar, on the way back to the United States from Vladivostok, and whose remains were interred on September 3, 1920, after when no trace of his relatives had been found. This portion of the cemetery is constantly guarded by armed soldiers, so that little opportunity has ever presented itself for the men to regain the smuggled jewels.

A petition asking that the grave be opened will be presented soon to Judge Hand in the United States District Court of New York the latter part of the week by Special Agent Williams, acting with Special Deputy Collector of Customs Edward Jackson.

AUTOISTS WARNED ABOUT GASOLINE

Should Keep Garage Doors Open When Engine is Running

Buffalo, Jan. 9.—A lungful of carbon monoxide is just as deadly as a dosage of carbolic acid to which it is related, Dr. Francis E. Fronczak, health physician, says in a bulletin issued to automobile owners.

"It is strange," Dr. Fronczak says, "in spite of all that has been said on the subject, how automobile owners are generally ignorant of the dangers of this gas.

"Steel and iron workers know its properties and avoid inhaling it as they would avoid drinking a deadly poison, yet the motorist thinks of it only as an ordinary gas.

"Breathing gas, which we are to careful to turn off, suffocates, but does not poison like carbon monoxide, which is just as apt to kill as the chlorine and mustard gases used during the war."

The bulletin warns against using a rich mixture of gasoline and racing engines in small garages with closed doors, which is the most frequent cause of carbon monoxide poisoning.

MUSIC and DRAMA

MANY HUMAN CHARACTERS IN "ONE CLEAR CALL"

It took five weeks of negotiation on the part of Louis B. Mayer to secure the film rights to Frances Nimmo Greene's noted story, "One Clear Call," which has been transferred to the screen by John M. Stahl as his latest all-star production for First National release. Henry B. Walthall heads the list of players in the cast of the production.

Mr. Mayer's purchase of the book interrupted plans that were being made for the dramatization of "One Clear Call" as a stage play. It took a good deal of persuasion, it is said, and contract, to put the deal over. Although the exact price paid for the story has not been announced it is said to run well into five figures.

"One Clear Call" is being edited by Griffith Tomlinson with an all star cast including, Henry B. Walthall Clair Windsor, Milton Sills, Joseph Dowling, Irene Rich, and other not able players.

"Fresh From the Farm" a farcical comedy, Richard Dennay's gripping two-reel drama, and Fox News are being exhibited on the same program.

JACK HOLT FIGHTING PARSON IN NEW FILM THAT SLEEPS

Jack Holt has the unusual role of a Fighting Parson in his latest Paramount picture, "While Satan Sleeps," which is being exhibited at Griffin's two days, only, Tomorrow, and Saturday matinee and night. He is not usually a parson in the story, for he only assumes that disguise in order to get into the house from which he and his pal plan to rob. But even a that, there is no disguise in the we he fights, especially when a dying girl shows him the error of his ways and another beautiful girl proves to his that she loves him for the man he appears to be. Then he fights not only his enemies, but wages a tariff battle for the unprotected rights of his own sex. Which is all by way of saying that this picture is one long parson from beginning to end, and that it teems with heart interest. Fritzi Brunette plays opposite the star. It is an adaptation of Peter B. Kyne's great story "The Parson of Paulmont."

Two-reel Mermaid comedy, featuring Lloyd Hamilton and directed by the famous comedy director Jack White, a new chapter of the "Buffalo Bill" series, and a Travelogue have been arranged for exhibition on the same program.

"THE DOVER ROAD"

"The Dover Road" a new comedy by A. A. Milne, with Charles Cherry at the head of the original New York company, comes to Griffin's this Friday night, January 12th, for one night only under the direction of Lee and J. J. Shubert and Guthrie McClintic. A. A. Milne, the English author, formerly editor of Punch, whose vogue seems to be at its height at the present time, is the author of "Mr. Pim Passes By," "Truth About Blayds" and two comedies produced in New York within the last fortnight "The Romantic Age" and "The Lucky One." He is a close friend of Sir James Barrie's and seems to possess with Barrie the quality of creating an undefinable atmosphere of humor for his plays. "The Dover Road," is probably the most successful of anything Milne has had produced so far. It ran for one year in New York last season at the Bijou Theatre, breaking the record for long runs of that house. It has also enjoyed the longest run of any English play ever produced in New York and is unique in that it is the first English play ever to have been given its premier in America, Charles Cherry, who was in Canada in "Seventh," plays an entirely different role and gives the finest performance of his career.

The excellent company, which includes Molly Pearson, Kathleen Comegys, Lumsden Hare. The excellent cast and gives Reginald Mason, Lyonel Watts, George Riddell and others, is exactly the same as in New York. Lee and J. J. Shubbert, and Guthrie McClintic, a new producer in the field, has established himself as an artist by the tasteful manner in which he has staged and cast "The Dover Road."

A THRILLING TALE OF THE SEA

Schooner Was 106 Days on Voyage—Battled With Gales More than Two Months

Halifax, N.S., Jan. 6.—Seventy-two days from Queenstown, Ireland six a hundred and six days out from Hanelly, where she loaded her cargo of nine hundred tons of Welsh coal the four-masted Nova Scotian schooner Susan Cameron, Captain Archibald Isbaes, arrived in port this morning after a battle of over two months with gales and hurricanes on the North Atlantic.

For ten days her crew drank dis filled salt water and the vessel pumped into Sherburne on Monday for a supply of fresh water. Owing to the length of the passage the crew were all their oilskins and boots, and during the later part suffered from the lack of waterproof clothing.

However, they are none the worse for their trying passage. The Cameron sailed from Hanelly on September 22, for Halifax. On the third day after she ran into a hurricane and had all her sails carried away. She was then two hundred miles west of the Irish coast and headed back to Queenstown, under improvised canvass. A complete new spread of sail was made and bent. She sailed from Queenstown on October 27, and, following her date, until her arrival here, never practically all the North Atlantic, sometimes being carried for day's more a gale. She was in the third latitude 37, which is over twelve hundred miles south of Halifax, and a far west as longitude 45, or two hundred miles east of the Florida coast.

In the gale of December 21, and the hurricane of the 22nd, which did much damage to trans-Atlantic greyhounds, the vessel came through without foresail and mainsail torn, and also broke her forestay boom and flying jib-boom. On December 26th she lost her standing jib.

At 9 o'clock on the morning of December 31 the vessel was in 42.15 Seal Island, N.S., which was the first land her crew had sighted since leaving Ireland.

They put into Sandy Point, Shelburne, on Monday for fresh water. The schooner was supplied with provisions on December 15th by the German steamer Schleswig-Holstein from Hamburg to Mexico. She was then in Latitude 38.16 north, and

NEW REGULATIONS IN SHIPPING CHEESE BOXES

Railways Announce New Regulations — Covers Must be Closely Fitted With Metal Strapping

New arrangements have been announced by the Canadian railways for the shipment of cheese in the ordinary cylindrical cheese boxes, so as to avoid damage to the boxes of their contents in transit. The railways for some time had been complaining that cheese shippers were becoming too lax, factories sending out cheese in wooden boxes without anything to hold the lids down. The result was that frequently when some unforseen event took place, the boxes might be tumbled with the result that the lids came off, and the carriers had to pay the damages.

Some time ago the railways notified the produce merchants here that they proposed to insist that these cylindrical wooden cheese boxes must have their covers fastened with a wire round directly encircling the box. This, they claimed, would not only prevent the lids from coming off, thus protecting the cheese from injury, but would also strengthen the boxes themselves.

Afterwards, this proposition was objected to by the shippers on the grounds of expense and inconvenience. They have now been informed that the new regulations adopted by the railways would have to be equipped with a special machine for wiring the boxes. They also argued that the wiring would not meet the objections of the railways, either with regard to the lids or to strengthening the boxes.

Following this a conference was held between representatives of the cheese shippers and the Railways Freight Association, with the result that the latter has just been requested to defer the regulation scheduled to become effective on January 1st.

Cheese in wooden cylindrical boxes will not be accepted at the rates named in tariffs, unless the tops (covers) are closely fitted and securely fastened to body hoops by wire cord, metal straps, metal clamps, wire nails (not less than one inch long) or wedges."

This regulation has been forwarded to the various dairymarkets in Quebec and Ontario, and; it was stated recently, by the Railway Freight Association that no fair only one objection had been received.

THE MOST TRYING MAN

The most trying man to deal with is the one who doesn't know what he wants and is impatient because he doesn't get it.

No Cancer—No Tuberculosis

In the state of Hunza, India.

NOR is there any appendicitis, goitre, indigestion or constipation, and there is little sickness of any kind. The natives grow to be very large, live to be very old, and according to Dr. McCarrison, a surgeon in the Indian army, who lived with them nine years, "they are endowed with nervous systems of notable stability." The same is true of the natives of Northern Nigeria, and Upper Egypt, and other natives who live near to nature.

Dr. McCarrison says the reason is that they "live upon the unsophisticated foods of nature, whole grains, milk, eggs, leafy vegetables and fruits." They know nothing of white flour, "denatured" refined foods, polished rice and other foods which food scientists call "excess acid" and "deficiency foods."

Professors Osborne and Mendel of the Connecticut Experimental Station and Yale University, have proved that mineral salts are so essential to health that animals fed upon foods from which all minerals have been removed, die one third sooner than animals upon water alone. Foods deficient in minerals poison the animals. White flour, refined cereals, polished rice, sweets etc., are deficient in all minerals, especially in bone forming minerals. Thus these "deficiency" foods not only cause "acid intoxication" when used extensively, but they diminish growth of bone, lessening the size and vigor of children. They should be compensated by a frequent use of whole grains.

Because of its Flaxin, Roman Meal contains more bone making salts and protein than even milk, thus it is the best possible food for your child, and for the nursing and expectant mother.

Serve cold with milk or cream and sugar, honey, preserves or jelly or bananas or berries, etc. If hot foods are preferred, reheat in double boiler after it has jelled by standing over night.)

Add ROMAN MEAL to Your Daily Diet.

ROMAN MEAL is the only balanced combination of whole grains—wheat, rye, Flaxin, and comminuted bran. It is a delicious family food, to be used as porridge, or baked into anything half and half with flour. By using Roman Meal in some way every day, with plenty of milk and some leafy vegetables (preferably uncooked) you provide your body—and the bodies of your children—with every element necessary to sturdy health and long life, and correct the "deficiencies" of modern "excess acid" and "deficiency" foods. Roman Meal aids digestion, positively relieves constipation.

SCOTTISH CURLERS AT KINGSTON

Tourists Will Play There on January 19th—Belleville Rinks to Play

Kingston, Ont., Jan. 10.—Kingston curlers are very enthusiastic over the visit to be paid this month, on January 19th, by the Scotch curlers. The visitors will arrive here early in the morning on that date, and will stay at the Frontenac Hotel. During the morning they will be taken on a tour of inspection around the city, and they will also visit the Royal Military College, where they will be the guests of the Commandant, General MacDonald. In the afternoon they will play rinks from Brockville, Belleville and Napanee, and in the evening they will play six Kingston rinks. The members of the Ladies' Curling Club are preparing to take up again the social event. The official opening of the new curling rink, which is undoubtedly one of the finest in Canada, will take place on January 19th. Invitations have been extended to curling clubs all over this district to attend.

NOVA SCOTIA WINS TEST MATCH

Nova Scotia scored a 124 to 106 win in their test match with the Scottish touring curlers at Truro, N. S. yesterday. The ice was very fast toward the close of the afternoon's play but there was never less than a degree of frost. On the last end the Scotland scored one win only in the six games, H. K. Jackson of Lanark Royal Hall 34 to 23. J. W. Cunningham of Renfrew lost to Murray of Nova Scotia by the close score of 23 to 22.

President A. M. Cunningham and Secretary Pearcey of the Ontario Curling Association will go to Ottawa to welcome the Scotsmen, acting on behalf of the Ontario Association. Neil McDougall, sportsman, representative of the Canadian National Railways, will shortly join the tourists and accompany them throughout their Canadian tour.

BASEBALL

There promises to be eruptions at the annual meeting of the Central Ontario League, which will be held at Cobourg in March. At a meeting held recently at Belleville, the Bay of Quinte representative was one of the strongest advocates against the expulsion of players from one town to another in the Central League. Yet apparently Belleville has been one of the first clubs to break into the limelight in this regard.—Lindsay Post.

Lindsay is evidently peeved because two members of last year's team have seen fit to change their allegiance and become members of a champion team.

The organization of an intermediate baseball league composed of Whitby, Oshawa, Bowmanville, and Orono will be considered at a meeting of representatives from the foregoing towns in Oshawa. The league, if organized, will be affiliated with the O.B.A.A.

Suggestions have been forthcoming for some months concerning the formation of such a league and the movement is a popular one. Oshawa and Bowmanville are represented in the senior series of the O.B.A.A. but Whitby and Orono while they have a number of players of senior calibre cannot support senior baseball. They can, however, place strong intermediate teams in the field and should be able to make a good showing. With present prospects for baseball in Port Hope it might be well for the local baseball promoters to enter a team in the intermediate series—Port Hope Guide.

CURLING NOTES

Don't be disappointed with the showing of the Scotch curlers. They're not wasting any games and they won't win many. But / the fault must be charged to the climate of the country, that gave this fair Dominion so many of her cashiers.

Sometimes it freezes in Scotland But most of the time it is satisfied just to be cold and damp and miserable. When enough frost happens along to make a sheet of ice, the Scots get busy and keep busy so long as they can see the handles of their stones above the water.

To be sure, there is an artificial ice rink in Glasgow that is probably the busiest spot in all the curling world. But one rink added to a few slippery shots amid the general dampness cannot produce a generation of scientific curlers.

It is the opportunity that makes the curlers. For that reason, the best curlers on earth—or rather, ice—are probably produced by the dry cold you can't feel, but that somehow makes itself felt around Winnipeg. Following this line of reasoning the worst must come from Scotland.

But curling is the game of which it has been written: "It's better to have curled and lost than never to have curled at all." And despite their frequent defeats you can be sure that those hardy Scots are enjoying every minute of their tour.

The Scots curlers look like curlers and talk like curlers. In fact except for the fact that they can't curl they are curlers.

BASEBALL IS DEVELOPING IN NIPPON

Great Progress Made in This Sport by the Japanese—Intensified Efforts to Learn the Game

Tokio, Jan. 10.—Japan's college baseball players are easily the equal of the average Canadian and American University players except in pitching strength, according to members of the all-star American ball team that has been touring Japan this winter. Although most of the Japanese players are wonderful fielders, they have concentrated on defensive work and comparatively few of them are consistent hitters.

Tanaka, the prize slugger of Japan, can be counted on to whale out a terrific drive when balls are to his liking but about waist high, or even as low as the knee, but when Waite Hoyt, of the New York Americans, sent a series of high, fast balls across the plate at a recent game at Shibaura, Tanaka merely made a succession of frantic lunges, swishing the air each time.

Japanese players spend most of their recreation period in all seasons with ball and glove, but they use the ball only when in actual games, and this practice, coupled with the generally inferior sort of pitching that Japanese moundsmen are capable of, is no criterion for a spectacular batting record.

Many of the Japanese university players would look well in any minor league outfit, according to Americans who have seen them in action, and it is believed that in a few years, when the game has progressed further here, a trans-Pacific championship series between the crack teams of Asia and North America will be sufficiently closely contested to be worth watching.

THE DRURY GOVERNMENT

"And a river went out of Eden to water the garden, and from thence it was parted and came unto four heads."

This biblical quotation from Genesis appears to embody an immortal truth which has been unostentatiously applied in the political situation at Toronto—Mr. Drury was selected from the multitude to lead his flock and found himself hurled into a Legislature composed of four distinctly separate political parties. His problem was somewhat smoothed over by Labor joining the ranks of the Farmers, and so the river has flowed onward, sometimes experiencing turbulent waters, but still always confronted in its course with four distinct currents. In the meantime the people have been gradually viewing the stream in its turmoil and appear in Mr. Drury's eyes, to be getting more unreasonable every minute. Generally, upon the advent of the Drury Government to power, Ontario electors adopted a docile, pleasant and acquiescent attitude, assuming that the new administration should have a fair trial. But now, the "general intelligence" are assuredly most profound in their views that the projection platforms of the U.F.O. government, particularly the economy feature, have been ruthlessly broken and, unless their orgies are curbed at no distant date, the Province will be in a very bad way indeed. Something must be done to distract those in charge at the Queen's Park, the almost reverential contemplation and admiration of themselves. The most significant commentary on the entire business would appear to be the naive suggestion, to "oust the government." The experiment of a third or a third and fourth party combined, with its outcome, should prove a lesson to the electors.. These "sudden staesmen" and adventitious judges have not proven to be of sufficient calibre to administrate. Too much legislation has been left in the hands of Committees appointed in a "pass-the-buck" attitude and the whole trouble with the Province has been a general ignorance of government.

In England, as Samuel G. Blythe has described it, in last week's issue of The Saturday Evening Post, politics is a business and the same thing would seem to apply in Ontario. We should have capable and thoroughly qualified men of sane political mind in-charge of affairs. Inexperienced administrators at the helm of the ship of state are bound to get into stormy seas and it looks as if there is going to be a shipwreck.

The whole question of the U.F.O. principles is well worth the deepest delving of the best savants.

By their activities we have known them and in the meantime, while the Hon. Mr. Drury and his government are looking for some place to jump, the common opinion of the day may rightfully interpret the attitude assumed by them, throughout their whole tenure of office to have vindicated one of Shakespeare's immortal sayings:

"I am Sir Oracle, when I ope my mouth, let no dog bark."

TRADE WITH GREAT BRITAIN

In these days of perplexing problems of trade, every effort must be made by Canadians to encourage commerce in every possible manner. Old traditions and customs must be forgotten to conform with the trend of the times and new adjustments made to meet existing conditions.

In this matter, Mr. G. T. Milne, O.B.E., Senior Trade Commissioner for Great Britain in Canada reports recently, relative to British export trade as follows:—

"The history of Britain's export trade to the Dominion does not differ. in some respects, from that in regard to other markets.—In the days when overseas merchants placed their orders in the United Kingdom, as the only country whence manufactured goods were obtainable, the manufacturer did not need to search for markets. The orders reached him either direct, or through merchant firms in the United Kingdom, practically without effort on his part. With the rise of the great industrial nations such as the United States and Germany, competition, formerly restricted to that of his fellow manufacturers in the same branch of industry, assumed an international character, and the problem of distribution assumed, for the manufacturer, a degree of importance it had hitherto not reached. Many manufacturers recognized the need for representation of some kind in th overseas market, and to-day very large numbers of British firms, in almost every branch of industry, have agents in Canada. Although this is so, it sometimes happens that some firms still assume what may be described as a passive attitude towards distribution or selling—a tradition born of a time when conditions were radically different from what they are to-day. They apparently assume that Canadian firms will solicit business. The number of firms that can expect to do business successfully on these lines must be quite limited. Probably only those manufacturing products highly specialized in character, and for which substitutes are with difficulty obtainable, can afford to adopt this non-aggressive attitude. The seller must woo the buyer. The Canadian buyer expectes the seller, or his representative, to call on him, and discuss matters vive voce, and both Canadian and American manufacturers act in accordance with this expectation. British firms represented in the Dominion do so also, but such firms as are not represented, and limit their activities to the despatch of circulars and catalogues, are still sufficiently numerous to have it pointed out to them that their efforts are largely wasted."

We quite agree with Mr. Milne to the extent that the personal touch in business is more necessary than ever before and exporters should certainly maintain representatives on both sides of the water.

We should endeavor strenhously, to promote and expand trade particularly within the British Empire as we are of the opinion that small advantage will accrue in negotiations with France and Italy. The preferential tariffs within the Empire are decidedly beneficial for inter-trade and possibly may be even more modified for expansion.

Canadians will gladly accept any benefit that may accrue to them from British tariff changes in this respect and will reciprocate consistently along protective lines. It is the desire of the people of this Dominion to trade extensively with the Mother Country and when many present little difficulties are adjusted, and when we become more familiar with the English markets and their system of export trading, we can both expect tremendous achievements which will be of mutual benefit, nationally, morally and financially.

Citizens should familiarize themselves with export commerce and the establishment in Canada of branches of the Department of Overseas Trade, has been a great factor indeed in the results which have already accrued.

PASSING COMMENT

A redistribution bill is promised for the new Dominion Parliament. When it comes down it will be possible to see whether it is for distribution or a gerrymander that Premier King has in view .

It should not be overlooked that the Drury Government is scheduled to appear before a jury of electors this year. To a large extent the future radial question will be definitely settled then.

The bar-keeper was wickeder than the soda fountain clerk, but he didn't shake his hair back at intervals.

The faith cure may not work in every instance, but it is good for the conviction that the world is going to the dogs.

This time you can't tell whether that noise of bumping is people falling from the wagon or dry agents demolishing a still.

No doubt the quality of the majority of Christmas cigars prompts many men to swear off smoking at New Year's, who would otherwise continue in such sin and wickedness unperturbed.

PRESS OPINIONS

WELLS' IDEA OF AN EARTHLY PARADISE

(London Morning Post)

Mr. Wells, having settled with the past, is back on one o his old-established and most popular lines, the future. We read that there is about to be launched a new serial of his devising, which will run two thousand years hence. "There are to be fascinating anticipations" of subjects which the "unsettled" sociologist has "left his own—science and government, morals and marriage, invention and industry, happiness and money." According to this forecast, we are to have no marriage, no churches, no clothes, and no politics—then are to be like "gods" (gods, as we all know are created in the image of Mr. Wells), and seem to be made of glass. The air, too, is to provide wonders and chemistry is going to furnish miracles. It is all very interesting.

AS OTHERS SEE US

(Providence Journal)

Politics in Canada and the strategy of railroad traffic do not change much as the years pass. They still conflict, at certain points, for the same reasons they did a generation ago. Hence the conflict that the Canadian nation has lost much money by its public ownership of railroads. Sir Henry Thornton seemingly views the question from the same angle as most Canadian railroad managers in the last thirty years. The relation which the St. Lawrence, Ferry and Great Lakes bear to the railroad routes between our Western States and Eastern seaboard is fixed by nature and is not something which narrow-visioned politics can abolish.

THE ADDRESS BLOCKS THE WAY

(Montreal Herald)

Comment is made on the announcement from Ottawa that on the opening of the forthcoming session of Parliament the House of Commons will be invited to get down to business from the moment the Speaker takes the chair. Months is made of the waste of time in late years involved in the practice of meeting on Thursday hearing the speech from the Throne, sitting for fifteen minutes on Friday and only taking up the Address in reply to the Speech on Monday.

If this practice is dropped it will only be one day wasted instead of three when the Address was invariably moved on the Friday and in the majority of cases adopted on the following day. Last session the House was opened on Wednesday, March 8 took up the Address on Monday, March 13, and did not dispose of it till March 23. The circumstances in which the House met last year were unusual and the Government, only two short months in office, were only too pleased to get the Address over—consumed in the debate.

The drawback to a debate on the Address is the fact that until it is disposed of no other business can be taken up. This rule, which Sir John Macdonald once held to be inviolable, was the undoing of the bolters from the Bowell Ministry in 1896. The "Nest of Traitors," as the Prime Minister termed them, unhorsed Sir Mackenzie under the impression that they would ride on under another leader, but they counted without their host. Parliament had been opened and the Speech from the Throne delivered. When the Premier went to the Governor-General to tender resignation the Governor-General declined to accept it on the ground that the Address in reply to the Speech from the Throne had not been adopted. It was a rude jolt. It made it necessary for the traitors to come to heel and continue to serve under Bowell nearly four months longer. The Address, therefore, blocks the other business and the sooner it is got out of the way the sooner the ordinary business of the session can begin.

Wit and Humor

TORY TIN LIZZIE

Wm. Forrester, M.P.P., campaigned South Perth splendidly in the last election. One morning he tried hard to convert some opponents, but in vain.

He left, rather annoyed, jumped in his car, and turned on the starter. It refused to work. For ten minutes he tried to start it, but had no success. He got out the crank and cranked it hard, and nearly broke his arm.

Just then a passer-by saw him stop for a minute, look disgustedly at the car, and shout: "Blast it, have you turned Tory, too?"

Columbia
New Process RECORDS

Melody unmarred by distracting noise!

Columbia discovers a process which produces records virtually free from objectionable surface noise.

As a phonograph owner you have always been annoyed by the swish, grinding and scratching noises of records.

This "surface noise" has been considered impossible to remove. After years of experiment the Columbia Graphophone Company to-day presents to the world a record that is virtually noiseless.

An ultra fine surface

This record has been made possible by Columbia's patented laminated, or three-ply construction. The core or centre leaf in Columbia New Process Records, because it is absolutely distinct from the playing surfaces, is made of a harder, more durable substance. Over this rigid backbone are laid the two playing faces made of the new, ultra fine, ultra smooth surface fabric.

Just pure melody

With New Process Columbia Records you get all the real beauty of voice, all the exquisite delicate tones of the 'cello and the violin! You get melody unmarred by objectionable surface noise that has been considered impossible to remove until Columbia removed it!

Fully protected by patents

In no other record can you get the same wonderful degree of surface quietness and pure, uninterrupted music, for the simple reason that Columbia alone possesses the secret of making a material which, engraved as a surface for phonograph records, obliterates obnoxious and intrusive surface sounds.

Here are two new dance records, New Process of course, and your dealer will gladly play them, or any other recent Columbia selections. You will be delighted with the clear reproduction of every note—nothing is lost by surface sound.

Woman's Sphere

FIGURED FABRICS THE VOGUE

Dressmakers who know how to use figured materials, and women who can cut them well, will be successful this winter, almost every dress is developed in figured woven, or printed and with a design. Quite plain silk crepe de Georgette is no longer accept-able; it must have a second material such as figured or embroidered. This style, of course, is not for the woman of limited means, however, lower that she can do with, unless what she can with modern ingenuity; but has attained some measure of success. Some women, in new clothes, look as if they had scooped anywhere from a fire; and can look well, because they have chosen with knowledge or good advice.

Almost clothes is difficult. We know what one likes is not enough; one must know what is suitable. Imagination can easily go wrong; and lack of imagination can be very dull. One's dressmaker should be a guide and friend, and last nearly a dozen people. Many women dress as if they were dolls, with no personality of their own. If the dressmaker has a sense of design with which they are in sympathy, she can improve their personality in from one to a dozen ways as a whole, the dressmaker has to help the client.

Comfortable clothes are strongly to be recommended; with just enough distinction to mark them as belonging to the present time. They must be suitable, and both rich and poor should be economical. One must know how to pay and when to refrain. It is necessary to pay well for cloth, satin, and silk crepe, but not necessary to indulge in one of the season's unsubstantial and flashy novelties, which are rarely in the stage. Fresh fabrics material may be worn in the evening, but are out of place at other times. No one should be tempted by flimsy materials, from which all the substance has been stamped in the execution of the design with which they are embroidered. Neither can any but the best work in beaded materials be recommended. Brown designs, or gold and embroidery, endure better than anything, and are worth paying for.

Materials this season are highly colored, as well as very complicated in design, and are brilliant in and not all dyers with the dark rich colors be worn a bit of brilliant tone-to-col-ored jumper, trimmed with flat velvet bows of different shades, in the same shade. With a white crepe de chine dress there will be a white woollen coat stitched all over with fading, and an Eastern design. A black pleated skirt will be worn with a coat embroidered in many colored wools. A long coat is in kerat sienna cloth patterned with a large check and tufted here and there with a deep fringe. Many costumes are in tortoise-shell shades. A dress and coat is in brown velvet, with a suggestion of lighter shades, through which runs a thread of gold; it has not been for color and gold with a touch of black. Sleeveless green is a good color, for many soft shades of red, blue, and amber go with it. A supple green crepe de velvet joined a piece of fine many new figured materials of less substance, and is cut trimmed with fur, is useful when, after-noon parties grow more frequent, the little dress in which girls can dance, is the one to put on. Tulle-made and cost-dresses are smocked by many wrists coats.

THE DIVINE BRIDEGROOM

What the Bride says—The Song of Solomon, also Eph.-Rev.

Oh know ye not my gracious Lord,
Clothed with all grace divinely fair!
Dreadful He lovelieness to see,
The chiefest in ten thousand He,
Yea! None may with my Lord compare!

Dearly and I beloved by Him,—
His spot or wrinkle I am not;
My Lord would have me always be
In the most sweet captivity
To His divine obedience bound.

To give Our Lord I am most fain—
Mine own plain heart I do design,
He calls me rich of royal Mien,
Lowly and poor, myself I deem,
His name and love's perfect equal!

And what though lowly, poor, despised,
Though earth's proud ones my hope deride!
I'm crowned with His glorious fame,
I'm shielded with His royal name,
I am His love, His chosen bride.

But dearer, still, my waiting soul!
His love to me His daily prove;
His presence makes me bide with me,
How very dear His thoughts can be,
Most sweet to Her He greatly loves!

How precious are His comely words,
Free from the dross of earth's alloy;
Powerful thy bond divine,
How sweet those counsels are of thine,
Better than all earth's purest joy!

My heart keep watch, it is the voice
Of my dear Lord that calls to me!
This is joy! Friend or daughter, Self,
My well-beloved beyond compare,
Before His face the shadows flee!

He fain would rest with me awhile,
Hear His all gracious joys impart;
Disturb Him not, but wait awhile
My sleeping Lord, but let Him take
His needful rest upon my heart.

I sat me down with great delight,
His fruit was pleasant to my grove;
The richness of His grace to me,—
My heart grew faint with ecstasy—
His banner over me was love.

Such tender care He gives to me—
His left hand under my head doth embrace;
He leads me from the noisy throng,
Puts in my mouth a noble song
To praise Him and His matchless grace!

My Lord has left me for awhile,
Mine own Beloved has withdrawn;
Nay! Mock me not, my Lord may come
At any hour and take me home,
For is the day not near the dawn!

For Him I keep my bridal robes
From all earth's dark defilement free;
Hasten Beloved! haste to say—
"Arise my fair one, come away, Arise! my love, come up to me."

LINKED LIVES

By

D. Kinmount Roy

The intensity of his passion for revenge burned so fiercely that he could not rest, and without waiting for further development he hurried back to the city, way to Fonseray, his usual caution having forsaken him for the time. His bitter disappointment at a time when he thought he had secured a great success made him reckless, and called out all the vicious, defiant elements of his character.

He travelled, to all outward seeming, as a decent man, but his fellow travellers regarded him with admiring sympathy. Some, with touching delicacy, pressed gifts of money upon him, which he declined. He was poor, he said with fine simplicity, but honest, and had enough for present needs, thanking them all the same. The glory of playing his part so well roused his self-appreciation, and gave him a fine sense of superiority over his companions.

In spite of his pleasure in excellent acting, however, the burning desire to complete his journey and exact full satisfaction, still held him. Impatience urging him on with feverish haste. But even Kinkman had worked the human machinery to the best advantage. His self-imposed privations, his consuming greed and all it involved had well-nigh burned up human kindness and in spite of all his determination and wrath the wretched man was really ill. He felt the coals burning in his inmost stages, both to save time and to hide his destination. In his usual state of excitement, he could not think coherently of the district, and although it was yet day-light, he missed his way, and before he might close his eyes in hard and suffering, as well as miles away from the place he sought. It was not caring for him to sleep under the stars; perhaps indeed he owed much of his keenest pain to unaccustomed exposure. But he was no longer as in former years when in the full enjoyment of abundant life, the spirit of bitter chagrin and craving for revenge had exhausted him more than he knew. With night came confusion as to location, and utter weariness. To make his situation worse, a violent wind-storm came on, accompanied by rain, and in spite of all his efforts and skill in finding shelter, he was soon soaked and shivering in the cold blast.

It seemed as though the very elements had leagued together to defeat his just desire for vengeance. The miserable creature in his perplexity and loneliness prayed—prayed for life and light that he might accomplish his end and accomplish his enemies' destruction.

That Heaven might be deaf to this prayers, and deny him such a mercy, seemed to him impossible. It would be cruel and unworthy of the Almighty to take advantage of a man's failings, he said, with some degree of comfort to himself. He had not engaged in all as to the existence of the Deity, but he was not so sure of his unaided ability to persuade the Power to adopt his conception to favour his own plans.

The very thought of prayer it has been used by women, and he was a man. He would have to use his great value.

Let it help your daughter and yourself.

The Short Story Jr.

MARTHA'S BOB

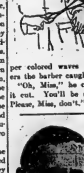
"I've made up my mind," Martha declared, "and it won't do you any good to beg me not to." She shook her wonderfully long, thick, auburn hair quick as a young colt tosses its mane. Then snatching her comb from the dresser she began viciously to comb out the tangles.

"But, Martha dear, it is so lovely, and you are sure to be sorry."

"If it were a decent color," Martha admitted, "I wouldn't mind so much. But to have red hair and then to have such gobs of it that you can't do anything with it," her voice trailed off, "I was too much for words.

"But it is so beautiful," Grace argued, "I'll give anything for hair like yours. Please don't have it cut."

"No, I'm going to have it cut," Martha declared, "and I'm going to have it done this afternoon while Dad is out of town."



"Oh, Martha, how can you? Your father will feel just terrible. He almost worships your hair, you know he does."

"It's all silly sentiment," Martha declared, "just because my hair is like mother's, and is his." Grace put on her hat and started for the door. "Are you coming along?" she asked.

Grace followed, though she felt just as though she were going to an execution. Martha was perched up on a barber's chair taking her hair down. As she shook the mass of copper colored waves down her shoulders the barber caught his breath in awe. "Gee, Miss," he cried, "don't have it cut. You'll be sorry if you do. Please, Miss, don't." But Martha was

ARE YOU REALLY AN ANIMAL?

Your intuition tells you that you have dominion over all the animal kingdom.

Ancient religion tells you that you were made in God's own image. And yet as you look at any animal, a horse or a lizzard, a monkey or a worm, it tells you that you have very much in common. Your flesh, your blood, bones, nerves, your digestive, nerves and respiratory systems are practically alike.

You differ in brain power and in spirituality, but really not in body.

And this you can truly say that in the care of your body is concerned you are an animal. And that brings me to my point. If you have an animal body why should you not care for it as a farmer cares for his horse, for instance?

What does he do?

First, he sees that it gets good food.

Second, he sees that it gets proper rest in a comfortable stable.

Third, he sees that it gets sufficient work, and if he has no work for it to do, he takes it out and gives it some exercise.

What about your body?

You certainly see that it gets sufficient food—too much in fact.

You also certainly see that it gets sufficient rest—too much frequently. But you do not certainly see that it gets enough work or exercise.

Your body is provided with its powerful muscles, nerves and sinews, was meant to work. It demands it. Starves without it. Does not demand such work for it, and so you must supply it artificially.

Remember the farmer and his horse.

Hearts O' Marmalade.

The luscious fruit in this delightful little confection was furnished by the old-fashioned "jelly doughnut." Hearts o' marmalade are nothing more than baked biscuits with jam or marmalade rolled in the centre.

First heat the oven very light. Put it into a cup and fill the cup with milk. Next sift together 3½ cups of flour, 4 teaspoons of baking powder, 2 teaspoons of sugar, and ½ teaspoon of salt. With the tips of the fingers blend the dry ingredients with 4 tablespoons of butter. When this is done moisten the mixture with the milk. Use enough to make a soft dough. Roll out about ½ inch thick. Cut into medium sized rounds. Put a heaped teaspoon of marmalade—or jam if preferred—in the centre of each, fold over the edges until they meet. Then, folded side down, put the rounds in a buttered baking dish. After sprinkling with milk and sprinkling with sugar, bake in a rather quick oven.

First Steps in Acting

Setting the Stage

(Miss Olive Cackley, who has coached hundreds of amateur plays with boys and girls in the cast, tells in this article how to put on an amateur performance.)

As soon as you have decided to put on a play and the particular play has been selected, you should begin to plan your stage setting, so that you will get used to practicing with everything necessary to the action, which are small in themselves, but would cause trouble if they were missing when the play is put on.

Do not crowd your stage with furniture, because you have a large room or a rented room. Be careful to have it well-balanced and see that it doesn't attract too much attention. A loud-looking pillow right in front might detract the audience's attention from the actors.

Practice walking on and off the stage, so that it is gracefully done. Watch yourself as you walk across your feet around the range of action or come onto the stage too fast. These two things you need to practice before you are to act successfully, and that is why you must pay attention to your stage setting and the entrances and exits.

The stage may be hung with portieres or curtains, or you may use screens, all of which can be easily borrowed if you promise to take very good care of them. Another good way to make a background is to hang up blankets. Then, if you feel down from the top, you can give the effect of a border by sewing on a small strip of brown cloth about two inches wide, extending it all the way around. In front of cloth you might use brown wrapping paper.

If one of the boys in the cast is handy with tools, he might set up a background for you. Have him make a nail on this some painted laths to give the room a paneled effect. Or perhaps not in the least influenced by his entreaties. "Well, I can't cut it, that's all," he declared. "It's too wonderful." He started away and called another barber.

"Say!" the latter was going to have that hair cut," yelled the young barber, "Wha', that's worth a fortune. It's wonderful. You ought to be ex-posing for a hair tonic and dry."

"But I never said any," laughed Martha, forward to the first barber, "I'm going to have it cut."

"That don't matter. You don't need none. Aint it grand? You don't very often see a head of hair like that."

Another barber, hearing his exclamations, came up to the group.

"I'd as soon cut off her arm," he declared.

Martha slowly wound her lovely hair back on her head, and she and Grace went home together.

"Say!" the latter said to her when she met him at the train, "did you know, Martha, I had a terrible dream last night. I dreamed that you cut your hair. I couldn't think of anything else all morning. I was so glad when I got home and saw it was all right."

Martha caught her breath with a gasp. "Oh, Daddy," she said, "I'm you feel that way about it I'll never cut it, no not if it turns grey, and drags on the ground.

"My Boy was Starving to Death"

"As He Was Getting No Nourishment He Was Gradually Wasting Away."

"Here's a story which will interest every parent. Before my boy was born, I was in such delicate health that the doctor didn't think I would survive the ordeal. For weeks after my boy was born I was confined to bed, so I couldn't feed him and the poor little fellow was left to the care of friends. He was "naturally strong. No care was taken in choosing his food and his poor little stomach became so upset that it could not keep anything on it. As he was getting no nourishment from his food, he was gradually wasting away. Finally, in desperation, we sent for a child specialist and he said that my boy was starving to death. He gave him some medicine and advised a certain diet. The child did improve but somehow couldn't seem to get strong. He lived on that diet for two years and the boy still continued weak and poor looking. He could not play like other children without having to lie down and rest. A neighbor who lives on a farm near the city, said that I was taking too much care of him. He took away from me for three months and it was with feelings of great excitement that I

Mothers Advise Their Daughters to Rely upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to Keep Them in Health

A Mother's Advice Restores Mrs. Hagan to Health.

Lindsay, Ontario.—"I had very poor blood. My face was pale and I was often in my side and back. I took pills and tablets but they without success. I got pale, weak and those who can, advised me to use Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I found for a number of years with it very good results and me to take it and I did. It did me words of praise for I have twenty years and have not felt so well for a long time. I shall always tell my daughter to help others if you think as I do."—Mrs. Mary E. Hagan, R. R. 4, Lindsay, Ontario.

A Sickly Child

Mahonoyplace, Pa.—"I would like to say a few words about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. About a year ago I thought it would be necessary for me to take my daughter out of school. She was sickly and nervous, and thought she would come home from school and would drop into a chair crying and say, 'Mamma, I don't believe I can go to school another day!' I gave her Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and now she is a healthy, happy, beauty, strong girl and weighs 130 pounds. She has no difficulty in doing her work, and she worked at home every night and morning, too. I am a mother who can certainly praise your medicine, and if it will be of any benefit to you you may use this letter as a reference."—Mrs. George E. Whitaker, W. Madison Street, Mahonoy-town, Pa.

Every girl wants to be healthy and strong, and every mother wants her daughter to be. The school girl is to enjoy herself at all times.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a splendid medicine for young girls just budding into womanhood. Mothers may depend upon it. Remember it is prepared from roots and herbs, contains nothing that can injure, but tends to tone up and strengthen the organs concerned in that they will work in a healthy and normal manner.

For nearly forty years it has been used by women to whom it has proved a blessing. Have it in your home.

Market Comments Today.

The markets on this side of the Atlantic to a very large extent continue to ignore the threatening attitude of France. Stocks, for instance, were cheerful yesterday, and after some preliminary selling in the morning closed steady and gave a good account of themselves for the balance of the day. The opening this morning was cheery.

A significant statement at the annual meeting of the Bank of Commerce yesterday was that of the general manager, when he said that current deposits in Canada had dropped largely because of withdrawal of U.S. balances here when funds required for, and the fact that much banking formerly done here is now being transacted in border banks across the line on account of the new tax on cheques and promissory notes.

DRUG FIRM IS INDICTED ON NEGLIGENCE

Grand Jury Finds True Bill Against Chandler and Fisher for Distributing Non-Sterile Cat-Gut

Dr. Norman Allen Died

The Grand Jury in the Assizes at Toronto yesterday returned a true bill against Chandler & Fisher, Limited, Winnipeg, on a charge of criminal negligence. It is alleged that the accused sold or distributed "Perfection Cat-Gut" without having the same sterile, resulting in the death of Dr. Norman Allen and Thomas Sergeant. A second count, in the indictment alleges that the accused committed a common nuisance resulting in injury to Dr. Allen and T. Sergeant.

The indictment follows the death of Dr. Allen from tetanus, alleged to have resulted from the use of gutcare supplied by them to St. Michael's Hospital, and that of Thomas Sergeant in St. Joseph's Hospital.

GOVERNMENT FINANCING

Provinces and municipalities will have financing requirements of no small size, and they are getting into the market early, prompted in part no doubt by the current buoyancy of the market as a whole, and in part, too by the desire to complete necessary operations before the Federal Government begins to carry out its programme for the year. Just what the Government's requirements are is not yet clear, but with the payment of Victory bond subscriptions, and providing the Canadian National Railways' requirements, of which vary from $18,000,000 to $100,000,000 or more, I appears probable that they will require to be taxed in the market at least will b taxed to the full. The city of Winnipeg has fixed its requirements for the year at $5,000,000, has been listed fo exchange. The stock was called yesterday morning. Brompton comm has been dealt in for some little time in the unlisted department and has found its way into the hands of a considerable number of investors in Toronto and vicinity.

TECK-HUGHES ACQUIRES ORI PROPERTY

According to well-defined rumor yesterday, Teck-Hughes Gold Mines, Ltd., has acquired the adjoining property, the Ori Gold Mines Continuing reports of buying in this stock which is largely coming from New York, lends color to the statement Rumors to this effect have been circulated for many months, but if they can be believed at this time the deal has already been consummated. It is stated that the capital of the Teck Hughes property will be increased to $5,000,000 and that the additional 1,000,000 shares will be utilized to pay for the Ori. The vein on the Ori property was discovered in 1912. The shaft on the property is down to a depth of 400 feet

BOND MARKET GOOD

The activity in the bond market with which last year closed has continued unabated since the start of this year. The market, as represented by Victories has continued to advance, and has established the new high level of 102.16 on the exchange. Prices as of other high grade bonds have also experienced advances and to the same extent as in the case of Victory bonds.

From all indications, new issues in Canada will continue to be scarce for the present, one large issue having already been sold in the United States and a second will be sold there this week. The first issue consisted of $20,000,000 five year 5 percent bonds which were sold at a cost to the city of only 5¼ percent. The second issue sold this week is that of the city of Toronto which is offering 20 year instalment bonds payable in New York as well as in Canada. This will be the first time that Toronto has entered the New York market but several millions and sixteen months its last issue having been sold in Canada last spring.

Underlying conditions as they relate to bonds appear to be very satisfactory. Money is becoming freer and easier and consequently improving while the comparative shortage of bonds in Canada adds to the technical strength of the market.

NEW GROUND FOR THE BIG THREE

The McIntyre, Hollinger and Dome Mines of Porcupine have been breaking into new ground during the past few months at a rapid rate. The McIntyre has reached the 2,300 foot level in development, the Hollinger 2,000 foot level, and Dome 1,900 foot depth. All three properties, as they were topped at lower and lower levels confirmed the beliefs of geologists who have studied the formation in Porcupine that values would be maintained or improve at depth. McIntyre has found its richest ore at greatest depths. Hollinger ore bodies are greatly rich below the 1,600 foot level, while Dome Mines Company, in its new workings, has transformed the property from a $6 to $8 per ton proposition into a $12 to $14 per ton property. Good results are being obtained in a half-score of lesser developed mines in the camp.

Official announcement is made that the merger between the Teck-Hughes gold mines and Ori gold mines has been consummated.

The Girl In Red

Music promises to be the social and artistic engagement of the season if the forthcoming production of "The Girl in Red," a three act musical comedy, with over one hundred and twenty-five Belleville people in the cast, in aid of the Children's Aid Society and under the able direction of Theodore H. Bird, which will be presented, two nights, at the Griffin Opera House, Wednesday and Thursday, January 24th and 25th. Following are a couple of extracts from papers in other cities where "The Girl in Red" has produced "The Girl in Red":

"GIRL IN RED" WAS A GRAND SUCCESS

One of the Best Amateur Shows Ever Given in Owen Sound

"The Girl in Red", the master comedy staged under the auspices of Earl Grey Chapter, Daughters of the Empire, was the attraction at the Opera House yesterday afternoon and evening, and it certainly was an attraction in more ways than one. To view the crowd, for the house was sold out in a few hours after the plan opened on Tuesday, and as to the quality there seems to be but one opinion and that it was just about the best amateur show of the kind ever put on in Owen Sound stage. Though the time for rehearsal had been short, had evidently not been wasted, for everything went smoothly. Lines had been well learned, and there was a refreshing absence of those stage-like and "rough spots" so often noticeable in amateur performances."—Owen Sound Sun.

"GIRL IN RED" PRETTY PLAY WELL PLAYED

Welland Amateurs Pleased Large Audience at Lambert's

Plenty of Fun

Comedy Effects Well Worked Out Under Capable Direction

"It is hereby handed to them, the people is across, decidedly and emphatically. "The Girl in Red" pleased an audience that filled the Lambert Theatre, Wednesday night, and the chorus a whole lot of people had a mighty satisfactory evening's enjoyment, as indicated by the applause and the doings was that the young people on the stage seemed to be getting just as much out of it as the audience—in the audience. There were some of the silliness and strain or the part of the participants as is associated with amateur production "Some of those painful waits when nothing is pleased, no breathing for time followed by ablaunt prompting from the wings. The whole show went with a smoothness and finish that could have been no discredit to the professional stage and the producer, Theodore Bird, must be accorded credit for a good job done in the handling of good material, etc.—Welland Tribune and Telegram. G. W. V. A. HOLD ANNUAL MEET for a long time, he having been appointed delegate, along with Comrade Dr. Wilson, who attended the Annual Provincial Convention of the G.W.V.A. at Ottawa last year, and who were successful in securing the 1923 convention for Belleville.

The three successful members for the Executive Committee are Comrades D. R. McCaig, who was a member of the 1922 Executive; Comrade D. J. Moon of the Bank of Commerce staff, and Comrade R. G. Roberts, better known as "Ernie" among his associates. These Comrades are all subject for the Annual War Veterans' Association and have lent their services on all occasions, in helping promote the welfare of the association and the returned men in general. The more member is to be elected to the Executive by the President and members of his Executive, this being according to constitution laid down by the Dominion Command at Ottawa.

The new officers-elect have a hard task before them this year. We know that they will be successful, if every member will get behind them and help make the Belleville Branch one of the best in the Dominion.

After the retiring President had delivered his address, which was a very interesting part of the ceremony took place. Comrade Dawes, President-Secretary presented Dr. Wilson with the official gold badge of the G.W.V.A., this being a token presented to each retiring president at the annual Meeting. Comrade Wilson replied in a few well chosen words, thanking the Association as a whole or their support during his term of office, and asked all present to back up their successor in all he does and work that the Executive and building Committee had accomplished in the past year, in the Victory Memorial Hall, to be known as the Memorial Home. This building has been under the course of repair for some time and within a short time it will be completed and an official opening will take place.

After the business had been transacted, the comrades adjourned to the picture hall, where a splendid banquet was tendered, Comrade A. E. Baldwin, Steward of the Association, acting in charge, assisted by Comrade G. Madden, Comrade Dawes, Comrade Glover and Comrade Sam Mayhew.

Comrade G. W. Dawes, President-Secretary, then took charge of toast-master. After the toast to the King had been dealt with, the toast to the Dominion was proposed and responded to by Past President Comrade C. F. Wallbridge, who gave a very interesting address, outlining the work of the Dominion Command in their work during the past six years. Past President Comrade Wallbridge responded to the toast to the Ontario Provincial Command, in a very interesting address. The toast to the retiring officers was received with great applause and was responded to by Comrade Z. M. Wilson, Comrade Charlie Thompson, Comrade Ernie Fields and Comrade J. W. Day. Comrade Wilson proposed the toast to the newly elected President and Executive, this being responded to by he officers-elect each one thanking he members for placing them where hey did, and promising that they would try and make this a banner ear in the history of the Great War Veterans' Association. A toast was proposed to the Press by C. F. Wallbridge to the recent retired Secretary, his being responded to by Comrade Biddle. Another toast was also proposed to the Auxyll Light Infantry, and responded to by Regimental Sergeant-Major Comrade G. A. Symons in a few well chosen words.

During the evening community singing was a big feature and Comrade "Billie" Edwards gave two comic selections in his usual inimitable way. Comrade Cecil Tyrell. We were also favored with two solos by Comrade W. E. Baldwin, Mr. Al. Wilson, a well known pianist, presided at the piano during the banquet.

The speakers all being now over, Comrade Dawes asked the comrades to try and attend the meetings as regularly as possible, and announced that the next meeting would be held in the new club rooms, in two weeks time.

After the singing of the National Anthem and Auld Lang Syne the meeting broke up, all having spent a wonderful time.

ACT DECLARED TO BE INVALID

Windsor, Ont., Jan. 9.—The Liquor Carriage Act, passed during 1922 by the Ontario Government, officially prohibiting liquor trade on the border to-day was declared invalid by County Judge J. J. Coughlin, K.C.

Allowing the appeal of the Walkerville Brewing Company against a conviction for transporting liquor on Provincial highways, Judge Coughlin said the passing of such an act was not within the power of the Ontario Government. In his judgment, Judge Coughlin pointed out that while the act which prohibits brewers and distillers from using public highways over which to transport liquor did not expressly state that exportation was barred, it had that effect and, therefore, was an encroachment upon the jurisdiction of the Federal Government.

The effect of this judgment was interpreted here to-day to mean that breweries and distillers again may use the highways to bring liquor to the border for exportation to the United States without fear of being molested by Provincial police or License Board officials.

The judgment is said to be the most important handed down in many months in so far as rum-running on the border is concerned.

REPORT OF BOYS' WORK, DEC. 1922, PRESENTED BY R. WOODLEY

The past month has sped along quickly and we have not been able to accomplish all the things we had hoped to do.

Early in the month a letter was sent out, signed by the chairman of the Boys' Work Committee, "to the Sunday Schools of the city, calling a meeting for the 4th of December and offering to assist them in their winter program.

The idea of the committee was that we might be able to assist the various schools along the lines of Junior, S. S. & Y. work by conducting a mentors training class, which Mr. Sidenius has very kindly agreed to lead up, and also by giving whatever time and assistance we can in their physical program.

The response to our communication was not very gratifying as only one school was represented at the meeting but since that time a number of the leaders of Boys' Groups have intimated that they are desirous of taking advantage of such assistance as the Association can offer. Due to the fact that the regular quarterly Sunday Schools new groups of Boys are being organized under the C. S. E. T. there would seem to be an opportunity for service.

December, especially the latter part of the month has been considerable activity within the Association and the Boys' Department during the holiday season judging by the capacity Hours were so arranged that the gymnasium or the recreation rooms were always open to the boys throughout the holidays.

Members in the boys department has been considerable stimulated during the past month both by renewals and new members. The work among Boys' Groups has also received impetus by the suggestions in the local papers re Y membership as a Christmas present, for the boy proved well worth the expense thereby incurred.

On Jan. 21, 22, 23 there will be a conference for Boys' Work secretaries of Ontario and Quebec to be held at Central Y. M. C. A., Toronto. The programme as submitted by the Conference Secretary deals with all phases of Boys' Work and should prove highly instructive. If suitable arrangements can be made our Boy's

MOONSHINE CONVERTED INTO CANADIAN LIQUOR

Police Allege it Capsed Border to be Bottled and Exported

Joseph Marshall of Sarnia is held by Port Huron police today following an escapade Sunday night in which, it is alleged, he was found transporting liquor across the St. Clair River in a row-boat, the liquor being contained in a burlap bag so mapped that it can be fitted into suitcase.

The American police allege that this pattern of bag is being used extensively by rum-runners operating between the two cities, and they believe that in Marshall they hold a man who is the active figure of an organized gang who carry American moonshine to Sarnia, where it is bottled and disposed of as good Canadian whiskey, much being taken back to Port Huron.

Marshall was fined $350 in Sarnia last week for a violation of the liquor law and is now being held pending the analysis of the contents of the burlap bag.

FORCES OF FRANCE

Rhine Flotilla, stationed at Mayence, will move to Duesseldorf, Ruhrort and Duisburg tonight.

Paris, Jan. 10.—France is ready tonight to seize the Ruhr at daybreak. There are many reasons for believing that tomorrow's sun will disclose French aeroplanes hovering over Essen, while a long string of tanks crawl into the Krupps house in advance of foot and horse troops.

The hurry hour has been fixed, but until the occupation army marches the time, place, manner and exact objectives are being held by the Government as a military and political secret.

POWERS ARE NOTIFIED.

France late today notified Great Britain through the French Ambassador at London, and the United States Ambassador at Paris and Brussels were informed by the French and Belgian Governments, respectively, what France plans to do.

MARCH ON RUHR.

M. Maginot, War Minister, has had a final conference with Premier Poincare, learning him that the army is ready; the technical men, even emergency crews of railroaders and telegraphers, the Ruhr of strikes in the Ruhr, are awaiting orders at Duesseldorf, and their military escort is impatient to be off.

15,000 TROOPS MARCH.

Bayence, Jan. 10.—Fifteen thousand troops left Mayence, which is the French General Headquarters, for Duesseldorf. Only a skeleton garrison remains.

A strong guard has been thrown around the bridge across the Rhine, as it is the only bridge for miles in either direction, and it is felt the Germans might attempt to blow it up.

The French troops are very white, with the exception of a small percentage of Indo-Chinese, and there are no Senegalese or black troops among them.

CONFERENCES WITH BURGO-MASTERS.

Essen, Jan. 9.—A conference was in progress at 8.30 o'clock this evening between the French military chiefs and the Burgomasters of Duisberg, Essen, Muelheim, Ratingen, Gorresheim and other towns in the district. No information is yet available, as the conference is behind closed doors.

REQUISITION VEHICLES.

Duesseldorf, Wed., Jan. 9.—All passenger automobiles and heavy trucks have been requisitioned by the French Government on orders issued by General Simon. The General, with the Staff officers, will inspect and select the best of the automobiles for use by the French.

Those refusing to hand over their cars will be tried by the French military court.

BRADBURY LEAVES FOR LONDON

Paris, Jan. 10.—Sir John Bradbury, British member of the Reparations Commission, has left Paris for London. He will be absent five or six days.

KIPLING BIDS FOR HIS OWN MANUSCRIPT

London, Jan. 8.—The earliest unpublished manuscript of Rudyard Kipling, one which he had forgotten existed, has been offered for sale and the highest bidder so far is the author himself. The manuscript contains twelve pages and is entitled "At the Pit's Mouth; Personal Recollections of Duncan Parsness—translated from the diary by R.K." and is valued by the owners at 800 pounds sterling. It was written in 1884, while Kipling was a young journalist in India.

The story is a satire on Anglo-Indian society and tells of a man's love for a married woman. One of the "Wee Willie Winkie" stories of the same author has the same title, "At the Pit's Mouth," but, except of the locality, the resemblance to this early manuscript ends.

Mr. Kipling, when in formed that the manuscript had been purchased by the dealers, at first doubted its authenticity but on examination declared the work genuine, although he only faintly remembered incidents connected with it.

Efforts have been made to publish the manuscript, which is still protected by the original copyright, but Mr. Kipling has refused to give his sanction. This is said to be one of the reasons for his attempts to gain possession of the work.

Short addresses were given by the visitors and some of the Trenton members together with music. District Deputy President Sister A. Johnson, of the Rebekah Lodge also gave an address. Sister Johnson is rapidly becoming the Rebekah Orator of this part of the Province. The address of the evening was then given by D.D.G.M. Way and was followed by great attention and interest. Bro. Newton gave a recitation and Bro. Ralls sang a song. Sandwiches and coffee was then passed, after which dancing was indulged in, being provided by Bros. E. Harvey, of Trenton, (piano); Bro. H. GERMAN MOB HUNT FRENCHMEN

Essen, Jan. 11.—A civilian mob, estimated at 5,000, assembled in front of the Hotel Kaiserhof tonight and demanded the expulsion of the members of the French commission, which was reported to be quartered there.

Several hundred eventually forced an entrance, but were met by Dr. Luther, the Burgomaster of Essen and Foot Minister in the Cuno Cabinet, who pleaded with them from the top of a table.

The Burgomaster was successful and the crowd struck up a vociferous chorus of patriotic songs and dispersed.

GIRL GUIDES ASSEMBLED LAST NIGHT

Enthusiastic Meeting Held and Some New Appointments Announced—Boy Scouts Explain Morse Code.

Four companies of the local Girl Guides met last night and in addition to the regular proceedings, an instruction was provided when two members of the Boy Scouts attended and gave a demonstration of the Morse code of signalling.

The girls are applying themselves intensively in preparation of the work covering the awarding of the second class badges.

New Appointment

The services of Miss Bradley of the Ontario School for the Deaf have been secured as captain of No. 3 company, in place of Miss Edith Sinclair. Miss Helen McKeown has been appointed as Lieutenant of company No. 3, Miss Phyllis McManus captain of company No. 4, and Miss Phyllis Wallbridge, lieutenant of company No. 4. Misses Currie and Cooper are still captains of companies No. 1 and 2 and Mrs. (Dr.) Branscombe is lieutenant of company No. 3.

Much interest in this work is being taken by not only the different officers in command, but by the general rank and file, and it is expected that much will be achieved in the future.

There appears to be an esprit-de-corps existent among the members of the local organization which tends to make the drills and meetings most enthusiastic.

The Young Peoples' Temple was just recently completed and dedicated.

NO EAST OR WEST RECOGNIZED BY SIR H. THORNTON

All Matters of Policy Must be Handled at C.N.R. Headquarters

Work For General Good

No Port Can be Developed at Expense of Another Says President of National Railways

Winnipeg, Jan. 10.—"Raising and marketing of grain form the basis of the business of this western country and I am coming out here to become acquainted with the people of the West and to learn something of the grain business, to see if we can formulate some plan to assist in finding new markets so that farmers can be successful in competition with other countries," declared Sir Henry Thornton, president of the Canadian National Railways, upon his arrival here from Fort William.

Another problem which related to the whole of Canada, said Sir Henry was the encouragement of immigration. It was one of the important problems Canada had to face though is more particularly concerned the West than the East, because there still was room to more around in the West and there was room for more grain to be grown. It was also chiefly associated with railway matters. They must get the right kind of man to come here as a settler, the kind who desired to work, the man who would work, the man who was thrifty. Any other kind of man had no business coming to Canada, he emphatically stated. When the right kind of man was here they must make certain that he was placed in surroundings where he could make a living, and provided with the wherewithal to establish himself.

Sir Henry said he recognized that there were several interests attending to immigration matters, but it was hoped that efforts of all must be co-ordinated or they would be largely dissipated.

Sir Henry was the guest at a dinner last evening of James Stewart, a member of the board of directors, and tomorrow will speak on railway matters at the Canadian Club luncheon.

During the course of his interview, Sir Henry was asked if he had given thought to the appointment of a man thoroughly conversant with western conditions to have absolute charge of matters of policy in the administration, leaving matters of policy to be determined at headquarters of the company, wherever that might be established.

QUESTION OF EAST AND WEST.

To this the president said he did not wish to recognize any part because he was of the East or the West. Indeed, he did not recognize East or West. It was his desire that concrete officers were selected who were thought to be the best to serve the purpose for which they were selected. If the proper man were found administration would largely be left to him, but definite policies would be laid down for him to follow. Obviously it was imperative that all matters of policy must be handled at headquarters and headquarters with him must for some time be where his hat was, and the hat might do some moving around for a time.

On the subject of making greater use of the elevator facilities at Quebec, Sir Henry had very little to say. No port could be developed at the expense of another, he declared, but that line of action would have to be followed that would benefit the greatest number of persons.

French Troops March Into Essen—Belgium Goes With France—Airplanes Drop Leaflets Warning Germans "To Resist Means Death"

OLD HATREDS GLOW

German Ambassador Leaves Paris—Berlin Protests—Soldiers Fully Equipped—French Regret U.S. Action in Withdrawing Forces—Tense Moments in Europe

TROOPS IN GERMANY

Essen, Jan. 11.—The French are in Essen. The first troops entered at ten o'clock this morning. The Belgian contingent moving from Duisburg, proceeded to the city by way of Muelheim simultaneously with the French. The Belgians were accompanied by a considerable body of French troops and an ammunition column. All soldiers have the fullest war equipment, even gas masks.

OCCUPATION PROCEEDING QUIETLY

Paris, Jan. 11.—Information reaching the Foreign Office up to one o'clock this afternoon showed that the occupation of the Essen district was proceeding without incident. A proclamation was posted in Essen to-day repeating in substance the principal points of Premier Poincare's notification to Germany. Despatches from Essen say that the town is quiet, stores are open, tramways are running, factories working and the people are busy with their usual occupations.

TO RESIST MEANS DEATH

Berlin, Jan. 11.—Airplanes dropped leaflets over Essen yesterday, calling upon the population to remain quiet, according to despatches received to-day. The leaflets asserted that persons who stopped work would be deported and that those who prevented or interfered with the normal course of the city's activities would be subject to the death penalty.

GERMAN AMBASSADOR LEAVES PARIS

Paris, Jan. 11.—Dr. Wilhelm Mayer, the German Ambassador to France, left Paris for Berlin at noon to-day. He took his leave without notifying the French Foreign Office or giving any indication of the reason for his departure.

REVOLUTION IN EAST PRUSSIA

Washington, Jan. 11.—Revolt has taken place in the whole of the Memal district of East Prussia, the citizens demanding that the territory be made part of Lithuania, according to a telegram to the Lithuanian legation here to-day, from its Government at Kovno.

MARTIAL LAW PROCLAIMED

London, Jan. 11.—A Reuter's despatch from Essen this afternoon says that martial law is to be proclaimed in the city by the French occupational forces, almost immediately.

Paris, Jan. 11.—Premier Poincare, in his statement before the Chamber of Deputies to-day on the steps being taken by the French in the Ruhr district, said that the Government's plans provided for the eventual occupation of Bochum if Germany fails to carry out the French demands.

French and Belgian armored cars, acting as advance patrols, were on the move shortly after midnight.

The main force of invasion comprises between 10,000 and 15,000 troops.

The rest of the 100,000 troops concentrated in the Dusseldorf area will be held as a reserve in case of trouble or further occupation of the Ruhr.

DESPOTTE TAKES CHARGE.

Dusseldorf, Jan. 10.—General Degoutte left this afternoon for Mayence for a military review and to witness the awarding of decorations, but he returned tonight in time to take personal charge of the advance into the Ruhr.

All day, troop trains have been rolling into the Dusseldorf area, and aeroplanes, which were immediately sent to the advance area. They will not be unloaded until tonight.

The general headquarters of the French Rhine army has been moved to Stahlhof, formerly the offices of an industrial magnate.

Many more automobiles were commandeered today, and now only a few private cars and taxis remain on the streets.

BELGIUM GOES WITH FRANCE.

France, with Belgium at her side and supported by Italy, will begin her long-talked-of "separate action."

The decision of President Harding to withdraw the United States troops from the Rhineland immediately came as a blow to the pride of France and to the French sense of right, although there is no word of official criticism—only regret.

The French people, however, are standing behind their Government at

BELLEVILLE CLUB AT HOME TO MEMBERS

An Enjoyable Affair Last Evening at the Club-Rooms—Good Attendance

The comfortable quarters of the Belleville Club were the scene last evening of a charmingly appointed affair, when members gathered there to enjoy a social evening. The card tables were the order of the evening and that the members appreciated unusually this feature of the event, was manifested by the jollity and excitement which at all times prevailed.

Mrs. (Judge) Wills poured the coffee. A goodly number of members were in attendance, both ladies and gentlemen, and a fine game in after the hockey match.

Regret was expressed, that Judge Wills was unable to be present owing to a slight indisposition.

These affairs are rapidly becoming popular with the membership and are an incentive indeed for new members to associate themselves with the Club. On these chilly evenings, the clubrooms are very inviting, being cosy and warm and the Club officials have demonstrated themselves to be splendid hosts.

BANK OF COMMERCE HOLD ANNUAL MEETING

Large Increase in Holdings of Gold—A Strong Position Maintained

Interesting and Informative Addresses by President and General Manager

Not one single dollar of the Officers' Pension and Guarantee Funds of The Canadian Bank of Commerce, amounting in all to over $5,300,000 is invested in the capital stock of that or of any other bank, stated Sir John Aird, in his address as General Manager before the annual meeting of the Bank's shareholders. Sir John also reviewed the relation between the Bank and the Dominion Realty Company, which erects and leases premises for the use of the Bank. "We think it well," he said, "to reiterate the fact that the Bank is in no way directly or indirectly liable in connection with the liabilities of the Company. The Company does not owe the Bank a dollar, the Bank has never owned a dollar of its bonds, nor has it at any time directly or indirectly guaranteed payment of its bonds, either principal or interest. The Bank values the investment which it holds in the Company, namely, the capital stock, at the sum of $1, and it is carried at that figure among the investments in the Bank's balance sheet. Outside of this the only relationship between the Bank and the Company is that of landlord and tenant."

In his comments on the annual statement of the Bank, Sir John referred to the increase of nearly $5,000,000 in holdings of gold, which meant that the Bank now had more than sufficient gold to cover every dollar of its note circulation. The large gold holdings mean $761,000 during the year, or scarcely as much as the ordinary day-to-day fluctuations in this item. The decrease in deposits not bearing interest was accounted for largely by the quiet state of trade during the year but was also no doubt due in some measures to the temporary disappearance of the premium on New York funds and the withdrawal of deposits by American customers. The Bank meanwhile had been able to make full provision for its own due debts at a figure considerably lower than a year ago. Losses there had been, he was only to be expected in such a period, and he intimated that the best answer to the allegation sometimes made that the banks were not sufficiently considerate of agricultural requirements, was that the losses from farm loans during recent years had been far more numerous than from other classes of business. Nevertheless the Bank had always pursued a policy of generosity towards farming, realizing that it was the basis of the country's prosperity. "During periods of money stringency in recent years" said Sir John, "when it was necessary to adopt a policy of restricted lending, loans to responsible farmers have always been expressly excepted from any restrictions in fulfilment of our conviction that in the prosperity of agriculture lay the solution of all prosperity in Canada. We are not blind to the fact that because of the extra time and care involved on the part of our manager and staff, the cost of lending to farmers is somewhat higher than the cost of other kinds of loans, but we feel it our duty to overlook these considerations as far as possible."

The General Manager also pointed out the serious consequence to industry that might be expected to follow extensive competition for savings deposits. The entrance of some of the provincial governments into the banking field and the high rate of interest they were paying had tended to make the loan companies offer even higher rates. This added competition of both governments and loan companies", he continued "can only result in using up the liquid working capital of the country and thus restricting the supply of funds for commercial business; and must ultimately tend to an increase of rates of discount because of the added expense and difficulty to which the banks are subjected in maintaining their deposits." Sir John also referred to the forthcoming revision of the Bank Act and said that he was sure the bankers of Canada would favour any amendments which in the true interests of the country. As the Canadian chartered banks were, however, established mainly for commercial purposes, and as conditions in Canada are different from those in Australia, he did not favour the inauguration of a government bank along the lines of the Australian model, with by far the greatest part of its assets invested in securities.

Conditions in Canada, he said had become during the year nearer normal, that is to say, nearer to point when the various industries and occupations could share proportionately in the rewards for the day's work. Until this point is reached, there could be no general revival of prosperity.

Sir Edmund Walker, in his presidential address, reviewed the business and industrial features of the year, and made special reference to the opening that now existed as a result of the approval of the British embargo on cattle,

MUSIC and DRAMA

CHARLES CHERRY IN DELIGHTFUL COMEDY HERE TO-MORROW

The real sale for "The Dover Road," A. A. Milne's newest comedy, opened at Grafton's this morning.

"The Dover Road" was one of the dramatic sensations of last year in New York, having played at the Bijou Theatre for ten months. It comes here with the original company intact, headed by Charles Cherry and including Molly Pearson, Kathleen Comegys, Reginald Mason, Ernest Waits, George Riddell, Edwin H. Morse, Doris Haskell, Arline MacMahon and George Nolan. The production is made by Lee and J. J. Shubert and Guthrie McClintic who have established themselves with "The Dover Road" in the highest rank of American producers. The author paid Mr. McClintic the greatest compliment of insisting that the London presentation which was made last June, be copied exactly after the New York production. The scene is set on the Dover road, and portrays the county home of Mr. Latimer, a wealthy philanthropist who traffics mostly in the future happiness of sloping couples. The comedy has all the charm of Milne's "Mr. Pim Passes By" with perhaps more theatrical and amusing situations. Mr. Latimer is excellently played by Charles Cherry who has developed a class of acting which lifts him entirely out of the commonplace "lover roles" in which he has been seen most often in the past.

"PAID BACK" BOASTS A CAST OF REAL FILM HEADLINERS

Thousands of fans liked the superb, polished villainy and consummate love making of Irving Cummings on the screen.

He was for a time one of the most popular actors. But now he is directing only, and "Paid Back", the Universal all star attraction at the Regent today, Saturday, matinee daily, is an example of his success in the new line of endeavor.

"Paid Back" is a dramatic story by Louis Dureux Lighton, with the chief figures impersonated by such famous players as Gladys Brockwell, Stuart Holmes, Madison Hamilton, Kate Price, Edna Murphy, Arthur Stewart Hull, Lillian West and Wilfred Lucas.

"Hello Mars" a two-reel Century comedy, a new Vodevil Movies reel and the Pathe News complete the entertainment.

Both Nesa and other varied attractions have been arranged for exhibition on the same screen.

NEW JACK HOLT PICTURE HAS POWERFUL THEME

"A man's fight with himself", says A. B. LeVino, adaptor of Jack Holt's latest Paramount picture, "While Satan Sleeps", which is the feature offering at Griffa's tonight, and Saturday, matinee and night, is the best description of the theme of the picture. To fight with a material enemy is comparatively easy, but to battle with one's own conscience and best the evil influences at work in one's self, is a scrap that will put a man to the test as nothing else can. That is the kind of role they have given Jack Holt in this picture. Many have read Robert B. Kyne's story, "The Amore of Paniment", upon which this new picture was based, the supporting cast includes Trixi Bumette, Wade Boteler, J. P. Lockney, Mabel Van Buren, Will Walling, Fred Huntley and other capable Paramount Stock company players. Lloyd Hamilton in a two-reel Jack White Mermaid comedy "The Adventure," a new chapter of the "Buffalo Bill" adventure play, and a Travelogue have been arranged for presentation on the same program.

BAPTIZED DOG BUT STILL HOLDS PULPIT

Boston, Jan. 11—(By Canadian Press.)—The Rev. Edwin Curtis, who incurred the displeasure of the Boston Presbytery when he baptized a dog and invoked divine blessing on French fried potatoes, holds the pastorate of the First Presbyterian Church of Hoosick line and conviction of the law, the Supreme Court ruled in a recent decision by the full bench.

The court dismissed a bill in equity brought by a minority of the church society which sought to restrain use of the church property because Mr. Curtis did not have the approval of the Presbytery. It was ruled that the great majority of the members of the church favored Mr. Curtis's retention and so there was no controversy recognizable by the court.

BURNS MONEY TO WED

New York, Jan. 11.—Mrs. Rose Santors has been convicted by a General Sessions jury of extorting money from Eddie Stoppiello and his fiancee, Katie Diodati, with the aid of theoretical spirits from zebenza and elsewhere.

Stoppiello testified that on the eve of his marriage to Katie, his fiancee's stepmother warned his that evil spirits were on his trail, seeking his death. She induced him, he said, to go to Mrs. Santors, who had quite a reputation in their Bronx neighborhood as a clyvoyant and spirit fixer.

Mrs. Santors convinced him and his fiancee, he testified, that the only way he could keep life long enough to wed was by burning money. So Eddie, he said, gave her money to burn—$600 in one lump and several smaller payments. He also paid for a mystic bodyguard to ride about on the truck he drove, warding off the evil spirits that sought to accomplish his undoing.

THE DAIRY STANDARDS ACT

In his enforcement of the Dairy Standards Act Hon. Manning Doherty, Minister of Agriculture in the Drury Government has not, in the minds of the farmers generally, performed very great public service. It was likely his hopeful idea, that with the co-operation of the dairy inspectors in the performance of their duties in the application of this Act, the dairyman would profit immeasurably, a more equal distribution of milk proceeds would be made and a better product would be manufactured. Unfortunately the majority of farmers do not appreciate this proposed more equitable basis of settlement for their milk, because they believe and know that no such anticipated results have been achieved, and an emergency has arisen which leads to the conclusion that the operation of the Act constitutes unfairness with relative discrimination and it is being denounced on all sides in the counties of Hastings and Prince Edward, which are indeed conceded to be the leading districts in the Dairying Industry, in the Province.

Prior to the enforcement of the Dairy Standards Act, which was placed on the statute books during the Hearst regime, many deputations interviewed the Drury Government protesting against its enforcement as the understanding with the Hearst administration was that the measure would not be enforced unless the dairymen so desired. Thus under Hearst regime, the operation of the Act was optional and that is the manner in which the farmers in this district wish it interpreted today.

It is said that considerable unfairness and inaccuracy of secrecy exists in the testing of the milk at the various factories. The inspector when visiting the factories conducts the tests so that the cheesemaker cannot ascertain the results of same and subsequently statements of the figures are mailed to the secretary, so that individual patrons really are unaware of the quality of their milk until long after it is delivered from their farms.

Possibly the Department may have adequate reasons for this system, but if so, the patrons wish to be enlightened.

Dairy shows and conventions, college commencements and technical direction, seem to be the chief duties of some departmental officials and many of them have developed pet ideas which they endeavor to promulgate upon the farmers, who, in this instance now regard themselves, more or less, as amicable figure heads in the matter and much unrest and dissatisfaction is resultant.

The Dairymen of Prince Edward and Hastings certainly hold this legislation in disfavor but, at the same time, no individuals are more prone than they, to realize that the full resources of science should be utilized to demonstrate what can be edone to eliminate milk of poor quality.

They do expect, however, these same scientific principles to be applied in a fair manner and they are not satisfied with the operations of the Dairy Standards Act.

Hon. Mr. Doherty referred to this Act at the Dairymen's Convention which was held here a few days ago, and termed it his "pugnosed pet". The Act therefore must be a pleasing delusion to the Honorable gentleman and his officials, but the farmers of this district think otherwise and will express their ideas in no uncertain terms when the political picnics begin this summer.

KINGS, VIA THORNTON, PREJUDICIAL ORDER

There is an element of comedy in the recent ruling from Ottawa concerning railway employees and politics. The Prime Minister pledges Sir Henry Thornton that there will be no political interference with his management and Sir Henry, in turn, pledges the public that there will be no politics in his administration, and to prove his good faith he promptly proceeds to inform the employees of the National Railways that they may engage in politics to the limit of their bent.

Curious, it is not? The farcical side of these proceedings will contribute much to the public gaiety.

Comments were made, editorially in these columns in Monday's issue, relative to this sudden change in policy, but in casually referring to the matter again to-day, we would like to enquire why the Government should stop with the railways in allowing their many employees to profess their party affiliations. Tens of thousands of other civil servants are now deprived of their rights of citizenship by a despotic law which makes dismissal from office the price to pay for participation in politics and just a few weeks ago Commissioners were appointed by the King Government to enquire whether any appointees of the Meighen Government had committed political crimes to place their positions in jeopardy.

The recent announcement is indeed inconsistent and apparently discriminates between organized and unorganized labor.

To the victor belongs the spoils and all governments might just as well admit the condition, as it is certain to be practised. Subterfuge should not be resorted to in order that real intentions may be hidden from the public.

PASSING COMMENT

We hope this will not happen in Belleville this year:

"A young reporter was sent out by the city editor of one of the Toronto papers to report a meeting.

"About two hours after the assignment was made the young reporter returned with a sad countenance.

"The city editor told him to get the report up immediately, as it was nearly time to go to press.

"There will not be any report on that meeting," was the answer.

"Why not?' queried the city editor.

"There was no meeting,' replied the young reporter. 'It broke up in a big row and the chairman was chucked under the table'."

Speculation has begun as to the date of the provincial general elections. And The Intelligencer is in a position t ogive a tip on the event in strict confidence. It is this: That the elections will not be held until after the political picnic season.

Mary Pickford's life is insured for $1,000,000, so quite naturally if she stays out late at nights, her husband and other guardians become anxious as to her whereabouts.

HERE AND THERE

HOW SNAILS FORECAST THE WEATHER

Snails are extraordinary indicators of changes in the weather, and observers of natural phenomena gave some interesting accounts of weather-wise snails. They are said to imbibe moisture in their bodies during rain, and exude it at regular intervals afterward.

A certain snail first exudes the pure liquid; when this is exhausted, a light red succeeds, then a dark red, next yellow, and lastly a dark brown. The snail is very careful not to exude more of its moisture than is necessary.

The snail is never seen abroad except before rain, according to W. R. Reinicke in a contribution to Science and Invention. At that time it is found ascending the bark of trees and getting on the leaves. The tree-snail is also seen ascending the stems of plants two days before rain; if it be a long and hard rain they get on the sheltered side of the leaf, if a short rain on the outside of the leaf. Another snail has the same habit, but differs only in its color: before rain it is yellow, and after it, blue.

Other snails show signs of rain, not only by means of exuding fluids, but by means of pores and protuberances; and the bodies of some snails have large tubercles rising from them before rain. These tubercles commence showing themselves 10 days previous to the fall of rain they indicate; at the end of these tubercles is a pore; and at the time of rain these tubercles, with their pores opened, are stretched to their utmost to receive the water. In another kind of snail, a few days before rain a large and deep indentation, beginning at the head between the horns and ending with the jointure at the shell, appears.

A few days before rain some varieties of snails crawl to the most exposed hillside, where, if they arrive before the rain descends, they seek some crevice in the rocks, and then close the aperture of the shell with some glutinous substance; this, when the rain approaches, they dissolve, and are then seen crawling about.

CHARLES DICKENS

'So may I see thee, when my life is closed indeed;
"So may I,—when realities are fast fading from me like the shadows which I now dismis,—still find thee near me, pointing upward."'

O! master mind, these thy prophetic words,
Shall find an echo in the hearts of men;
Divine, and yet so human is thy touch
So vital, all the children of thy pen.

If the good that men do live after them,
Then, while creation shall endure,
The shadowy forms of children of thy brain
Shall bear us company for evermore.

Crowned now is this immortal brow,
With chaplets of unfading bays
Laughter and tears then gavest
And to us, who live, a two-fold heritage.

Long time latitate with the woods and fields,
Mountains and streams and all the loveliness of earth,
Thou lovest at the mystery of clouds and starsown alkes.
But now thou walkest in Elysian Fields,
And plucketst flowers from trees of Paradise!

PRESS OPINIONS

CIGARETTES AND FIRES
(Kingston Standard)

The report of the coroner to the several papers outside Kingston that the fire which destroyed the building at the Frontenac D.S.C.R. Hospital was probably caused by cigarette smoking. We do not know upon what authority or facts this report was based, and it would be wiser for people to wait till the inquiry going on as to the origin of the fire is over, and a full report made.

These people, however, who have been shocked and alarmed at the fearful and increasing losses of both life and property in Canada by fires would not be surprised if the inquiry showed that smoking cigarettes had something to do with it. Ask any of them, or better still, ask Jay Fire Chief, and they will tell you what losses have been incurred through the careless throwing away of lighted cigarette butts. And there a word of warning may be spoken re:bit smoking in public places such as the ferns. There is a rule against this; bit is it observed? The regulation should be strictly enforced that no smoker should be allowed to strike a match till he is outside such buildings. The public in their own interests should help in enforcing this regulation; public action would soon put a permanent stop to it.

A GOOD OPPORTUNITY
(Peterborough Examiner)

Peterborough is by no means the only Ontario city that is hampered by lethargy in regard to municipal affairs, and by a reluctance on the part of many citizens well qualified to serve on the civic bodies to offer their talents for the benefit of the community.

Many newspapers have been devoting much space in a discussion of this condition of affairs which cannot be called a healthy one, to say the least.

Among the suggestions that have been brought forward, one should be of particular interest to the members of the Rotary and Kiwanis Clubs.

It is pointed out that those organizations are greatly interested in civic welfare.

They should therefore take the lead in not only arousing the public to a realisation of the necessity of a keener concern in the nomination and election of candidates, but also in endeavoring to furnish from their own ranks a number of candidates.

They are representative organizations from which a very strong list of candidates could be selected, and it is felt that action on the part of these clubs would go a long way towards breaking the indifference and lack of interest so often exemplified in local municipal campaigns.

Some such filip is undoubtedly needed, and if the Rotary and Kiwanis Clubs can do anything to improve conditions in city civil affairs added a very material benefit to the long list of things for which the community has reason to thank them.

WILL DRURY PLAY FAIR?
(Kitchener News-Record)

Premier Drury and his cabinet are now said to be contemplating the redistribution of the seats before this year without a redistribution of seats.

While many people have not always agreed with Mr. Drury's policies we believe most of them, not excluding the Toronto Telegram, have believed the prime minister of Ontario to be a man of strictest integrity and sense of honor.

If Drury goes into an election without giving fair representation to the cities, it will be a thoroughly dishonest act. Redistribution should take place every ten years and is now due. Moreover, Premier Drury promised to enact a redistribution measure this year.

As it is, one city constituency, with a population of 110,000 has only one member, while another constituency, rural in its character, has a member for a population of 8,000. There are many other glaring examples of inequality.

The Progressive party leaders made loud professions of high principles in politics. Their holier-than-thou attitude toward the two old parties was notorious and has since become somewhat absurd in the light of events. If Drury refuses to enact a redistribution measure, he will be guilty of cruder political trickery than either of the old parties ever knew.

WHEN KNIGHTHOOD WAS IN FLOWER

We are strongly inclined to believe that in the Middle Ages when the days were cold the knights who were bold had a rather shivery time while wearing their steel clothes.

"I appointed a lady lawyer a referee to-day." "How did she take to it, Judge?" "Asked me if she could invite some other ladies to help her preside."

LOCAL INTERMEDIATES CONTINUE WINNING STREAK DEFEAT BROCKVILLE 8-3

Large Crowd of Fans Turn Out to Opening Game of the Season Here—Locals Were Always in Front and Won Handily by Superior Work in all Branches of the Game—Goaler Crooks Injured

A good sized crowd turned out last night at the Arena to the Belleville-Brockville intermediate game, which ice was in perfect condition. The game was started on time and although the boys are not yet playing the championship brand of hockey, they defeated the visitors 8-3. The game slowed down at the end of the first period but revived in the second and last periods. Brockville were without their regular defence as they are still suffering from the shake up the Frontenacs gave them. The game was clean, only two penalties were handed out, one to each team. It was an unlucky night for the locals. Dunner Holloway got a nasty knock which nearly put him off. Weir was forced to quit and Crooks had his lips badly split. All the locals showed better form than usual. Hagerman, Prichette and the Holloways showed extra speed and proficiency of stick handling and Crooks put up a good game in the nets. Harry Fenn the spare goal minder showed the fans he's more than the average goal tender and played an excellent game.

Murray, O'Neil and Higgins starred for the visitors.

The first period opened with Belleville bombing the play into Brockville's end, making shots on Sharpe who was kept busy for the first five minutes. Brockville came to and for a while Crooks was bombarded but the rubber kept into the rubber well into the visitors end. The shooting on both sides was wild and from outside the defence. Hagerman, Weir and Goyer rushed and "Soup" scored on a pass from Weir. George tripped Bouncer Holloway and was penalized. Prichette replaced Hagerman, Weir and Prichette rushed and Bunny bidged the nets for the second tally in a pass from Weir. Hagerman and Swayze replaced Goyer and Prichette. The game began to slow down as the Brockville boys were unable to get away from their own nets. Hagerman, Goyer and Swayze rushed and "Stan" scored on a pass from Swayze, closing the period 3-0.

The second period showed sign of speed at the start. Brockville played a faster game, Le Rue, and O'Neil keeping the boys busy. Bouncer, Weir and "Soup" McElwaney stared some brilliant rushes but all died at the nets. Hagerman batted in the puck with his stick but was penalized. The visitors began to use combination but what little went past the Holloway defence was easily handled by Crooks. Prichette and Goyer replaced Hagerman and Swayze. Crooks stopped a nasty shot from Le Rue. Weir shook struck him in the mouth splitting his both lips and loosening his teeth. He was unable to carry on and both teams had a rest while Harry Fenn donned the pads. Both teams speeded up on their return and Fenn was bombarded from long range and showed fine form. Weir got a bad crash on the ice which stowed him down for a few minutes. Fenn was too slow in clearing a long shot and Brockville bulged the nets for their first tally.

Prechette retaliated by scoring from the face off, the neatest play of the evening. "Toots" Holloway rushed from defence, scoring off a rebound from a long shot. Period ended 6-1.

The third period opened with more speed. Prichette and Goyer and Weir kept the visitors busy. McNeil bulged the local nets but was out of side. Goyer scored off a pass from Weir making the tally 8-1. Higgins rushed and scored turning the count to 8-2. Hagerman and Swayze came back. Belleville began to work for another and the play again centered round the visitors end. Bouncer was hit and carried off but returned to finish the game. Hagerman swelled the nets for Belleville's seventh tally on a pass from Weir. Fenn stayed some good landing all through the period. Goyer scored on pass from "Toots" Holloway making the count 8-3. Weir was hit in the head and was rushed by Hagerman. Just at the close of the game Fenn lost his stick in a mix up and gave the crowd a good laugh at his desperate efforts to keep the Brocker from scoring with his hands.

The line-up of the teams:—

Brockville—Goal, Sharpe; defence, Laroque and Murray; centre, Higgins; wings McNeil and O'Neil; subs, Charleton and George; sub goaler McLean.

Belleville—Goal, Crooks; defence A. Holway and B. Holway; centre, S. Hagerman; wings, Weir and Swayze; subs, Prechette and Goyer; sub. goal, H. Fenn.

Referee—H. Farlow.

THIS MAN LIKES HIS MEAT RAW

Richtor Brings Bush Manners to Toronto Chophouse

Toronto, Jan. 00.—Jacques Richter has left the lumber camp in Northern Ontario and has returned to Toronto. He did this, he says, to prove to Skeptics that he really is the boy he claims to be, a native of the Great Silver Lake district, absolutely ignorant of civilized life.

Yesterday he met several of Canada's leading authorities and explorers. He told them the story of how he had been held up while taking a winter's trapping of fox to a settlement, how he had his dog team and his furs stolen, how he had made his way to the railroad and how he had finally "hiked" to Toronto in search of the thieves. They questioned him very thoroughly and then said that they believed he was a genuine product of some part of Northern Canada.

Within ten minutes of his arrival in Toronto the boy threatened to "beat up" the waiter who put ice in his water in both cases the men took one look at him and departed for other spheres.

Richter's last meal was served before more were evident when he had a meal in the civilized atmosphere of a cafe. He went into it and ordered a "several, red meat; none of this cooked stuff you get down here. I like it raw."

Richter's parents are on the way to Edmonton for identification.

MARKET COMMENTS TO-DAY

Jenks, Gwynne & Co.: Transactions were again very largely for professional account, buying of excellent character is reported on the declines and it is believed that with a favorable turn in European developments the stock market is in a position to move substantially forward.

Hornblower & Weeks, New York wired O'Brien & Williams: We would not buy stocks on show of strength this week, but would use rallies for purposes of profit-taking or selling of long stocks.

Miller & Co.: Pending a clearer outlook, the sure course is to buy liberally, on declines, issues that have had comparatively little advance, and to take moderate profits on rallies.

Pool & Flagg: The market does not seem to be at all disturbed over the European situation, but, on the other hand, it is hardly warranted by new features while conditions over there are so uncertain.

NO CANADIAN TEAM FOR OLYMPIC HOCKEY

Winnipeg, Jan. 11.—Canada will not be represented in the Olympic hockey tournament in Switzerland next January to defend the honors won by the Falcons, of Winnipeg, according to Secretary Fred Marples, of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association.

Mr. Marples states that he has received word that the Olympic committee has refused to change the date of the tournament to later on in the year, when Canada would have a representative team to send, and, under the circumstances, does not consider the Canadian hockey body will send representatives.

The subject will be discussed by the association during the Allan Cup finals here next Spring.

COAL CONDITIONS NOT IMPROVING

Will Likely be no Result in Embargo Clause for Exports to Canada

(Canadian Press.)

Washington, Jan. 11.—The coal situation in the United States is "not the language of a well known French physician now in America, does not get better and better every day." On the contrary, the conditions with respect to coal are the subject of constant complaint and are likely to remain so through the winter. Producering prices along with shortage of supply and in some cases poor quality of fuel, unite to make consumers much dissatisfied. Recent conferences of miners and operators in the bituminous field, intended to obviate another strike next summer, have arrived at no settlement and while this does not mean necessarily that there will be another strike, it at least opens up that possibility.

The patience of the public over the situation may be severely tried this summer and again this winter. Another strike would cause a wave of demand for drastic action.

Officials are considering to keep up a keen interest in the forthcoming report of the coal commission which is investigating the coal trade. It is expected to recommend legislation. It is not expected that a majority of the commission, which is composed of men favor government ownership of the mines but it is expected to favor strict regulation. Nothing less than that would satisfy public feeling. In fact unless the commission does recommend strict regulations, Congress is likely to take the initiative in framing such a bill to get legislation of a regulatory character regardless of the commission.

Undoubtedly, when a coal legislation comes up, it will be considered in the new Congress, government ownership and various plans of nationalization will be presented. Sentiment for government ownership of the mines is growing but a bill probably could not pass either house without a trial of government regulation. The national association research committee of the United Mine Workers of America has worked out a tentative plan for nationalization. It is not government ownership in the sense usually understood, although a form of it. The government would take over the mines and they would be operated by a joint commission, representing the miners, technical and administrative heads of the consumers.

The unsatisfactory conditions in respect of coal here are reflected in Canada. Undoubtedly, throughout the winter, Canada will find the supply of hard coal from this country and will allow the normal supply. Clamor for an embargo in some quarters, however, is not likely to result in anything.

HIGH SCHOOL TEAM DEFEATED NAPANEE IN FAST GAME

SCORE 6–1

Leuty's Boys Improving—Game Was Clean—Plenty of Excitement—Local Team Played Consistent Hockey—Return Game To-morrow Night

Outplaying their opponents in every stage of the game the Belleville High School won from Napanee Collegiate Institute in an interscholastic league game in the latter town last evening.

The home team were weakened considerably from last year by the loss of two or three players, and have not been able to secure many practices this season. The winners were minus the services of Ritchie Arnott, star forward last year, Townsend, and Ray Arnott alternated at centre.

The game was a good exhibition and they played fast hockey for collegiate boys. The Napanee boys were returned winners in their home game last season and will have a hard time to avenge this defeat. They succeeded with a vengeance, and when the smoke of battle had cleared away, Napanee were trailing in a six-to-one score.

The visitors excelled in practically every department and should go a long way in the interscholastic race. Leuty's clever coaching of the locators' eladel three-quarters of the time and whenever the Napanee boys did chance to get away, they were invariably lost the puck or failed to pass at the opportune moment. Napanee's lone counter was made by Ray Arnott, dazzled their opponents by their accurate passing and wicked shooting. Mr. Leuty's boys were fast on the back check like fiends. The defence worked like a charm and outwitted the N.C.I. forwards on many occasions. Only three penalties were dealt out and the trio went to Belleville players. Hersey was run into some effect-only and reflected no discredit on their playing.

To pick a star on either team would be a practical impossibility. Every boy worked hard and deserves a great deal of credit. "Red" Townsend played a whale of a game on the H.H.S. forward line. This boy is a very hard worker and is very unselfish in his medic. He is a good back-checker, and plays the rail very nicely. He has improved considerably since last year.

Bukkard, a new-comer to H.H.S. started at right wing, and made a good beginning by scoring one goal. He manages to keep his shot close to the top of the net, and keeps his man in check at all times. Stevens worked with Hurley on defence and turned in a good game. He bulled the twice and three-quarters. His experience with Belleville Juniors has been a great asset to him. Ray Arnott played at left wing, and was rewarded by scoring one goal. His recent illness has not hampered his playing in the least. Ray is a fast boy on his skates and fairly fielded to tally. His fast rushing kept Napanee goalie on edge. Christy, regular left winger, played a good game and had it all over his check. He is tricky and possesses a fine shot. He is a fast boy and failed to see some extent but is improving rapidly. Curry was not kept very busy, but made some fine saves. Cowle and Perry looked the best of the Napanee squad. The latter scored their lone goal. Cowle has just started in goal, and Hudeins, who replaced him, were bombarded with shots from all angles.

Belleville led in every stanza. First period, 3-0; second period, 3-0; third period, 0-1.

Belleville were accompanied by a lively bunch of rooters who made their presence felt. Yells. Among them were J. F. Day, Irs Simmons, Nick Carter and others. Stan. Yarne aided Mr. Leuty in handling the team. He will referee Friday night's game. Mr. Lowe of Napanee handled the puff. A large crowd was present and enjoyed a good game.

Belleville—Goal, Mark Marsh, Belleville; Mr. Gross, Napanee.

The boys expect a goal turn out of supporters tomorrow night for the first home game with Deseronto at the arena here.

Napanee—Goal, W. Daly; left def., W. Barrett; right def., C. Cowle; centre, H. Parry; right wing, Wheeler; left wing, J. Stewart (captain); subs, G. Daly, Gleason, Hudgins.

POPULAR ATHLETE PASSES AWAY

Charles Carew of Lindsay Expires After a Brief Illness

The sporting fraternity of this district were shocked on Thursday when the sad news was received that Charles Carew of Lindsay, son of Mr. Jacob Carew, ex-M.P.P., had answered the final summons. No more popular athlete ever stepped on a ball field. He was a gentleman on and off the field and no player accepted defeat more gracefully than Charlie. His death means a sad loss to sporting circles and particularly to the Central Ontario League and the Lindsay Club.

On Sunday morning deceased complained of feeling unwell, but attended service at St. Andrew's Church and also called at Dr. McAlpine's office. The doctor advised him not to go home, but the deceased replied that he felt well enough to continue his walk. The doctor saw him again on Sunday. He had been seized with haemophilia, or attacks of bleeding, which never ceased. Sunday morning his condition assumed a serious phase and a call was sent to Dr. Olie, specialist, of Toronto. He replied by wire weaker and passed away at 1.00 on Tuesday.

YOUTH IN THE PRISONS

More Than Half of Penitentiary Inmates Are Under 30

Ottawa, Jan. 9.—That if the Government would give them work to do the penitentiaries of Canada would pay for themselves, was one of the assertions of Brigadier-General W. St. Pierre Hughes, superintendent of penitentiaries under the Department of Justice, in an address to the members of the Rotary Club here yesterday. Gen. Hughes said that ever since 1916 an annual appeal has been made to the Government to give the penitentiaries work, but without success.

The speaker gave some striking examples of the work of reformation being conducted in the penitentiaries of the Dominion, and particularly among young men. He declared that the average young prisoner was the victim of a more defiant type; defiant of law and order, of institutional regulations, and of the world generally. Most of them out well educated and qualified to take their places in the world.

There are now in the penitentiaries of Canada a total of nearly 2,800 in the penitentiaries, 1,613 men were under 30 years of age. Of these, 1,000 were under 20 years old. General Hughes paid very high tribute to the ever-ready assistance of the Salvation Army and workers throughout Canada, and to the work being done by the members of the Winnipeg Rotary Club in reclaiming men and helping them to obtain and retain a foothold.

ATHEISTIC BOIL

A young man engaged board and lodging in a private family who were extremely devout. Before each meal a long grace was said. To their dismay and horror the new boarder said but upright while the others at the table reverently bowed their heads. When the second day passed and the young man evinced no disposition to unbend, the good lady of the house could endure the situation no longer.

"Atheism!" asked she sharply.

"No, landlady," he calmly responded the new boarder; "boil."

SITUATION IN WALL STREET

Investment of financial markets regarding the European situation remained as inscrutable today as did the immediate purposes of the French and German Governments. Even foreign exchange began to hesitate in its verdict. During the earlier hours of the day, sterling rose rapidly 1¼ cents, actually coming within ¾ of the highest rate reached since the week in which it went to $4.80. Simultaneously francs advanced, cancelling nearly all the decline of yesterday. While this was going on, prices advanced on the Stock Exchange, half a dozen stocks moving up a point or more.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

Wheat tended upward in price today with buyers outnumbering sellers and with some disposition shown to regard as a bullish factor the change of war in Europe.

Although because of probable financial and industrial disturbance the prospective crisis has been shorn of late been constructed in the main as a decreasing influence in the wheat market, the additional view was to some extent reasserted today, namely, that war-like developments are not necessarily hostilities in effect on grain Unlooked-for selling was quickly appeared after the start had opened, and then a buying spurge caused that was partly due to strength of sterling exchange, but in principal part was also ascribed more or less to war talk. Drought conditions southwest were a further incentive to buy wheat.

Estimates from a leading expert that the world's crop of wheat and rye, wheat at the end of the season would total as much as 178,000,000 bushels for second consecutive year, in excess after midday, and, so, too, did reports of the failure of a grain firm initially. Nevertheless, sales found difficulty in repurchasing, and the market took a new upturn in the final dealings, with strong interests apparently operating on the bull side.

IMPORTANCE OF MINING

Canada is year by year attracting to a greater extent the attention of the world as a mining country, said Sir Edmund Walker, in his presidential address before the annual meeting of shareholders of the Canadian Bank of Commerce. The gold production of Ontario alone is now greater than that of California, and as the period of the prices for metals has now passed, an increase in both production and profits may now be shownlooked for. He pointed out that the products of mining show more readily than almost any others that the ultimate source of all real prosperity depends on the cost of transporting it to a market, and said that the progress and betterment of one of the great difficulties in the way of development of the coal industry in Canada. Last year there was an open of general recovery on this continent, especially in view of the scanty happy powers of Europe and the low prices for farm products. The importance to Canada of a solution of problems of the high indebtedness of the United nations and the stabilizing of the German mark was strongly emphasized by Sir Edmund, who later in his address referred to the desirability of considering the effect of the operation of the Treaty of Versailles, whereby settlement to German credit-tors was now made with the German Government instead of with the credit or direct.

DEMAND OF INSULIN NOW EXCEEDS SUPPLY

Steps Being Taken to Prevent Commercialization of Diabetes Remedy

The committee of the University of Toronto which has been dispensing the insuling produced under the auspices of the university, said today that while from 40 to 50 letters a day were received from various parts of the world inquiring how insulin could be obtained, the laboratory with the limited financial means at its disposal could not produce more than enough at present for 30 patients per day. This recently discovered chemical for the treatment of diabetes is being manufactured by the Connaught Laboratory of Toronto, which is licensed by the university committee to produce it. Dr. G. G. Banting, the discoverer, has turned over to the local university the results of his discovery. Prof. A. S. Goodfellow, chairman of the university committee on insulin, said today it was better for governments or public institutions to work under governments, to be responsible; so that it would not be simply commercialized and the maximum of good not given to the human race.

With this object in view correspondence was carried on in connection with the Pasteur Institute in France, with the hope that that notable scientific body would take the medicine thoroughly and insulin may be obtained in France. In England, the British Medical Research Committee, which has labelled was under the government there, was the agency with which the university committee in Toronto hoped to co-operate for the British Isles.

ENDORSED BY THE ROTARIANS

Dr. Haywood's Sensational Address on Vice Unanimously Approved

Rotarian A. K. Haywood of Montreal was the recipient of congratulations from members of the Rotary Club at their weekly luncheon of Montreal Rotary yesterday, for his address on "Commercialized Vice," delivered on Monday before the Canadian Club.

President F. G. Webber also commented upon the fact that Rotarian Haywood had thereby rendered the city and asked if the members desired to show by a standing vote their endorsation of Rotarian Haywood's statement. Thereupon the entire club stood up and unanimously expressed approval.

William J. Cairns, district governor, had an official visit to the club yesterday, and addressed the members. Having outlined the great progress the Rotary movement had made since its inception by Paul Harris in Chicago some eighteen years ago, the speaker referred to the great influence the spirit of Rotary must play in the direction of the world. Many men, he said, walked along the road of life with their eyes fixed on the ground in the pursuit of money, passing friendships and the beauty of the world on the way, and when they came to the end of the road they had no real happiness, no friends—nothing but old age and a pile of junk. Rotarians were meant to live and preach a life of service.

BRITISH SHIPPING COMPANIES SEEK SAFETY DEVICES

Luminous Paint to Be Used For Safety and as an Emergency

London, Jan. 9.—Since the sinking of the steamship Egypt last May, with the loss of over 100 lives, British shipping companies have been endeavoring to work out a system which would prevent confusion in the event of passengers having to take to the boats and British lines are keenly interested in the experiments in this direction made by the French Messageries Maritimes Company.

As oil lamps do not give enough light during the confusion occasioned by a shipwreck, and as electric light is apt to go out when the dynamos are flooded, it is planned to paint all safety arrangements with luminous paint of a new type which will resist climate and weather.

The latest regulations for safety at sea which are generally followed by the leading companies, provide that a passenger liner should have an emergency electric lighting set on the upper deck, where the water cannot get at it until the ship actually goes down.

GAS IN THE STOMACH IS DANGEROUS

Tecammends Daily Use of Magnesia To Overcome Troubls Caused by Fermenting Food and Acid Indigestion

Gas and wind in the stomach accompanied by that full, bloated feeling after eating are almost certain evidence of the presence of excessive hydrochloric acid in the stomach, creating the so-called "acid indigestion."

Acid stomachs are dangerous because too much acid irritates the delicate lining of the stomach, often leading to gastritis accompanied by serious stomach ulcers. Food fermented and sours, creating the distressing gas which distends the stomach and hampers the normal functions of the vital internal organs, often affecting the heart.

It is the worst of folly to neglect such a serious condition or to treat it with ordinary digestive aids which have no neutralizing effect on the stomach acids. Instead get from any druggist a few ounces of Bisurated Magnesia and take a teaspoonful in a quarter glass of water right after eating. This will drive the gas, wind and bloat right out of the body, neutralize the stomach, neutralize the excess acid and prevent its formation and there is no soreness or pain. Bisurated Magnesia (in powder or tablet form—never liquid or milk) is harmless to the stomach, inexpensive to take and the best form of magnesia for stomach purposes. It is used by thousands of people who enjoy their meals with no more fear of indigestion.

THE MILL-STREAM.

(Canon Scott, Quebec)

Clear, down the mountain 'neath the arching green,
And o'er mossed boulders dappled by the sun,
With many a leap, the laughing water run.

They tumble fearless down each dark ravine,
And roam through saves where day has never been;
Until, at last, life open pool is won,
Where, by their prisoned strength, man's work is done.

In that old mill which branching cedars screen,
Here, all day long, the mossy logs upgrind
Against the biting saws are load with shrieks.

Here, too, at night, are stars and mystery,
And nature sleeping, and all round at dawn,
The rugged utterance of mountain peaks
Against the infinite silence of the sky.

MOTOR LICENSES ARE CHEAPER

Cost Less in Canada Than in England

That there is a wide margin between the cost of motor licenses here and in the Old Country. Although the price of a license for a Ford coupe has gone up to $14, it is still much below what the license costs in England.

A Ford car license there costs £33, the same car as costs $14 here, while a large six Studebaker costs no less than £38, that is why they are building very small, low-power engines over there now.

Motorists have until Jan. 31 to take out the new licenses and it would appear that the Government is not disposed to make time extensions in the issuance of the markers this year.

RAILWAY MEN WITH THORNTON

Will Work With C.N.R President For Public Ownership

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Ottawa, Jan. 10.—"The eyes of the world are upon us. Government ownership is on trial and as we as an organization have advocated and supported government ownership and operation of public utilities, we are in duty bound to lend every assistance possible to make government ownership a success." This appeal was issued yesterday to employees of the Canadian National and Grand Trunk railways by A. R. Mosher, grand president of the Canadian Brotherhood o. Railroad Employees.

The conditions of the officials of the brotherhood in Sir Henry Thornton, recently appointed president o. the National railway lines, was expressed by Mr. Mosher, when he declared that "the conclusion I have arrived at is that in the new president we have a gentleman with whom we can and will most heartily co-operate in making the Canadian National railway a success from every viewpoint."

In the furtherance of the co-oper ative effort Mr. Mosher calls upon the employees to put the greatest possible measure of efficiency into their work, to avoid waste of every description, and declares that such co-operation will not only result greatly in the success of the railways, "but will pave the way to better conditions for the men themselves. Suggestions from the employees which will effect economies and will add to the efficiency of the National lines, are invited by the brotherhood.

ERADICATION OF LEPROSY IS NEAR

New Derivative in Oil Successfully Combats This Terrible Scourge

New York, Jan. 10.—Hope for the eradication of the dreaded leprosy was expressed at the meeting yesterday of the American Mission to Lepers, at number 156 Fifth Avenue, due to the success of a new treatment involving the use of ethyl ester, a product of chaulmoogra oil, and an increasing interest everywhere in the stamping out of disease, William Jay Schieffelin, president, Dr. R. M. Wilson, of Kores, and Dr. Justin E. Abbott, who has studied leprosy in India, joined in expressing confidence that the evil might be brought under control.

Dr. Wilson described how he had discharged ten patients in Korea last March apparently cured of leprosy so far as a medical examination could ascertain. He said that the Japanese Government was beginning to appreciate the possibilities of relding Korea of its 20,000 lepers, and extending the work to its own country, where at present only one in forty who are afflicted is cared for in hospitals. The only cure the Orientals were known, he said, is the traditional one of eating human flesh to appease the gods for inflicting their curse upon them in the form of leprosy.

The ethyl ester derivative of chaulmoogra oil, discovered a few years ago by Professor A. L. Dean, a chemist of the University of Hawaii, is manufactured by distilling the fatty acids of the oil and adding camphor and resorcin. It is given to the patients hypodermically. At the present time 4,000 patients in the Philippines are doing well under the new treatment, according to Mr. Schieffelin's report, which says that in other hospitals in the Far East similar results are obtained.

COUE'S CURE SOLVES UNEMPLOYMENT

Victoria, B. C., Jan. 9.—Three of twelve unemployed men who subjected themselves to experimentation with psycho-analysis, auto-suggesting and other forms of psychology at the hands of Professor R. S. Baker, were enabled to get jobs, it is announced.

The experiments on the twelve idle men were carried out in the interests of science and to determine if the unemployment problem here might be ended. The mentality of the men was not impaired by the treatments, but considerably sharpened, according to Dr. Baker, and they gained confidence in themselves.

NO ONE HELD RESPONSIBLE FOR ACCIDENT

Jury Find Dr. Gray Met His Death Unavoidably

HIGHWAY FATALITY

Recommend Ditches Be Filled in

Oakville, Jan. 9.—Deliberating one hour and a half a jury last night returned the following verdict, on the death of Dr. J. W. Gray, Hamilton dentist killed in a motor accident near here on the Highway on November 25, that, when the cars of E. Hawkins, of Hamilton; H. C. Cox, of Toronto, and R. H. Tedhope met in collision:

"That James W. Grey, of Hamilton, came to his death on Saturday, the fifth of November, 1922, as a result of a collision at one Herb Hawkins' automobile, in which the deceased was a passenger, with an automobile belonging to H. C. Cox, and driven by William Richards, on the Toronto and Hamilton Highway, at a point about four miles east of Oakville at about 12.30 in the afternoon, the Hawkins' car having skidded indirectly across the pavement in front of the Cox car, coming from the south, as a result of Hawkins having applied his brakes to resist rear-end collision with a truck in front of him.

"We find further, that no blame can be placed on the driver of either the Hawkins car or the Cox car, owing to the slippery and treacherous condition of the pavement at the time of the accident."

"We are of the opinion that the accident might not have happened had the ditches on either side of the pavement been filled in, and we would recommend that this should be done."

Coroner Dr. Read expressed pride in the retirement of the jury for the verdict that a recommendation might be made to abolish speed limits and judge the responsibility of an accident on its merits.

CANADIAN CONFERENCE

Needs of Provinces to be Considered at Ottawa To-day

Ottawa, Jan. 10.—Immigration needs of the several provinces of the Dominion will be discussed at a conference which opens here today. The idea of Hon. Charles Stewart, the Minister of Immigration, is that the Dominion authorities should know what number approximately and what class or classes of immigrants each province will be able to absorb. The maritime provinces, Quebec, Manitoba and Alberta, are expected to be represented when the conference opens. Hon. Manning Doherty, Minister of Agriculture of Ontario, is looked for on Thursday. Premier Oliver, of British Columbia, will not be here until after the conference is over, but will discuss the subject of immigration when he comes to the capital to put some British Columbia questions before the Dominion Government, the railway commission. Saskatchewan, too, it is said, may not be represented at the conference, but pressing will be one in a long series in which various interested parties have shared. While the immigration has been in progress during the summer and autumn, immigration into the Dominion has not been increased, on the contrary, the number of new settlers who entered Canada during the present year was some 5 per cent less than in 1921. Furthermore, attention has been drawn to a considerable movement of people out of the country, from the western provinces as well as from the east. United States immigration restrictions have in some extent tended to increase the movement from Canada to the republic to the south. These restrictions are alleged to keep up wages in the United States and are not applicable against Canadians. However, the situation is such that it is hoped that conferences on the problem will before long be decided by action on the part of the Dominion Government.

DEMOCRATIC IN GERMANY

Schoolmaster to Marry German Princess

Bartenstein, Wurttemberg, Jan. 9.—One of the signs of Germany's new democracy is the engagement of Herr Wachendorfer, the Bartenstein school teacher, to Princess Maria Rosa zu Hohenlohe-Bartenstein.

The bridegroom-to-be is 29 years of age. Her mother, an Imperial princess and archduchess of Austria and Tuscany, accepted the situation only after long parleying for the purpose of obtaining the consent of the grandmother, the Grand-Duchess of Tuscany.

MANY DESTITUTE IN ARMENIA

New York, Jan. 10.—The vast proportions of the exodus of Christians from the lands now dominated by the Turkish National Government are becoming daily more evident to American relief workers engaged in the task of succoring the hapless army of homeless, hungry, half clothed and generally destitute people which has been rushing blindly for safety since the Turk gave them "permission" to leave Turkey.

It is difficult to arrive even at an accurate estimate of the total number of persons involved in the migration, owing to the frantic haste of the refugees, the suddenness of their movement, and the chaotic conditions resulting from inability to provide them with transportation and the necessities of life during their flight for shelter anywhere except on Turkish soil. The latest estimates by relief workers place the total number involved at 1,500,000. Nearly 1,000,000 of these are believed already to have reached safety in Greece, and another 1,500,000 are supposed to be trying to get out of Turkey before the time limit set by the Turkish Government.

A great burden has been thrown upon the Greek Government, relief workers here declare, and the American relief agencies, by the movement of these hordes of ex-citizen people, and the majority of whom are Greeks and Armenians.

The cost of providing food, clothing, shelter, medicines, nursing, and transportation for these multitudes is not yet known. Even the relief officials can only guess at it, for much depends upon the number yet to come out of Turkey. One estimate has placed the cost at $15,000,000.

One of the most extraordinary phases of the flight is that the millions of refugees are composed only of women, children and aged men, a huge army without able-bodied men, for men of military age, between 18 and 45 years, were not included within the terms of the Turkish "permission" to go. Relief workers in the field say this fact has intensified the helplessness of the fugitives, and enormously increases the task of caring for them. In addition thousands of the women and children are reported to have suffered so severely from the exposures attendant upon their flight, as to require medical attention far beyond the slender resources available for that purpose.

American workers and observers have characterized the scenes enacted along the shores of the eastern Mediterranean as "a great human tragedy." "The situation is so stupendous that 1,000,000 Good Samaritans are needed," cabled one competent American woman relief worker who had exceptional opportunities to observe some of the most startling phases of the movement.

The Near East's share of the burden of bringing aid to these distressed peoples has fallen upon the shoulders of an American relief agency, the Near East Relief Organization, organized by a little army of perhaps 200 workers in the Near East caring for more than 100,000 Christian orphans throughout the Levant. They were scattered from Azerbaijan through Turkey into Syria, the Caucasus, Persia, Constantinople and Thrace. It was the only relief body on the spot in force sufficient to be of really important service.

Near East warehouses in Constantinople were soon emptied of their supplies of food and clothing, for the rescue of orphans, but diverted to the new emergency. Then ensued efforts to get food, fuel, clothes, medicines and medical service. Two ships of the American Relief Administration hurried to Odessa with cargoes of flour, cocoa, milk, and other necessities were diverted to Greece. The publisher of a New York periodical contributed $50,000 and gave it to the relief agency to pay for the cargo of one of these vessels. Funds were also loaned and found available for quick delivery as it was bought and rushed to the refugee centers in Greece, to ports of the Thrace on the Agean sea, to Greek islands in the Aegean where hundreds of thousands had found temporary asylum, and to the ports of Anatolia and Syria, to Marsina, Beirut and other centers where the refugees were concentrating.

At a moment when the need was most urgent, Greece has landed at Constantinople 150 tons of flour from Australia, the first gift of an Australia committee which proposed monthly shipments of food. Word came that thirty committees to aid in Near East relief work had been organized in Japan, Korea, China, the Philippines, Australia, and New Zealand.

Meanwhile the refugees were moving out of the interior of Anatolia. Asia Minor, in large numbers. They massed at hostile points and in the ports. In almost none of these places was food effective aid be given to them except from American or other foreign sources.

Efforts were made to send ships to Asia Minor, where it would be, it is contended, continually at the mercy of the Bolsheviki.

Confirmation of the report that Greek troops are being concentrated in Western Thrace has been received in London, but the move is not regarded as of great importance. The Greek Government has assured the Allies that the step was taken merely as a precautionary measure with a view to the possible complete breakdown of the Lausanne conference. In that case the Greeks wish to be prepared against any possible Turkish aggression.

CANADIAN RUM SCHOONER IS WRECKED

Boy is Sole Survivor of Three-Man Crew—Whiskey Washed Ashore

Scituate, Mass., Jan. 9.—While eager watchers on the beach near Marshfield today salvaged bottles and cases of whiskey washed ashore from the wrecked Canadian auxiliary schooner Cascarco, Number 7, of St. John, N. B., the authorities sought to trace a report that two of the vessel's three-man crew were drowned when the sloop was cast upon the shoals at Third Cliff early Sunday morning. It was said tonight that 60 cases of liquor had been salvaged.

The identity of the little vessel did not become known until late today when it was recognized as a former unit of the Canadian Scottish company's fleet. The Cascarco, Number 7, of 15 tons, was sold about a year ago to James Savatt, of Beaver Harbor, N.B. She was last reported at Boston on November 15, under repairs with Lovatt as skipper of her two-man crew.

According to reports along the shore a boy of 19 was the sole survivor from the wreck. His name was given as Joseph Hopkins, a native of New Brunswick.

At 5 o'clock Sunday morning Hopkins is reported as telling, the sloop grounded on a bar and anchor was put overside. Hopkins says he and the gale was free and while he was in the rigging the other two members of the crew, a father and son, were washed overboard and drowned. Returning to the deck Hopkins cut the anchor cable and the vessel was thrown up high and dry on the beach. The survivor was not to be found tonight and was said to have left for his home. It was said that the name of the drowned men was "Lesay."

CHIMES OF POTSDAM DID NOT RING IN VAIN

Organist Applies for Increase in Wages

Potsdam, Jan. 8.—"Always be honest and upright." So runs a familiar old German song, the music of which chimes regularly from the lofty tower of the famous Garrison church of Potsdam. Away down below, in the vaults of the edifice, rest the bodies of Frederick the Great and his father Frederick William I.

The organist who plays these chimes was forced recently by hard times to apply for an increase in wages. When his application came before the city council it said, with one position from the Communist sidemen because of their political objections to the selections played on the bells. Not only, they maintained, was "Always Be Honest and Upright" being chimed forth, but the organist even went so far as to play "Deutschland Uber Alles" on national holidays. The bourgeois representatives overruled these objections in favor of the organist, expressing themselves ready to live up to th "honest and upright" sentiment in their dealing with

TAKES HIS TIME ABOUT CALLING THEM TOGETHER

Bonar Law Has So Far Shown no Inclination to Hold Cabinet Meeting

Exemplifying Tranquility

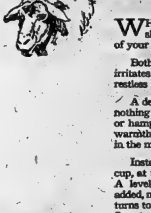
Possibly Waiting for the French to Advance

London, Jan. 8.—In the face of one of the most serious European situations since the capitulation of Germany, the British government is exemplifying that tranquility for which Mr. Bonar Law declared upon his advent to the premiership. Although it is now three days since the Prime Minister returned from the unsuccessful conference of premiers in Paris, he has made no move to call to gether his Cabinet Ministers to consider either the results of the Paris meeting or the unemployment situation, which came to the fore again yesterday with the great demonstration staged by the Labor party and the trades unions.

Are Pessimistic Over Situation

Well informed quarters in London are pessimistic regarding the Turkish attitude, but it is hoped the moderate leaders will prevail, and that the country will re-establish peaceful relations with Western Europe instead of choosing isolation in Asia Minor, where it would be, it is contended, continually at the mercy of the Bolsheviki.

Confirmation of the report that Greek troops are being concentrated in Western Thrace has been received in London, but the move is not regarded as of great importance. The Greek Government has assured the Allies that the step was taken merely as a precautionary measure with a view to the possible complete breakdown of the Lausanne conference. In that case the Greeks wish to be prepared against any possible Turkish aggression.



TORONTO JUDGE SAYS MARRIAGE MADE TOO EASY

Should be Scientific Regulations Covering Physical and Mental Tests

"It's the easiest thing in the world to get married, but there are often awful consequences," said Judge Mott yesterday when addressing a meeting of the Samaritan Club at the Gage Institute. Many people, he declared, enter the marriage relationship with no more deliberation than they give to the buying of a garment, and the marriage contract, he thought should be placed on a more stringent and scientific basis. There must be physical and mental tests if future generations are to be protected. Too many men, the speaker stated, take their marriage vows lightly. Through the Toronto courts $13,000 had been collected during the past year from men who walked away and left their wives and children to shift for themselves.

There was never a time in the world's history, the Judge declared, when the child was so much a subject of study as it is at present. The two great instincts in children are the ego instinct and the sex instinct—the latter being the most beautiful, and also the most dangerous. Men and women specially trained to impart the great facts of life were needed in every public school, and no youthful mind had ever been poisoned by the truth, the speaker averred.

Something to think about

WHEN lying awake at night, stop "counting sheep" and think what is probably the cause of your sleeplessness.

Both tea and coffee contain a drug element that irritates the sensitive nervous system, often causing restless nights, followed by drowsy, irritable days.

A delicious, hot cup of Instant Postum contains nothing that can disturb you or prevent sleep at night, or hamper your days. But it does supply all the warmth, comfort and satisfaction that can be desired in the mealtime beverage.

Instant Postum is made "quick as a wink," in the cup, at the table—no boiling, no waiting, no waste. A level teaspoonful to a cup, with boiling water added, makes a fragrant, zeal-brown beverage, which turns to a rich, golden-brown when cream is added. Sweeten to taste, and the fine, full-bodied flavor will be pleasing, satisfying and delightful.

JAPAN TO URGE RACE EQUALITY

Tokio, Jan. 10.—Japan will have her last opportunity of introducing the question of racial equality next year when her representatives meet with delegates of the United States to negotiate for renewal of the commercial treaty between the two countries which expires at that time.

That is the contention Kotaro Mochinshi, member of the Japanese House of Representatives, who has been a leader in Japan's agitation for equal citizenship rights in foreign lands.

He declares Japanese diplomats made a great mistake in committing on the disarmament question at the Washington Conference rather than at the racial equality.

SEAMEN FOUGHT FOR LIFE IN FOUR FEET OF WATER

Two of Freighter's Crew Killed in Gales—19 Injured

STEAMER BATTERED

New York, Jan. 10.—How 21 petty officers, sailors and firemen fought for their lives for twenty minutes in darkness in four feet of water, while an iron drum with 180 fathoms of steel cable, weighing more than a ton, flashed front side to side of the ship, killing two men and injuring 19 others, was told today when the Cunard freighter Valacia arrived at pier 54, North River, with ventilators bent and twisted and her forward headwater and pilothouse torn and battered by the fury of the sea. Locking at the doors created below decks, it seemed marvellous that any of the 38, who were in their quarters at the time, escaped.

Captain Michael Doyle, master of the ship, said that he had encountered strong west and northwesterly gale, with high head seas, the whole voyage, from the time the Valacia left London on December 27 until she reached Sandy Hook yesterday morning. "At 6 p.m. on December 30 there was a northwesterly gale blowing at hurricane force and what the captain described as a mountainous sea running.

"The first dog watch had just been relieved, and there were two watches of firemen and one watch of seamen, with the petty officers, down below in the fo'c'sle having their supper. The captain was having his supper in the dining saloon under the bridge.

Suddenly the bow of the steamship reared up on a big sea and then dived under another monster wave which swept over the windlass on deck and tore away the two winches which held the iron drum on which the 12 fathoms of steel mooring cable was wound and buried it beadily through the fore scuttle leading to the fo'c'sle. The wide wooden ladder which led to the shelter deck was smashed to splinters as the drum went down with a terrific crash, followed by tons of water, which flooded the fo'c'sle and all the cabins of the petty officers on either side fully four feet deep.

Directly he heard what had happened, Captain Doyle said he put the ship off and ran before the sea while all hands were piped to rescue the men who had been caught in a trap by the giant drum. The lights had gone out, the captain said, as the electric light cables were cut to pieces in the first four or five rolls of the iron drum across the deck, and the woodwork and bunks were smashed to pieces.

Swept Off Their Feet.

"The wave tumbling into the men's quarters with such force," said Captain Doyle, "practically lifted and swept them off their feet. They clung frantically to the iron beams of the fo'c'sle deck above them and managed to go underneath the smashed section, so that we could haul them up on deck out of danger."

"After a few minutes we got a Jacob's ladder down. There were twelve men so seriously injured that they had to be helped up by their shipmates. Some had broken arms or ribs, arms and body, and one or two had received injuries to their ribs, but no bones broken. The men could not sail out, as they were too exhausted with their struggles in the water.

"When the crew was mustered there were two men missing, Arthur Hasselbrook, steward, and Otakar Tippet, a coal trimmer, both veterans of the Great War. We shouted their names several times down the scuttle after the injured men had been hauled up, but there was no reply. The only sound was the surging of the water against the side of the ship as she rolled over with the drum crossing and recrossing the deck. Two engineers then took the rivets out of the iron bulkhead and the No. 1 hatch to let the water out," so that the men could go down and look for Hassel and Tippet, and make fast the drum before it did any serious damage to the hull of the ship."

CARRIED LOADED GUN

Admits to Police His Garb Has "Pulled Wool Over Eyes" of Spotters

Sarnia, Jan. 10.—Canadian and United States liquor enforcement officers united forces this afternoon in one of the most important arrests made in connection with rum-running across the St. Clair River since the Volstead Act, and in the police net are Rev. Roland Crouch, Free Methodist minister of Port Huron; James McLeod, of Sarnia, and Edward Allen, of Seaforth, Ont. License Inspector W. J. Coulter of this city, Inspector Whitesides of Seaforth and American enforcement officers made the arrests.

According to the officers, Crouch who is a "space" preacher in the American city, admitted, when caught with his Cadillac coupe loaded with five-gallon jars of Michigan moonshine, that he was the principal in an organized gang of rum-runners operating between Port Huron, Sarnia and Seaforth.

TRADING ON CLERICAL GARB?

The officers state that, with some display of pride, he further admitted that his clerical garb had succeeded in "pulling the wool over the eyes" of would-be searchers of his car for some considerable time.

McLeod, the police claim, has been retailing part of the liquor in Sarnia.

When Crouch was arrested, officers claim they found him in possession of a loaded revolver, and Allen is said to have confided to the police that "the minister" kept the whole gang in fear of him, and was the master mind in the illicit business which the men were carrying on.

BECK TO EXTRADITE CROUCH.

The Canadian officers are endeavoring to have Crouch extradited to Sarnia for offences against the Canadian liquor laws.

Allen claims he was an innocent party to the schemes of "the parson" by allowing his Seaforth home to be used for the storing of liquor. He told the police he was very anxious to get home, as his wife was ill.

The arrests made this afternoon, following that of Joseph Marshall, reported in The Globe yesterday, would appear to obliterate the last "link" of local officers that the liquor traffic between the Canadian and United States cities has increased to a great extent of late. One of the men arrested told the police, in explanation of the manner in which liquor is disposed of, that all a man had to do was to walk along the streets of Sarnia or Port Huron with a white handkerchief hanging hastily out of his pocket, and he would soon find that he was in direct communication with one of the "bootlegger fraternity."

SUMMARY OF CONDITIONS OF ONTARIO FARMS

Departmental Representatives Make Weekly Reports—Lack of Water Prevalent in Every Section of Province

The following is a summary of reports made by the Agricultural Representatives in the Ontario Department of Agriculture:

While some complaints are yet being made of lack of water in wells on farms, Elgin states that the recent thaw has overcome the water shortage to a certain extent.

Hay is bringing $12 a ton in Middlesex, $13 in Victoria, and $14 in Wentworth.

Hardwood for fuel is selling all the way from $6 to $12 a cord. Higher rates have been paid in some cases when cut into three lengths.

Leeds states that prices for apples are on the rise, good keeping sorts of No. 1 quality bringing from $7 to $3 a barrel.

Elgin says: "Cattle in stables are doing very well, many Western animals being fed this year. Shipments of hogs are apparently light; price $9.75 a cwt. this week."

Middlesex reports: "Feed is fairly well, and so far cattle are making satisfactory gains. Much interest is being taken in hog grading, and two buyers recently have had grades present on a shipping day and paid by grade."

Victoria states: "From stables visited during the week, it would appear that about the usual number of stockers and young cattle are being carried over. Hogs sold during the week at $10.35 a cwt."

Lincoln says that dairies are reporting a steady increase in the quantity of milk sent a race the middle of December. Elgin also reports the supply to be keeping up well at cheese factories and creameries.

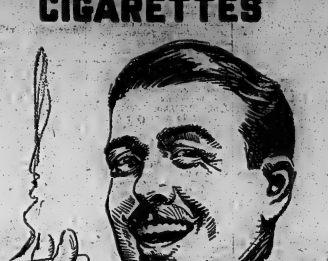
Bruce says: "A farmer in this vicinity who has been raising pure bred cattle for some time has been alarmed by the loss of all his calves lately."

Upon examination it was found that the silage in the centre of the silo was of a very poor nature. However, the veterinary is at a loss to know whether or not this is causing the trouble. Analysis of this feed is being made."

Wentworth observes a general trend toward the use of hay by the use of better boars and also by the buying of select sows. Hogs were marketed during the week at from $9.35 to $10.-75 a cwt.

Peel reports that a few men are hauling milk weekly at from $15 to $20 a month with board, and that applications for spring work are beginning to come in.

Middlesex states that a number of ex-service men are applying as soldier settlers.



SHIPBUILDING INDUSTRY NOT IMPROVED IN JAPAN

Yokohama, Jan. 8.—Japanese shipbuilding is drifting from bad to worst. Some of the shipyard operators are employing their men in the construction of machinery, iron pipes, bridges and other products, and have abandoned all thought of building many ships until the market shows improvement.

October was the worst month for Japanese shipbuilding in recent years, only one vessel being launched, and none completed. Present conditions are expected to last until next summer, when a crisis may be expected as a result of wholesale dismissal of workers.

The big Kawasaki Dockyard Company is tiding over the crisis by manufacturing airplanes.

THEY WANT BOLSHEVIST TEACHERS IN RUSSIA

To be Recruited From the Ranks of the Workers and Peasants—Russian Minister of Education Discusses Situation

Moscow, Jan. 6.—Preparation of the young men who are about to enter the arena of life, so that the Soviet government may draw from among them not only Bolshevist teachers but also Bolshevist engineers, is the urgent task of the day in Russia, asserted Commissar of Education Lunacharsky recently in an address to the fourth All Russian Conference of Educational Workers in Moscow. The Commissar, who discussed the trials of education in this country today dwelt upon the improved outlook for the future, and declared that the retreat on the education front should be considered as ended.

"We must count on the students of today—the Bolshevist builders of life—to suppleat those who were exhausted and worn out in the Czar's dungeons and by the storms of recent years," he said. "We have now a splendid student body which has been recruited from the ranks of the workers and peasants. The working class and the peasantry should create their own intellectuals. The new students are superior to the old students of other days.

"No matter how deficient may be the theoretical preparation of our present students, it should be remembered that in the pre-revolution period the classical colleges presented to the universities an extremely unsatisfactory element of youth, as was attested by the statements of the old professors. We have admitted into the University here 30,000 new young men who are sympathetic toward us and who represent a creative force capable in the near future, of cooperating with us in our work. This will be a new generation of a high intellectual and moral order, allied with the working masses by the closest ties of common descent. They will be the standard bearers of new Russia."

MENU FOR FRIDAY, JAN. 12TH

Oyster Bisque Parsley Walers
Chili Sauce Olives Broiled Finnan Haddie Baked Potatoes
Scalloped Sprouts Celery
Spanish Onion and Cucumber Salad Mayonnaise Dressing
Ragout Rich Pudding, with Sauce Foamy Sauce Coffee

BROILED FINNAN HADDIE

Select a thick haddie, wipe, brush flat over with soft butter, place on a well greased broiler (skin side up) until dark, crispy brown, turn and brown flesh side. Remove to dripping pan, cover with boiling water, let stand at back of range over night for 20 mins. Drain from water, place on hot serving platter and spread generously with Maitre d'Hotel butter. Surround with scalloped baked potatoes.

DELICIOUS SPONGE CAKES.

10 ozs. of fine sugar.
2 ozsgrape fall of boiling water.
6 eggs.
4 ozs. of ground rice.
4 ozs. of flour.
Juice of 1 lemon.
½ teaspoon of baking powder.

Put sugar in bowl. Pour on boiling water to dissolve. Add eggs, beat; eggs and sugar together for 20 mins. then add dry ingredients, which must be mixed together first. Put mixture into 2 well greased tins and bake in moderate oven. Time 20 to 25 minutes. This makes two good sized cakes.

Success with baking powder biscuits lies in having both ingredients and utensils chilled before mixing, putting the mixture together quickly and with a light touch, and making a dough in which the ingredients are perfectly blended and firm enough to handle, yet soft.

TIPS TO HOUSEWIVES

Small pieces of a discarded rain coat may be utilized as mats for potted plants.

Steel knives should be scoured as often as used. This keeps them sharp as well as bright.

Your taps, if first cleaned with brass polish and then varnished with light oak varnish, will keep their polished appearance for many months.

Cold roast lamb, put through a food chopper, pounded to a paste, seasoned with salt and mayonnaise or with curry powder, and moistened with a sweet cream, makes a delicious sandwich filling.

For scale, that little hard-shelled insect that attacks our plums, trees and rather plants, there is nothing to be done but literally scrub the place. Use soap, lots of it and a good brush you can soon remove them.

PROFESSOR EXPLAINS THE REASON

New York, Jan. 10.—(By Canadian Press)—Why do women talk more than men? Dr. A. A. Brill, Professor of Psychology at New York University and well known psycho-analyst, told the Association of Teachers of Speech why at their convention at the university recently.

Dr. Brill offered an explanation by Dr. Jespersen, the eminent philologist. It was conceded very superficially, but the gist of it is that woman's vocabulary is smaller and more centralized than man's, but always on the alert to get at it very quickly and does so frequently while man's lingual abilities are more scattered, and he begins to think in time to have comeback ready. The active, aggressive man has to struggle very hard to do much talking, the professor went on. On the other hand the women of today like their primitive sisters, can cook and talk at the same time, and giving so much time to the child with whom she babbles and teaches to talk, she has developed her own speech.

CAUSED BY A KISS

Pittsburgh, Jan. 11.—(By Canadian Press)—The sensational death of Harry E. Fisher, forty-five years old, was caused according to the coroner's finding by a fracture of a vertebra in the neck, suffered in trying to squirm from the grasp of a fellow employee, who was playfully attempting to kiss Fisher's bald head.

Philip F. Clark is an accountant in the office where Fisher was a timekeeper. Clark grasped Fisher's bald and tried to hold it while he pretended to kiss it. Fisher jerked his head in an effort to free himself. Some thing snapped. Fisher was taken to the Side Hospital, where the fractured vertebra was discovered.

LINKED LIVES

By D. Kinmount Roy

They took up the helpless creature and moved toward the cottage, which stood far off, although it was near to the trees. As they came within sight of the house they paused, and laid down their burden, for a man an horse-back was talking to a woman who sat upon the trunk of a fallen tree. 'Lord Ruthven!' the man said in a breath, 'and the Lady Nola!'

"His lordship has not been here in years, and the lady not in five, and now they are both here by some strange chance, both here!" he said, wondering-ly.

The woman looked a trifle tired, but absolutely self-possessed. She had taken off her bonnet, which lay beside her, and her small hair, touched with grey, was blown in some disorder about her face, but she made no attempt to smooth it into place. Her eyes were keen and observant, and snapped and twinkled with some inward thought, or perchance amusement, of which Lord Ruthven seemed aware, but without being able to detect the cause.

He had apparently been questioning her without receiving much satisfaction, and thought it was time to change his position. 'My good woman,' he was saying, 'this is part of my estate. What are your business here?'

'Trying to exist,' she answered briefly, 'and I am not your lordship's good woman, as far as I know, perhaps the good woman at all!'

'Have I ever met you anywhere?' he said, with a puzzled look creeping into his face, and a more courteous tone taking the place of his former peremptory one. 'your voice sounds strangely familiar, very strangely so! Are you—are you really a genuine poor person?'

The woman smiled at the naivete of the question, but answered readily, 'Oh, quite genuine, and quite poor! How could your lordship ever have met a person of my humble station at any time?'

'I cannot tell,' he answered with increasing perplexity, 'I cannot tell—It is all very strange, very strange!'

At this point the men approached, with Kinkman, limp and helpless. 'What is this, Grant?' his lordship said, dismounting.

'I don't know, sir!' the man answered; 'he is a stranger.'

'Is he dead?' Lord Ruthven asked, with some concern.

The answer, Nola advanced, and hastily examined the sick man, and remarked: 'It is only a fainting fit he has had and put him to bed, Grant.'

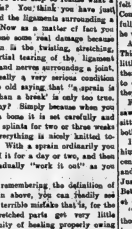
The forester touched his cap, and prepared to obey. The air of reverence with which he spoke in honour of Lord Ruthven, but that was not his lordship's opinion; and the woman whom we have introduced as Nola became a still greater perplexity to his lordship.

Just then a wave of colour came flooding them on the still air, rosing man and horse. 'The hunt is up, ma'dam,' he said courteously, turning toward her. 'Permit me to offer you my apologies and wish you good morning!' and bowing low, he was once in the saddle and off at a good pace.

A tinge of colour touched the woman's face as her eyes followed horse and man.

'Walter rides well!' she said aclly to herself. 'Trust a Ruthven to know a good horse or a good dog, whatever else he does not know—whatever else he may not know!' she repeated, scornfously.

The cottage on one side looked out through a gap in the trees upon a wide expanse of country showing rich pasture and meadow lands, with here and there patches of wood, through which farfamed trout streams wended their way.



The morning was clear, and some miles away to the right, Ruthven towers were plainly visible, and a few miles beyond to the left of where she stood the sombre outline of Fosseway Hall could easily be traced by a practised eye acquainted with the district. The intervening landscape was dotted with farmhouses and cottages, from the chimneys of which smoke was now rising, signifying home and comfort. The woman sighed, and turned away resolutely, as though thrusting away a disturbing vision of an earthly Paradise, long-lost and never to be regained. Her face had grown grey and tense in that brief space, and her eyes glowed with unwonted fire.

'The service of others,' she said to herself, 'must suffice for the present; and the memory of what has been may, perhaps still be permitted as a faroff echo of a forgotten world! Surely so much may be tolerated in without sin or shame!' she murmured in self-excuse for her momentary glimpses into the past. 'Surely, surely!'

And what had she seen in that strange flash of recollection? Dare it be told? Yes, in this extmt only.

She had seen a gay assembly in honour of the coming of age of Walter Frederick Wyndham, fifth Lord Ruthven, when Nola Ophelia Leslie-Anstruther was the reigning queen of their social world; but that was nearly thirty years ago, and the story which lies between must be reserved for the present; perhaps it may never be told, for society has but a short memory and no heart, and forgetting is usually best dropped over the tale of broken lives, whether past or present.

(To be Continued)

Did you ever stop to realize what a sprain is? You think you have just stretched the ligaments surrounding a joint. Now as a matter of fact you have done some real damage because a sprain is the twisting, stretching and tearing of the ligament vessels and nerves surrounding a joint. It is really a very serious condition and the old saying that "a sprain is worse than a break" is only too true. Now why? Simply because when you break a bone it is set carefully and then it is left alone for a few weeks until everything is nicely knitted together. With a sprain ordinarily you keep it for a day or two, and then you gradually "work it out" as you call it.

Now remembering the definition of a sprain above, you can readily see why a terrible mistake that is, for the torn stretched parts get very little opportunity of being properly cared to the constant movement you give it.

Thus very frequently thereafter you speak of the ankle or wrist as "going back on you with the slightest provocation." You never have the parts a chance to knit back properly and of course they never get back their natural strength.

The proper treatment of a sprain is absolute rest until all the swelling disappears, then passive motion for a couple of days to prevent stiffness and then the bandaging of the joint thereafter for a couple to four weeks with a factory cotton bandage.

Remember first minutes use of the joint too soon undoes twenty-four hours' rest.

The Short Story Jr.

DEAR LITTLE CHILDREN,

I pulled my chair closer to the window and looked out in the gathering dusk. That was the third person I had seen fall in front of Compton's in the last half hour. It seemed queer to me. Why should they all slip on the light fall of snow in that same place?

As I watched the fat lady gather her self together, little Billy Compton came running out from their house to help her. "Dear little children," I thought. They had helped the others who had fallen, too. It was so much like them to come rushing around picking up the poor lady's packages and brushing her off. She gave them each a dollar. Dear little thing they deserved it.

But as the fat lady resumed her walk down the street, I was surprised to see the two children double up and shriek with laughter. I was grieved to see this at first, but when I thought of what a funny spectacle the fat woman had been, I couldn't blame them.

But what was it that the children were doing next? It loked as if they were brushing snow back on the sidewalk, but I must have been mistaken. Of course they wouldn't be doing that. One of them must have lost his nickel.

The children had just gone into the house when their father came up the street. Judge of my surprise when he, too, fell right in the very same spot. It was actually becoming gruesome. I could feel cold sweat breaking out. Cautiously I crept softly and began carefully to examine the walk as though he were afraid he had cracked it.

Again the two little dears ran out. This time to their father's aid. Poor little things, they must have thought there was a log of work for kind hands to do. That made the fourth person they had helped up in the last hour.

Fancy my astonishment when I saw the three push them quickly and sitting there in the snow give them both a sound spanking.

It made me very indignant to see him thus vent his anger on his innocent little children. I put on my hat and coat and set out with determination to get in front of Compton's Betty and Tom came out with a bucket of ashes.

"What are you going to do with those?" I asked, at the same time noting there was no ladder the same in front of their house.

"We poured water on the walk and made a slide," just here my feet flew out from under me and I went sprawling. I wished those kids were miles just for a few minutes. Mr. Compton hadn't spanked them half hard enough.

OTHER WORLDS

The Star of The North

(This is the fourth of twelve stories about the mysteries of the skies by Dr. H. W. Hurt, National Field Commissioner of the Boy Scouts, and writer of two or three handbooks. Dr Hurt has studied the stars for many years, and at one time was in charge of the Yerkes Observatory in Williams Bay, Wisconsin, where the largest telescope in the world is located.)

Did you ever think how much people really depend on the stars? If you were ever lost in the woods and have found your direction by the north star, you can understand why this particular star has always been of so much importance to man.

Nearly all of the history of man is located on the northern half of the globe, the half that can see the north star. As this star seems to be always in the same place, a point which is in line with the axis on which our earth turns, it has been as important to navigation by night as is the sun by day. The ancient seamen ventured forth on the unknown seas with the north star to guide them. This is the object toward which the "north" end of the compass needle points.

STAR USED IN MEASURING.

Not even the ancients knew that those great pyramids of Egypt were laid out by means of the north star. The Egyptians could sight this star exactly and make a north and south line and then use knotted ropes to get "square" using three, four and five units as the rope sides of a triangle drawn around stakes.

This star, however, is not exactly over the north point. It moves, in fact, from year to year, but reckoning by this star is exact enough for most purposes.

The north star is really a sun, something like our own sun, and is the centre of a system, also, though the "earths" belonging to it are too far away to be seen even through our largest telescopes—so far away that a great limited express train dashing

OBITUARY

GRACIOUS GIFTS

Some one has truthfully written that God is always giving us new beginnings. "And behold the vessel of clay was marred in the hand of the potter", so he threw it away as worthless? No, he "made it again." Every morning is a new beginning. The day ends, and sleep comes at last, piles of our trouble, our failure, on our sin. And the morning cometh, with new strength and hope and outlook, when we can take it, and go on ourselves and our business, and start anew. Convalescence is a new beginning. Sometimes God sets us safe landlockers for a time, perhaps that we may think and realize some things that constant health and activity tend to make us neglect. And when the blessed "restart" begins to come back, surely we ought to realize that God, of His great mercy, is giving us a new beginning. Let us use it as a new and gracious and undeserved gift from Him.

MADE MOCKERY OF RELIGIONS OF THE WORLD

Russian Communists Hold Procession on Their Xmas Day

Thousands Joined Revelry

Paper Figures Representing Deities and Saints Tossed Into Flames

Moscow, Jan. 8.—The young Communists observing the Christmas holidays of the Georgian calendar on Sunday, paraded their rudely moulded "deities" upon benches, in a grotesque carnival procession that was a mockery of the world's great religions.

Thousands of Russian students did a gigantic goose dance around a great bonfire, the kindling of which before one of the principal railway stations brought the day of revelry to a close. The climax of the celebration came, however, when the young people gleefully tossed into the flames straw and paper figures representing the deities of the Christian Russians, Mohammedan, Jewish and Buddist religions.

The Russian Christmas had been especially chosen by the young Communists as the occasion for shattering by mockery the ancient Teutonic story and the traditions which their organization hails as "religious myths." Hence the procession that thronged the streets of Moscow had in its ranks considerers of the old-time Christmas celebrations of the Russian church.

Flaring aloft on red, fluttering pennants the Star of Bethlehem, were borne aloft at the head of the parade, followed by paper angels and banners upon which were daubed cartoons of deities and saints. No frons, no reminder of the church ceremonies of the past have marked the advent of Christmas for centuries past, were in evidence.

Last in the line of march, and the object, young children from the orphanages and institutions tramped through the snow, their faces flushed as they watch the bonfire which their Communistic leaders had decreed should take the place of the Christmas tree, wandered through the crowd whispering: "Alms in the name of Christ on Christmas Day."

SOVIET INCITE MOHAMMEDANS

Russian Agents Trying to Stir up the Koran Followers in China

(By Canadian Press)

Peking, Jan.—Efforts are being made in China by agents of the Russian Soviet Government to rally the Mohammedans of this country for promotion of their common interests. The political significance of the movement is a surprise, but the Mohammedan organization here is issuing thousands of circulars and the vernacular press is fully alive to the activity. The motives for this activity.

The majority of the Mohammedans in China live in the western provinces and are clearly isolated from other Chinese, although their religion is somewhat modified from the original of the original followers of the prophet. During the last half century there have been two strong sects among the Chinese Mohammedan elements.

Establishment of a Mohammedan republic in Russian Turkestan is believed here to be one of the objectives of the Soviet representatives who are doing their best to build up effective propaganda whenever Mohammedans are congregated in China.

ASIA FOR ASIATICS

Shanghai, Jan. 8.—"Asia for the Asiatics" is the new slogan of Dr.Sun Tai Sen, former head of the Canton government, in favor of a Japanese alliance between Japan and Russia.

In an interview published in the Jih, Dr. Sun declares Japan has a glorious opportunity to preserve Asia for the Asiatics when she disregards all his advice to join with the Western powers.

"Japan participated in the war on the side of the allied powers," he declared, "with the result that realization of the Pan-Asiatic plan has been delayed indefinitely. As Japan has shown herself incapable of seizing this opportunity, it will be China that will be called upon to take this up as a place for Asiatics in the future.

"It is not too late for Japan to undo what she did blindly during the war. If Japan really wishes to see Asia controlled by the Asiatics, she must promote relations with the Russians. She must make common cause with the Russians in opposing the aggression of the Anglo-Saxons."

CARDINAL O'CONNELL SAYS WORLD RUSHING TO DESTRUCTION

Religion Must Be in the Hearts of All Nations

Boston, Jan. 9.—Under the leadership of most dangerous pride, conceit and stupid and false nationalism which refuses to recognize the kingly brotherhood of all men and all nations, not only Russia, but the whole world, is rushing to destruction, Cardinal O'Connell declared today before the Holy Name Society at the Cathedral of the Holy Cross.

"If these false doctrines of Communism and excessive and false Nationalism," he said, "have been the gospel, not up to the people by their leaders, what wonder finally that they worked out the logical conclusion.

Cardinal O'Connell asserted that unless religion was in the hearts of the citizens of a nation the laws means nothing.

"When religion goes," he said, "only one thing can follow logically—the bayonet."

MAY APPLY FOR HABEAS COR PUS IN "AXE" CASE

Roberts Not Convicted Under Any Act

Supreme Court's Jurisdiction Doubted

Banking Act Will be Amended

Ottawa, Jan. 9.—Applicants to the supreme court of the province in the case celebre of John H. Roberts, sentenced to a year's imprisonment by the legislature of Quebec, has been forecasted for the day, but it was stated in court circles that no move to that end has yet been made.

JURISDICTION DOUBTED.

Doubt as to the jurisdiction of the supreme court and exactly what the court has a concurrent jurisdiction in matters relating to criminal cases arising out of an act of parliament but there is no appeal in habeas corpus from any special courts dealing with cases in this particular category.

Roberts was not convicted under any act of parliament", as it was a mere question whether "contempt" of the legislature is a "criminal" offence within the meaning of the supreme court.

CLASS BY ITSELF.

The legislature of Quebec, sentencing Roberts to a year's imprisonment by the act of the legislature is a class by itself and any appeal to the supreme court here will involve a question of jurisdiction never raised on similar lines in the history of the court.

LOTS OF TRIALS.

The opening of parliament this year will be another chapter in the story of all the social customs which prevailed before the war. At the drawing-room in China this year the western line, in a long period, the ladies will wear feathers and veils, while trains are optional. It is anticipated that this revision of the old custom copies a social procedure this year in court circles in London.

BANKING ACT.

Amendments to the banking act this year, assuming the revision is precedent, will probably be affecting of the responsibility of bank presidents and directors in connection with returns made to the finance department, showing the financial state of the different banks.

The matter arises in connection with the collapse of the Merchants bank, and the fact that its real position was actually different from that published. Supposedly disclosed in the returns to the department, suggests the need of some reform. It is stated that some way will be sought to meet the situation without placing upon directors and responsible officers any penalties as may discourage properly qualified men from taking directorships.

COW TRIED DIET OF STEEL WIRE

Ingersoll, Ont., Jan. 8.—A piece of steel wire six inches in length with a hook on one end which had become embedded in the gullet, was removed on Saturday by Dr. Gill, of Dorchester, from the throat of a cow belonging to Gordon Harris, of North Dorchester Township. The wire had been in the animal's throat for about nine months.

The cow whose throat was badly swollen had no, but flesh as a result of the wire being in her throat and no further ill effects are anticipated.

12,000 NARCOTIC VICTIMS IN DOMINION

28 Unconscious Addicts Taken to Montreal General Hospital Last Year

DRUGS AND VICE FACTS

Prison & Lash for Peddlers Advocated—Clean-up Wanted

Major K. K. Haywood, superintendent of the Montreal General Hospital, did not mince matters yesterday at the Canadian Club luncheon, in an address on "The Drug Traffic and commercialized vice in Montreal." On the contrary, his report gives details of vice conditions in Montreal, as the only city of North America left with a recognized red light district, and the intimate relations between commercialized vice and the drug traffic proved a shocking revelation.

There was a large gathering, about 250 members being present. In the absence of the president the chair was taken by the vice-president, Lt.-Col. W. Leggat.

In opening, Major Haywood apologized for reading his address, which was necessary, as he would make,certain statements and some conclusions which would certainly be challenged and, he hoped, cause a public scandal, with a possible awakening of public sentiment.

While general business conditions had caused a decrease in the past two years, there were two businesses which had flourished, the drug traffic and commercialized vice.

During the past year at the Montreal General Hospital there had been admitted for an anaesthetic condition 26 victims of narcotic poisoning to the emergency department. Of these 14 had died, mostly suicides. Statistics estimated that for 1922 approximately 1,000 cases of violation of the narcotic drug laws would be dealt with, while in 1921 there were 503 cases. Dr. Amyot, Deputy Minister of Health at Ottawa, had estimated that Canada had between 12,000 and 15,000 drug addicts.

The drugs chiefly used were opium, morphine, heroin and cocaine, all of which formed almost unbreakable habits. A cruder drug, however, was turning women into prostitutes, men into degenerates, and both into criminals. Most of the drug addicts were of the underworld, but the habit had invaded all social classes, for which the drug and the careless physicians altogether blameless.

The worst feature was the sugarless of drug addicts and their habits, while, after careful study at the hospital Dr. Haywood did not think there was much connection between alcohol and addiction to drugs, few addicts being alcoholics. The average age of drug addicts was 18 to 25 —much less than that of alcoholics.

The Federal Government controlled drug importation, but did little to control their smuggling by drug rings, who brought in immensely more than was imported legally, with their many unloading huge stocks and dope reputed as middlemen. Court House records stated that in one year 200,000 worth of drugs had been smuggled into Montreal and sold, while about $300,000 worth was recovered. Montreal's strategic position made it a natural centre for such drug rings and their agents, whose profits ran from 5,000 per cent. In view of this, and the fact that those "higher up" were seldom caught, he recommended that judges penalized in punishing with fines.

Drug addicts needed anywhere from $3 to $30 worth of drugs per day, and would commit any crime to get it, while the fear of the drug habit in jail did not prevent them from getting drugs—a system practiced elsewhere, but difficult to prevent under the present system.

Considers Fines Useless.

Dr. Haywood intimated that most of the addicts had been by federal officers, and seizures were marked by increases in crimes of violence. For instance, he knew the stranglehold of the prostitute on our populace we can never hope to make any headway against it, but by

GERMANY SQUEALS UNDER FRENCH PRESSURE

ONTARIO'S BLIZZARD DID NOT AFFECT BELLEVILLE

While the Storm Was of Considerable Volume Here Traffic was Maintained with Few Delays.

Belleville's last evening and early this morning waded through the snow which at certain places was piled up to a considerable depth. The snow storm which commenced on Wednesday had, it is alleged, had it's origin in North Dakota and after spreading itself in that portion of the continent travelled owards Canada. Considerable of the beautiful fell last night, but owing to a strong wind which prevailed did not fall upon the level, but rather drifted to a considerable extent Some of the roads leading into the city were today almost impassable, in fact it was impossible to go far with safe ty.

On the line of the G.T.R., in the district, the snow-ploughs were last night brought into commission for the first time this year. Trains were however, only delayed a few minutes from schedule time. Today snow shovels were much in evidence about the city.

A local physician on the return trip from Point Anne, was compelled to abandon his car, owing to the condition of the road.

The storm is not over yet, and more snow is promised by the weather man.

LOCAL MOOSE LODGE HOLD REGULAR FROLIC

Large Class of Candidates Initiated Last Evening at the Lodge Rooms

THE LEGION DEGREE

Aftermath of Ceremonial was Enjoyed by the Members—North Moose C. Mills Presided

Last night at their lodge rooms in the I. O. O. F. hall, the Loyal Order of Moose, Belleville Lodge No. 1004 held their regular Frolic, when the second degree of the order, known as the Legion Degree was exemplified.

North Moose C. Mills presided and with the able assistance of the other officers of the lodge a large class of candidates were initiated into the mysteries of the Legion. This part cular degree of the Moose order and it is a significant one, inasmuch as under its direction, a home for aged Moose is maintained at Mooseheaven in the State of Florida.

Following the regular degree work with the ritualistic initiation ceremonies, a buffet lunch was served and the balance of the evening was pleasantly interspersed with speech making, repartee and other enjoyment.

This organization although only recently established in Belleville, is progressing surely and well and the programme of events mapped out for the balance of the winter promises to be most interesting, entertaining and instructive.

ADVOCATES LIQUORLESS HOTELS

Commission Independent of O.T.A. Suggested by Chairman Watson of Toronto

That the Government and the general public should realize that liquor has no more to do with the hotel business than it has with the grocery or butcher shop, was the contention of Chairman Watson, of the hotel and tourist investigation committee when addressed the Ontario body of the Hotel Greeters of America at their first monthly meeting of the year at the Toronto Club. He declared that his committee would recommend to the Government the formation of a commission entirely separate from the enforcement of the O.T.A. and which would be composed of public-spirited men, representative of such bodies as the Commercial Travellers' Association, the boards of trade, the Ontario Motor League and leading hotel men themselves, who would have as their chief object the placing of Ontario on the map as a place where first class accommodation could at all times be obtained.

GOV'T BOARD TO MARKET GRAIN SCORED BY MR. CRERAR

Could Not Reach Efficiency of Some Co-operative Methods

Listened to in Silence

Former Leader Found Fault With Principle of Compulsion as Applied to Wheat Board

Brandon, Man., Jan. 11.—"I haven't faith in Government boards for marketing grain," said Hon. T. A. Crerar, former Progressive leader, in an address here tonight to the United Farmers of Manitoba.

"Government boards," he went on, "is a matter of fact, I do not set it as certain anything like the efficiency which can be secured by some co-operative methods. This can be achieved by a Government grain marketing board which cannot be achieved by a non-co-operative body.

"I notice," said Mr. Crerar, "that I don't get much applause." The audience was listening in silence.

Mr. Crerar found serious fault with the principle of compulsion as applied to a wheat board. It was against the traditions of freedom held by the organized farmers.

"I am profoundly convinced," he said, "that hopes entertained of great advantage from a wheat board are illusory hopes in the long run."

Agriculture was in a bad way, he said, but the economic crisis had not the Wheat Board of 1919 was no assurance that equal success would attend such a board in 1923.

Mr. Crerar remarked in passing that the United Grain Growers, Limited, was prepared to assist to the best of its ability in any marketing scheme which might be worked out.

"One economic necessity," said Mr. Crerar, "in this country is to cut down the cost of production. Reduction of the tariff was sought not only because the tariff was mortally wrong, but because such a reduction was an economic necessity." They could not get rid of the tariff until they had convinced a majority of the people that such a step was sound. The demand for a wheat board had created a handicap for the development of Progressive principles in Eastern Canada.

"We have," he said, "put ourselves morally in a worse position with the rest of Canada in the matter of the wheat board. Morally and from a business standpoint the position of Canada for a board is not good policy. The speaker was a great believer in co-operation.

VAGRANT LIVES ON SCRAPS AND GARBAGE

(Canadian Press Despatch)

...North Bay Jan. 11.—An instance of the most primeval state of existence was unearthed within a mile of the town limits the other day, when Town Constable Lefebvre discovered Fiore Mennella, a hairy haired Russian, living in an outdoor shack of boughs.

Evidence of the manner in which the man lived was scattered about the place. Bundles of bones, fish skin and offal gathered at night from the garbage containers in the outskirts of the city, where he spent the cold winter months, until recently, in his hovel without even a fire. At times the temperature here has been as low as 20 degrees below zero.

Mennella objected strenuously to the police disturbing him but was charged with vagrancy in the local Police Court and given a month's term in jail, which will see him over the worst part of the winter.

MERCHANTS BANK FAILURE PROVIDES CLUE

Edmonton Postmaster Accused of Stealing Circulation of That Bank

CURENCY CALLED UP

Return of Bills to Bank of Montreal Resulted in the Arrest of Accused

Edmonton, Jan. 12.—The calling in of the note circulation of the Merchants Bank of Canada by the bank of Montreal in connection with the taking over of the former financial institution brought to light conditions which resulted in the arrest early this morning of Postmaster George S. Armstrong on the charge of stealing a money package containing $50,000. Some of the money which made up the package found its way back to the Bank of Montreal, and gave Detective Walter Duncan something definite to work on. Developments in connection with the big robbery were the basis of an important conference recently at Ottawa. Former Commissioner Alfred Cuddy of the Alberta police, now of Toronto, and officers of the Canadian Mounted Police attended the conference.

Tenement Men on Case

All the information gathered in connection with the case was sifted and the different angles of the case discussed. The money package was left in the care of the Edmonton Postoffice one Saturday and its loss was not discovered until Tuesday, a public holiday intervening. Detectives Walter Duncan, who formerly head of the Toronto Detective Department, Inspector Duncan of the Edmonton force, and Detective

UNION PRAYER SERVICE IN ST. ANDREW'S

Helpful Service Last Night Rev. A. S. Kerr Presided

"OUR DAILY BREAD"

Rev. A. E. Malott of Bridge Street Preached Inspiring Sermon—Good Music and Splendid Attendance

There was a large attendance at the Union Prayer service held in St. Andrew's Church last evening in spite of the storm. The Minister of the Church, Rev. A. S. Kerr, presided. Prayers were offered by Rev. Dr. Brown and Rev. D. C. Ramsay. An inspiring and helpful address was given by Rev. A. E. Malott, of Bridge St. Methodist Church on the words of the Lord's Prayer, "Give us this day our daily bread." He pointed out that our bodily needs are a legitimate subject of prayer, but that the petition did not include any provision for extravagance in luxuries. It is God who gives to our bread and not machinery or science, therefore we should recognize our dependance upon him. Men need more than bread for the body. They have spiritual needs and only the bread which comes down from heaven can satisfy the souls of men. Mr. Malott sang a solo during the offering. The meeting was then closed with a service in Bridge St. Methodist Church.

CHILDREN'S AID SOCIETY TO PRODUCE PLAY

Cast Comprised of Local Talent Entirely—Rehearsals Being Held Frequently

THE GIRL IN RED

Will be Produced Under the Direction of Theodore H. Bird—A Success in Other Cities

The citizens of Belleville will have the privilege, on Wednesday and Thursday, January 24th and 25th, of witnessing an exploitation entitled "The Girl in Red" will be presented by an army of local talent under the direction of Theodore H. Bird.

The production is in aid of the Children's Aid Society and for this reason, should be heartily patronized by all Bellevillians. This extremely worthy institution is most in dire need of quate support, both moral and financially and, owing to the many needed issues which exist, Mr. Bird has enjoyed in other centres where the play has been staged, he was engaged to organize the local talent along the similar lines.

The cast has been selected from an imposing array of Belleville's Best and judging from productions of former years staged by the City folk, ever the most talented will not be neglected. "The Golden Age" was a tremendous success here and there is no laudable reason why the "Girl in Red" cannot be brought up to the same standard.

We have never heard anything from Belleville talent which was not good and there is no reason for ever the most skeptical to assume a different attitude in regard to their present efforts.

Mr. Bird is working very diligently in connection with this production and it is requested by those in charge of the affair that the leads in the read, devote more time if possible, to make the play a success, and at the same time, to remember the fact of the most charitable purpose under which auspices it is to be staged.

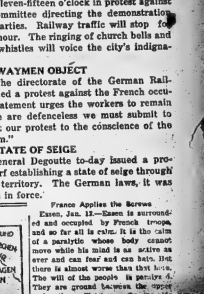
RUHR LABORERS PROTEST AGAINST FRENCH INVASION

Railwaymen Object and Industries Close—German Manifesto Pronounces Ruhr Seizure—Urges People to be Calm—Appeals to the World

FRANCE WILL NOT TOLERATE RESISTANCE

No Sabotage Allowed—Troops Act as Police—German Moves Headless and Provocative as Usual—State of Seige in Dusseldorf
LABOR PROTESTS

(Canadian Press Despatch)



Essen, Jan. 12.—All factories will close next Monday morning from eleven to eleven-fifteen o'clock in protest against the occupation. The committee directing the demonstration represents all political parties. Railway traffic will stop for ten minutes at the same hour. The ringing of church bells and the blowing of factory whistles will voice the city's indignation.

RAILWAYMEN OBJECT

Berlin, Jan. 12.—The directorate of the German Railwaymen's Union has issued a protest against the French occupation of Essen. The statement urges the workers to remain calm, saying: "Since we are defenceless we must submit to force in expectation that our protest to the conscience of the world will obtain our aim."

A STATE OF SEIGE

Essen, Jan. 12.—General Degoutte to-day issued a proclamation from Dusseldorf establishing a state of seige through out the newly occupied territory. The German laws, it was stipulated, would remain in force.

France Applies the Screws

Essen, Jan. 12.—Essen is surrounded and occupied by French troops, and as far as all is calm. It is the calm of a paralytic whose body cannot move while his mind is as active as ever. There is no fear and no hate. But there is almost worse than that hate. The will of the people is passive. They are passed between the upper and nether millstones. On one side has been for the last four years France with its policy of isolation, evasion and starvation, so that a greater industrial Germany should grow from this ruin. On the other side is Poincare with his French troops, bent on payment for the wrongs of years ago, and with a determination that, whoever shall survive this struggle, it will not be France which is to be ruined.

People in Waiting Mood.

Until some incident occurs which may swing them to one side or the other, the people seem to be waiting. The streets are thronged with a tram and set guards at all important buildings and crossways, arrived, there was complete silence. It was with the listless curiosity that accompanies starvation that the people regarded them. In every workshop the main thought was resentment, not against the French particularly, but against the system which for the last few days threw the whole district into starvation, of which evidences are already seen.

Everything depends on the action of the troops. With the withdrawal and practical disbanding of the coal syndicate they are faced with a problem entirely different from that which was envisaged in Paris.

Big Problem for French

They have been to operate the mines and pay the miners. They will have to find wages and food for millions of people for the densely populated district, where so terrible has the money problem become that no families are able to save more than three of four days ahead of their most ordinary necessities. There are machine guns at the corners of the mines, but they will not produce coal for France.

Outside the City Limits three French Generals held a little review while they waited for news that the occupation was complete. But that will not save them from trouble unless money can be poured

OSHAWA OFFENDER IS FINED $600

Conclusion of Famous Gin Case in That Town.

MORE EVIDENCE GIVEN

Accused Says Gin Was Obtained at Local Hotel in June

Oshawa, Jan. 10.—Frank Kobernik was today found guilty of selling liquor by Magistrate Hall in the local Police Court. Kobernik was fined $600 and $90 costs, with the alternative of six months' hard labor in the County Jail. At the close of the hearing J. F. Grierson, counsel for Kobernik, announced that he would appeal the penalty. Two similar charges laid against the accused were withdrawn.

"TRAFFIC MUST BE STOPPED."

In passing sentence the magistrate said: "The illicit traffic, as long as the Ontario Temperance Act is on the statute books has got to stop. It is robbing the children of their clothing and the schools are closed for two months and the magistrate is in some here tonight over the arrest of H. A. Terrell, a travelling salesman and well-known resident of the town, upon a charge of manslaughter today, following the death last Sunday of his three-year-old son, Arthur Willi Terrell.

The authorities charge and the parents are Christian Scientists and admit that the child had no medical attention before he died. A coroner's jury, composed of some of the leading men of Wenonah, most of them friends and acquaintances of the Terrells, late this afternoon, at an inquest held over the boy's body at the Town Hall, brought in this verdict:

"We find that Arthur Hill Terrell came to his death by lobar pneumonia, contributed to by neglect, on the part of his parents to furnish medical aid and attention."

Upon complaint made through the office of Acting Prosecutor Joseph Lannigan, the father was summoned before Magistrate Wilbur Mathis at Camden early in the day, and was held under $1,000 bail on a charge of manslaughter. This action, supported by the verdict of the coroner's jury, means that the Gloucester County Grand Jury will be called upon to make a thorough investigation of the case.

"The child died of neglect," was the court statement made by Henry C. Clark, county physician, to the jury called together for the inquest this afternoon by Coroner William F. Chalfant.

Dr. Clark performed an autopsy upon the boy's body yesterday. He explained to the jury that he found one lung entirely congested and evidence upon the body that the boy had suffered from an infantile high fever. The child must have been sick for at least ten days, Dr. Clark said the autopsy disclosed.

RUHR LABORERS PROTEST

into the district with the same view mentioned previously. It has been poured in from the printing presses during recent months. Either Berlin with marks or Paris with paper francs must keep this enormous piece of machinery going. If it is not kept going, then nothing can prevent a repetition of that tragedy which torn the world 1914 1918 changed North France, with only this difference that Germany will be this time the sufferer.

Britain Appealed to London, Jan. 11.—Dr. Sthamer, German Ambassador to Great Britain, presented to the British Foreign Office late today Germany's formal protest against the Franco-Belgian action in the Ruhr, which he declared, violates the Treaty of Versailles.

The German protest argues that the Franco-Belgian action is a threefold breach of the Versailles Treaty —first, because the defaults in wood and coal would, according to the note of the Reparations Commission of March 21, 1922, only permit a demand for payment in cash; second, the treaty permits no territorial sanctions whatever, and third, according to the treaty, reprisals against Germany are permissible only if imposed by the allied powers in union, not by a single power on its own individual initiative.

The German Government protests "the unheard-of oppression, contrary of the treaty by disregarding itself. but says it does not intend to meet force by force nor answer a breach of he treaty by disengaging itself from the treaty. So long as conditions contrary to the treaty persist, Germany, it is declared, will not be in a position to make deliveries of any kind to those powers which brought about these conditions.

GRUESOME FIND IN SHOP AFTER LONG SIEGE

London Tailor Shot Himself as Police Entered—Woman's Body Found

Crowd Mobbed Police

Thousands of Morbid Idlers Fought to See Corpse Before Carried Out in a Bath Tub

London, Jan. 10.—An extraordinary tragedy was revealed here this afternoon when the police broke into a tailor's shop in Park Road, Regent's Park, which had been barricaded against them for several days. The tailor, Cecil Maltby, shot himself as they burst in, and in a bath covered only by a sheet was found the dead body of a woman believed to be Alice Silda Middleton, wife of an officer of the Mercantile Marine. The women had evidently been dead some weeks or months.

Keen public interest in the case had been aroused by the steps which Maltby had stood pince the end of last week. He owned a tailoring business which, well known in his grandfather's and father's names, had sunk to practically nothing. The police went to ask him whether he could help them about the whereabouts of Mrs. Middleton, who had disappeared from her apartment in Ireland and was well known to be a friend of his, but when they came to the shop five days ago he refused to respond to their knock. He could be seen inside, but he would not answer the summons of even a police inspector who knew him well. The police then instituted a regular blockade.

They had no right to make a forcible entrance as whatever their suspicions they had no evidence on which to formulate a charge, but they were sure that they could soon starve Maltby out. They knew that he was in armchairs with his feet and had had tins and water cut off, and he could not have much food in his house. All night and all day detectives watched the shop while reporters scrambled over sheds and roofs to get a peep through the windows at the case and a crowd of idlers hung about in the street.

Today a new step was taken. The sanitary authorities swore out a warrant entitling them to break in for purposes of inspection. The police had to use considerable violence to force the street and inner door. As they began to search the attic a shot rang out. They burst through a locked door on the upper floor, and found Maltby dead in bed. He had just shot himself.

The body of Mrs. Middleton was found enveloped in a sheet in a bath in a back room. For weeks Maltby had been alone in the house with the corpse. As the police crowd in the bath from the house to convey it to a hearse they were mobbed and their lines were broken by hundreds struggling to get a sight of their gruesome find.

The use of alcohol in Canada for industrial purposes has within recent years been limited, although it is an important basic raw material in a great many manufactured chemicals. This limitation was partly due to restrictive government regulations, which, however, have been largely removed by Act of Parliament in the year 1920, and the industry has grown space since then. The importance of this commodity in industrial life will undoubtedly increase as the world's petroleum products become scarcer, and there is already a tendency in some countries toward the use of this material, alone or admixed with other products, as an important fuel for internal combustion engines.

O.T.A. AMENDMENTS NOT CONTEMPLATED

So far as can be ascertained at the Parliament Buildings at Toronto, there are no further contemplated amendments to the Ontario Temperance Act to be considered by the House at the session opening January 23. While pending appeals on certain points declaring certain clauses of the act to be ultra vires may ultimately change the situation, it is understood that the Government regards the O.T.A. as being reasonably comprehensive and effective as it stands.

No move is being made, nor has such been the subject of Cabinet discussion, to appeal to the Federal powers for authority to cut off the manufacture and sale for export of liquor in Ontario. Presumably such legislation would have to be sanctioned by the Imperial Government as an amendment to the British North America Act. The Government's feeling in regard to such a last step in making Ontario dry is understood to be that there must first come a demand from a considerable body of the Ontario electorate.

BOY'S FATHER HELD

Manslaughter Charge Preferred Against Christian Scientist

Wenonah, N.J., January 9.—With the town virtually under quarantine as a result of an outbreak of measles which has closed the schools for two weeks and stopped sessions of the Sunday schools, public interest is intense here tonight over the arrest of H. A. Terrell, a travelling salesman and well-known resident of the town, upon a charge of manslaughter today, following the death last Sunday of his three-year-old son, Arthur Willi Terrell.

The authorities charge and the parents are Christian Scientists and admit that the child had no medical attention before he died. A coroner's jury, composed of some of the leading men of Wenonah, most of them friends and acquaintances of the Terrells, late this afternoon, at an inquest held over the boy's body at the Town Hall, brought in this verdict:

"We find that Arthur Hill Terrell came to his death by lobar pneumonia, contributed to by neglect, on the part of his parents to furnish medical aid and attention."

Upon complaint made through the office of Acting Prosecutor Joseph Lannigan, the father was summoned before Magistrate Wilbur Mathis at Camden early in the day, and was held under $1,000 bail on a charge of manslaughter. This action, supported by the verdict of the coroner's jury, means that the Gloucester County Grand Jury will be called upon to make a thorough investigation of the case.

"The child died of neglect," was the court statement made by Henry C. Clark, county physician, to the jury called together for the inquest this afternoon by Coroner William F. Chalfant.

Dr. Clark performed an autopsy upon the boy's body yesterday. He explained to the jury that he found one lung entirely congested and evidence upon the body that the boy had suffered from an infantile high fever. The child must have been sick for at least ten days, Dr. Clark said the autopsy disclosed.

QUINTE BRANCH WOMEN'S INSTITUTE HOLD JAN. MEETING

The January meeting of the Quinte Branch of the Women's Institute met at the home of the President, Mrs. James Garbutt, on the 9th inst. There was a good attendance, considering the roads and the weather.

Mrs. Geo. Hall gave an excellent paper on "The Institute as a Factor in the Community." Mrs. Parrott Mrs. Leavens and Miss Grass also gave interesting readings. The musical part of the programme was furnished by Miss Rednor and Mrs. Fred Parrott. Roll call on school lunches was responded to by all and many helpful suggestions were given. The meeting closed by singing "God Save the King." A dainty lunch was afterwards served.

The next meeting is at the home of Mrs. Geo. Hall, in February.

NEW INDEX MAPS IN GRAND TRUNK TIME TABLE FOLDERS

Montreal, January 11.—The January issue of the Grand Trunk Railway System time table folder has two pages devoted to skeleton or index maps, that will be appreciated by the travelling public, particularly those who are familiar with the geographical location of the station for which train service is desired, but who hesitate in finding the specific time tables shown in the folder. These maps show numbers on different portions of the track, which refer to the time table numbers in the folder. There is also complete index of stations which show the time table number for every station but the index maps will frequently render it unnecessary to consult the general index.

ONCE 'BAD BOY' OF JAPAN NOW LEADER

Tokyo, Jan. 10.—A man known only two years ago as the "Peck's bad boy" of Japanese diplomacy will represent Japan at Washington if present plans to name Masnao Hanihara to succeed Ambassador Kijuro Shidehara are carried out.

For in 1920, when negotiations to bring about amity between Japan and the United States over the California land question were in progress, Hanihara caused the Japanese government much embarrassment by his fiery speeches on the question when the government wanted it veiled in the deepest secrecy.

Hanihara is 46. He is a graduate of Waseda University.

He has served as attache of the legation at Scoula Korea, secretary to the embassy at Washington, consul general at Hankow, counsellor to the foreign minister and director of political affairs.

Preston, Jan. 11.—In the Big Four series, Stratford Indians defeated the locals by the score of 10 to 5. The visitors outplayed the locals, and deserved to win. The home team were inclined to mix things up, and the outcome was that the locals were playing one or two men short during the entire game. The various penalties gave the Preston players being penalized and ran in the most of their goals while the locals were playing men short. Preston came strong in the last period, with the score 6 to 3 against them, and by brilliant work ran in three goals and tied the score. SCHAEFER QUALIFIED TO MEET HOPPE

Chicago, Jan. 11.—Jake Schaefer, of San Francisco, former world's 18.3 balk line billiard champion, won the final block of the 1,500-point match with Roger Conti, champion of France, here last night, 500 to 131, thereby becoming eligible to meet Willie Hoppe, present champion, in New York for the title next March. Schaefer's total for the three blocks was 1,500, while Conti had 781 points.

JESS WILLARD IS WILLING TO BOX DEMPSEY

Is Ready to Fight Way to a Bout for the Championship—Other Matches Arranged

New York, Jan. 10.—Jess Willard declared today that he was willing to fight his way to a return match with Jack Dempsey for the world's heavyweight boxing title if it is necessary to do that in order to convince the public that he can meet the conditions for a battle with the champion.

Willard made this declaration after he had been interviewed by Archery had conferred for several hours with promoter Tex Richard in regard to a possible match between the pair.

No definite announcement was forthcoming after the conference, but it was understood Richard assured Willard that he was ready to stage a return bout with Dempsey, possibly in July, if the former title-holder can demonstrate his fitness to the satisfaction of the public.

Dan McKetrick, Dempsey's eastern representative, said tonight that Dempsey had received offers from London promoters, who have offered a purse of $250,000 for him to box Joe Beckett, English heavyweight, during Derby week, in May. Tom O'Rourke, Polo Grounds matchmaker, announced today he had secured Bill Brennan's signature to articles for a fight with Willard about May 1 at the Giants' ball park, and was negotiating with Willard's manager. Willard expresses little concern over the edict of William Muldoon, chairman of the New-York State Athletic Commission, barring the former champion from fighting in New York State, whether he is over or under the age limit of 35, and branding his attempted comeback as "ridiculous." He insisted that he is only 36, despite records to the contrary, and declared a fight with Dempsey could be easily outside of this state if the commission maintains its barrier.

It is understood that Tex Rickard proposes to stage a bout between Jack Dempsey and Tom Gibbons in Shelby, Montana in Jersey City shortly after the opening of the outdoor season.

BROCKVILLE VIEWS OF WEDNESDAY'S GAME

Referring to Wednesdays Intermediate game here, the Brockville Recorder and Times comments, in part, as follows:

"A number of local citizens witnessed the game and informed the R. and T. this morning that the Brockvilles put up a great game. Only two penalties were imposed and play was exceptionally clean.

"The Brockville system of offence and defence work was materially improved and the forward carried the puck well into the opposing territory before shooting on the goal. Crooks did up a splendid exhibition in goal for Belleville until he was injured and saved what looked like sure scores for his locals.

"The forwards went through the game in fine style and were time and again seen on top of the opposing defence in their efforts to score. The defence, without Cossitt, was noticeably weak and had the team been at full strength a far closer game would have resulted."

"Cossitt, who was out of the game at Belleville last night, through injuries sustained at Kingston on Monday, will be back at his position on the defence and will give a good account of himself tomorrow."

R. C. Y. CLUB PREPARE FOR NEXT SUMMER

New Fleet of One-Design Sloops Designed by Benson Will be Used in L.Y.R.A. Events

That was a happy idea that Sailing Committee of the Royal Canadian Yacht Club tried on the annual opening last November. It was mentioned that there was a feeling that there should be a class between the dinghies and the R-boats, to interest the rising generation of sailors, and after some discussion it was decided to get plans for a "tween-class sloop and find how many would be interested in such a departure.

The work was well organized and has had surprisingly good results. The committee got some good old-Canadian designs and had "builders' figures on them and then signed up "prospects" to the number of having to buy oxen to get into the game, there has been a rush of orders, and the season will open with the largest addition to the R.C.Y.C. fleet in its history.

True, the boats are small, but they are the standardized launch boats like the Star class, popular in American clubs. They are real ships, mirrored rigged, outside ballasted, fit to go anywhere on Lake Ontario in the sailing season.

They will be moored and sailed by three men ordinarily, and there will be readily find sleeping room in them for week-end cruising.

The club was fortunate in getting a good wholesome design from T. B. F. Benson, also of Toronto. Designer Benson has been a member of the Yacht club for years, and has been designing boats for them since most of the newer owners have been alive, although he is a young man yet. After careful comparison of prices it was found that the boats would be built in quantity at a cost to the Toronto owners of $900 apiece. The Gidley Boat Co. of Penetanguishene, has taken on the contract, and six of the new boats will be in Toronto by the first of May, and the remainder will come during the month. There will be the hot keel kind of racing all summer—and may the best boat and the best yeoman win!

This is a one-design class, and the ten first boats, being all built as one contract, will be as like ten peas. They will measure 25 feet on deck, 20 feet on the waterline, 6 feet 6 inches beam, 1 foot draught and 340 square sail area. They have between friend and enemy hundred pounds of iron ballast, all outside. The rig is high and main sail without gaff or bowsprit, and they have spinnakers. A straight mucron keel, 32 feet long, will help and profile the little yachts are right up to the minute. They have the "raised deck" of such Royal champions as Huskie and Goblin, and will be a very smart-looking fleet. They will be painted white above the water line, with a green boot-top. Cedar planking is used.

The whole is not too early for the Belleville Yacht Club to fall into line and have some of these sloops built.

COOK OF THE JUNIORS WILL UNDERGO OPERATION

Received Injuries at Trenton Match Necessitating This

Bill Cook, of the local Junior O. H. A. team will likely undergo an operation in the City Hospital, Durin the Trenton-Belleville match his arm der was painfully injured, and the bones cannot be set properly without an operation being performed.

The Doctors who have been attending "Bill" state that he is a game lad and bears the excruciating pain unflinchingly.

In the meantime, while it is also rarely hoped that "Bill" will come through all right, the Junior team will be somewhat affected by his absence from the line up.

GRANITES WINNERS IN OVERTIME GAME

Kitchener Player May be Totally Blinded as Result Of Injury

Nothing daunted by the loss of the services of one of the players who has been a major factor in making Kitchener a name to conjure with in the hockey world, the Green and White striped aggregation battled the Canadian champions of Toronto on the ice rink here last night, but were finally forced to acknowledge defeat after ten minutes' overtime had been played. The final score was 3 to 1.

Play had hardly got under way in the opening period when Frank Trubiski was struck in the right eye with the puck and was forced to retire. As the Kitchener player suffers from an affection that renders sight in the left eye almost nil this latest injury to the right eye has rendered him totally blind, although hopes are entertained that he will eventually recover his sight.

WILL LIKELY RETIRE.

If Frank Trubiński, who has starred with Kitchener teams for years, has played his last game in the hockey game, he had the other eye; badly injured when shooting on goal Alex. Romeril accidentally hit Trubiński, striking him above and below the eye, causing a hemorrhage, and he will, as far as Dr. Smirlie Lawson could tell last night, be unable to see for an indefinite time, perhaps for two to seven days. It is just a few years ago that Trubiński collided with Moe Lount in a game at the Arena, and as a result of injuries received was laid up for several months. He finally recovered and played a little during the next winter, but did not show his true form again until the B.P. A. games last December.

With Steel of Canada offered down to 61¾, and not a bid on the morning Stock Exchange list, attention is again drawn to the issue. President Plummer, in Montreal, and rumor has it that his business is to try and get to the root of whatever trouble is causing the stock to be made a market catspaw. The company has continued to pay 7 per cent., largely out of its strong reserves, though it is believed that this action has caused discussion among the board. With the steel business picking up slowly, it is thought that the company might be able to earn a slightly reduced dividend during 1923, and the stock would appear to have discounted a cut of at least one per cent.

Teck-Hughes action creates the impression that the stock will probably back and fill until the terms of the deal are announced to shareholders. One party to the contract informs The Telegram that President Dennison will remain at the head of the merger, others on the street thought, seem moderately sure that there will be a change in control of the company. It is stated today that Teck-Hughes will lay all its cards before shareholders at the annual meeting, presumably this will include a statement as to the situation regarding the company's bonds.

MINES

The McIntyre statement for the final quarter of last year will be published towards the end of next week, and steady though not heavy accumulating appears to be going on in anticipation. It is probable that the stock will remain in the limelight for a month of so following publication as the Miller option on the remainder of the company's stock expires at the end of February. McIntyre appears to have done fairly well, considering, from its western coal venture, for it is understood they will show a small profit, whereas the head of one of the chartered banks in his statement to shareholders stated that the year generally had been a bad one for western coal operators.

WALL STREET

Both the foreign and domestic news is better today and the international crisis which the world has been watching for several days possibly will wear itself out. France has notified the German Government that she does not intend military operation of the mines in the Ruhr district, nor political occupation, out that she is sending only sufficient troops to safeguard the French income. At that she is sending a lot of troops.

CHICAGO WHEAT MARKET

Buying on the part of traders who had been disappointed in looking for a decided setback in prices turned the wheat market briskly upward today at the last.

Failure of any deliver of wheat to undergo today more than fractional declines appeared to have revitalized sellers almost unanimous in a desire to repurchase as the day drew to an end. Earlier the market had shown a tendency to drift lower in the absence of any material demand and with Liverpool quotations weakened by increased offerings from the Argentine and other exporting countries. As a rule, however, holders of wheat go and it gradually become evident that at least for the time being the market was oversold.

Estimates that sections of the winter wheat belt lacking adequate moisture and snow protections had widened to as much as 10,000,000 acres, received considerable notice and had some effect in bringing about the price rally during the late dealings.

Tension over reports touching the Franco-German crisis and other sources of possible European hostilities counted also as an influence toward bolstering of values at the finish.

It was a subject of comment, though, that orders for prompt withdrawal of United States troops from Germany were without any apparent market results, prices here being without a flutter long after the news was out. Corn and oats rose with wheat.

Future prices are: May, 1.18½; July, 1.12; Sept., 1.06¾.

SPECTATOR KILLED AT HOCKEY MATCH

Player's Skate Severs Man's Jugular Vein and He Bleeds to Death

New Hamburg, Jan. 11.—The O.H.A. intermediate game tonight between Seaforth and New Hamburg resulted in the latter defeating Seaforth by 9 to 2. A most lamentable accident occurred during the progress of the game, in which a spectator was killed.

About five minutes before the end of the second period two players collided at the boards. One fell, and his skate struck Mr. E. R. Helmuth, of New Hamburg, a spectator, who was leaning over the boards just below the ear, severing the jugular vein, Dr. R. W. Anderson was called immediately, but, in spite of all efforts, the injured man bled to death in a few minutes. He was formerly in business here as a member of the firm of Appel & Helmuth. He was about 32 years of age, married, and leaves a wife and family.

FRIDAY, JANUARY 12 1923.

THE FRENCH OCCUPATION

The recent startling events consummated in Europe during the past few days, tend to centre our minds backward to the years of the world war and simultaneously cause us to wonder whether or not there will again be such bloodshed and economic upheaval.

Whatever opinion may be held of the wisdom of the French occupation of the Ruhr districts, there can be no existent doubt of its being well calculated to impress the German mind. The French are simply speaking the only language which two generations of Germans have been educated to understand, the language of force and it must be conceded that although polite diplomatic message may mean little, forcible measures possess no ambiguity about them. Germany needs no interpreter of the method now being employed by France. She knows exactly what it means.

We know not, just what result the occupation of Germany will mean, but to France it means a failure if i tdoes not produce reparations, and a disaster, if it discredits and breaks down the republican government of Germany.

The German people are at the present time influenced, more or less, by their magnate Stinnes, who controls the coal properties in the Ruhr district now invaded and his attitude in the matter to date has appeared to be rather stubborn.

Perhaps after he has waited barefoot in the snow for a while, he may be willing to listen to reason.

In the meantime with the aid of Belgium, France is endeavoring to foreclose her mortgage, and Great Britain assumes a quiescent and watchful attitude, while the United States has withdrawn her forces from the Rhine.

Industry is still proceeding in the districts invaded and it remains to be seen, whether or not the Ruhr laborers can be bought with the French franc. French control of German labor with the French franc basis of currency in vogue, rather than the infinitesimal German mark, may keep these industries functioning. The economic possibilities are great for France in the present crisis—She is well aware that if her tribute is not forthcoming by diplomatic effort, the fact of her territorial occupation will convey to the German mind those words of Bismarck when he was in Versailles in 1870 "They forget that we are the stronger and can take what we want."

The shoe is on the other foot just now.

WHEAT BOARD MATTERS

Justification of Hon. Arthur Meighen's wheat-marketing policy has followed closely on the betrayal of the western farmers by the King government and Hon. T. A. Crerar. His proposal for a voluntary wheat-marketing pool, made last session, rejected by farmers. Liberals and the Winnipeg Grain Exchange, is now being advocated by the premier of Saskatchewan and others of equal prominence on the prairie. Mr. Meighen, last session, pointed out that it was constitutionally impossible to revive and operate the compulsory wheat board of the war period. In the election he advocated the adoption of a voluntary wheat board, and was denounced by the farmers. In parliament he advocated the same measure, and explained that the proposed scheme was impracticable and would never be put into effect. His forecast was justified by the failure of the western governments to act, and the western farmer suffered. Now they have reverted to the principle enunciated by Mr. Meighen, and are proposing to do in 1923 what he advocated for 1922. It is safe to forecast that there will be no practical result. There are too many interested in the wheat market monopoly to give an opportunity to the farmer to eliminate the middleman.

MUST BE REDISTRIBUTION

It will evidently be up to the Conservative Opposition in the Legislature to bring about submission of a redistribution bill at the coming session. Recent forecasts of the Drury Government's legislative program give no indication that a redistribution measure is proposed, and there are not lacking indications that the administration would like to side-step what is obviously a plain duty.

Quite a number of rural counties, at present electing two or three members to the Provincial House, have little more population than some urban ridings represented by one man. An equitable example is offered by Middlesex. The rural constituencies elect three members from a population of about 40,000, while London, with 60,000, has but one representative. Census figures, now available, show similar disparity elsewhere.

Representation by population was won after a hard battle in this country; it ought not to be necessary to fight for it all over again. Failure to bring in a redistribution bill at this session could be attributed to nothing but petty partisan politics and an offence against democracy on the part of a government led by a premier who styles the group of his allegiance the "People's Party".

PASSING COMMENT

According to the enforcement officials New York had a "dry" Christmas. The casualty list, however, tells another story, which is to the effect that a dozen died from poison "hooch," and there are few odozen in the hospital fro mthe same cause.

There appears to be a tendency in some sections of Ontario to reduce teachers' salaries from the high level attained the past three or four years. The Public School Board of Sault Ste. Marie passed a resolution last week giving the teachers there notice that their salaries would be reduced five per cent., starting February 1,

It's a long, long way from the coal mine to the coal bin.

Naturally, the French invasion is having a depressing effect upon the German people. Also upon the German mark.

"The elect" means the superior and flawless. This applies to the elect, understand, not the elected.

Every day and in every way the Christmas toys are going to the scrap-heap faster and faster.

The great lines always are timely. "Who steals my purse steals trash" would serve just as well in Russia to-day.

HERE AND THERE

CENTENARY OF LOUIS PASTEUR

One of the most notable anniversaries in the scientific world occurred on December 27, which commemorated the birth, one hundred years ago, of the great French scientist, Louis Pasteur. The French Government set apart an appropriation of 2,000,000 francs with which to celebrate properly the hundredth anniversary of the man whom they regard as "The Symbol of French Science." "Pasteur, like many other great men, was of humble birth. His father was a tanner, of the little village of Dole, in the Jura mountains of France. Louis was an only son, and his youth was a struggle, first to obtain a living and next to achieve the scholarship necessary to carry on his scientific investigations and discoveries. Yet millions all over the world are to-day debtors to this great man for the benefits which he conferred on humanity. Among his discoveries were the origin and the transmission of diseases through germs. He not only taught to medical men the theory of sterilization but he opened up to them the great world of microscopia, invisible to the eye but working havoc in hospitals and among peoples where contagion may grow into epidemics. Through his experiments with fermentation Pasteur discovered the principle of infection and the means of its control in disease. He also shattered the commonly accepted dogmas of the spontaneity of fermentation, the spontaneity of life and the spontaneity of disease. His discovery of antiseptics revolted the death-rate in hospitals and checked fatal epidemics. Sir Joseph Lister credited Pasteur as the source of the Lister system to antiseptic surgery. He was the author of the "Pasteur treatment for rabies," and his discovery of the germ that was killing the silk worm in France saved the silk industry of that country. Diseases in animals also came within the scope of Pasteur's discoveries. Among these were the cause of anthrax in sheep and cattle and the method of vaccination to protect animals against this disease; the nature and treatment of hydrophobia in the dog and its corresponding disease, "rabies" in man; the discoveries in cause of erysipelas and other animal diseases. Pasteur cared nothing for wealth or fame. His life was given to the service of his fellowmen in the alleviation of suffering and in battling with disease. His motto was: "Work hard; honor your country; put spiritual things above material and other people before yourself; have courage; have patience." And to-day the world acknowledges the supremacy of these great virtues and pays its tribute of its gratitude to the man who so signally illustrated them in a life of devotion to his fellowmen.

UPS AND DOWNS

I've a joyful sort of feeling
That abolishes a frown
When I hear there is a prospect
Of the car fares coming down.

But I notice that my grocer
(May his conscience never croak)
Quickly ends my jubilation—
Butter's up again this week.

Thus the prices play at see-saw
In an irritating way;
If last week some things were falling
Something else goes up to-day.

Now in life I wish to soar,
Undismayed by bitter cups;
But in everyday expenses
I prefer more downs that ups!

PRESS OPINIONS

THEY PASS US BY

(Woodstock Sentinel-Review)

Hon. George P. Graham tells of having met on a train in New York state recently fifteen American men delegates to a convention, only one of whom could name a Canadian public man, and that one mentioned "Mr. Lemieux, governor-general of Canada."

On the other hand, it is possible to point to some American publications which occasionally discuss Canadian public men and public issues with intelligence. There is no doubt, however, that American papers take but little interest in the affairs of Canada in comparison with the interest Canadian papers take in the affairs of the United States. Perhaps the American people feel that their own affairs are of sufficient importance to occupy their full attention; nevertheless they cannot expect to have their own affairs as they ought to know them without taking an enlightened interest in no near and so important a neighbor.

IGNORANCE AS TO TAX

(Guelph Herald)

The least the Dominion Government can do is to see that the new tax method which goes into effect on January 1st, is that its conditions are better known than they are. Business men nor any others should be held responsible for the working of another system of taxation with which they have not been made acquainted, and unless the Government is prepared to throughly advertise the intricate application of the new tax in a public manner through the press of the country, copies of the law should be furnished to all those who do business.

It is time the indignation of the business public vented upon the Government for its neglect in this matter. The last few years the most intricate and harassing changes have been made in the imposition of taxes, which the officials themselves do not readily understand, and the taxpayers of the country are fined if they fail to understand them and innocently violate them.

A system of publicity should be adopted in regard to these matters that will ensure the exact understanding of the law well in advance of its enforcement.

NOT CAUGHT AT IT YET.

(Kitchener Record)

In England the purchasing of a title may be made a criminal offence which reminds us of the man who inquired whether there was a criminal lawyer in town. "Yes," came the reply, "but we have not been able to prove it yet."

TEACHERS SALARIES

(Montreal Star)

If rural education is ever to be what it ought to be, the rst essential is to increase the salaries of rural teachers to a point which will give them confidence, inspire them with hope, enable them to live at least in comfort, place them beyond the greed of patronage from their pupils' parents, and last, but by no means least, enable rural school boards to insist upon and be in a position to procure the best of teaching material.

HEAVIEST SNOW IN YEARS

Both East and West Tell the Same Story

Moncton, N. B., Jan. 11.—Monctonians today are digging themselves out of the worst snowstorm in many years. The storm set in yesterday morning, and did not let up until about 4.30 p.m. Drifts are piled ten and twelve feet high.

Brandon, Man., Jan. 11.—The worst blizzard of the winter struck this district Wednesday with the result that country roads are blocked, drifts are several feet high in the district, and travel in the country will be hard going for several days. Eight inches of snow fell during the storm, which makes a total of 35 inches this winter to date. Up to a similar date last winter only 15 inches had fallen.

URBAN SCHOOL TRUSTEES TO MEET

The Urban School Trustee Association which was organized in St. Catharines in 1919 and held their first annual meeting in Ottawa in 1920, in Hamilton in 1921, and in Windsor in 1922, will this year meet in Brantford, February 20th, March 1st and 2nd. The executive are busy preparing the programme and expect every city in the Province will be represented.

"It's just impossible to get that boy filled up," sighed his mother as she handed him another piece of bread and jam.

"Still, I notice your husband is nearly always full," remarked the canny neighbor, who was calling.

Wit and Humor

APPROPRIATE

The speaker's subject was:
"Why you, for health, should walk."
And that is why, no doubt,
It was rambling talk.

The speaker's subject was;
"The athlete's destination."
That's why it was, no doubt,
A running conversation.

The speaker's subject was:
"The Altitude's the High,"
And that is why, no doubt,
The lecture was so dry.

Miner Thanks Tanlac For Putting Him Back on Job, Helps Fill Orders and Has Quit Coughing

"When Tanlac helped my little grandaughter so wonderfully I thought maybe the medicine would help me too, and since I've taken it I am feeling like a new man. I can't find words to tell how glad I am." This grateful statement was made recently by John Jones, 19 Sterling St., London, Ontario.

"I came here a year or so ago from Calgary where I was a miner but had to quit on account of asthma," he continued, "I was badly run down, and then I got a bad case of pneumonia hat knocked me out completely. I couldn't get my strength back, had no appetite, was unable to work and didn't know what it was to get a good night's sleep.

"By the time I took three bottles of Tanlac I was eating just anything, sleeping like a log, and have been on the job ever since. My asthma doesn't bother me so much now, and I'm a man between me and my little grand-daughter at meal time, for we both have splendid appetites."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists.

ROBERT FORKE PROGRESSIVE LEADER SPEAKS AT BRANDON

(By Canadian Press.)

Brandon, Jan. 10.—Amid approval of a "Dominion convention of the organized farmers" was expressed by a resolution of the United Farmers of Manitoba, passed unanimously at their convention here this afternoon, and the suggestion was sent along to the Canadian Council of Agriculture that that body undertake the necessary arrangements.

The convention did not undertake to say when such a gathering should be held, how it should be constituted, or whether it should deal with all subjects or if politics should be excluded. It was pointed out that the resolution was not inconsistent with the tentative action taken by the Progressive members of Parliament at their Winnipeg conference looking towards a national convention.

In the discussion of various political resolutions there was casual talk of the "broadening-out policy," put some remarks from Robert Forke, the new Progressive leader, who is to address the convention on the political situation Thursday evening.

"I am as democratic as any farmer," said Mr. Forke, "and I am in full agreement to come from the people. But we must have some sort of Dominion organization if we are to get anywhere. He thought that perhaps they were "running democracy to earth." Mr. Forke told the delegates that they were afraid of the word "party", but the Progressive members at Ottawa held exactly just like the old parties, and proved it they could do nothing effective. There was no connection, he said, between himself and his fellow representatives except that they were all Progressives. There was no organization agency. So long, he said, as the constituency organizations had control of the nominations of candidates and of the funds, no central organization could take away their democratic control of the situation.

"Broadening out should start at the bottom and should not be worked out from the top," was the sentiment voiced by Delegate Douglas Hill. Men of any calling but of kindred view might be taken into the local organization.

It was decided finally, after the greater part of the afternoon session had been taken up with a political discussion, that the matter should be left over until after Mr. Forke's address tomorrow night.

Mr. Justice Orde yesterday reserved judgment in the action brought by John T. Smith, Toronto, against the Attorney-General of Ontario in which he sought a declaration that Ontario is not a prohibition Province because native wines are sold. Constable argruments was heard from counsel on both sides. Mr. Justice said that if he did declare that the Province was not a prohibition State that the Government's position, that it was, would not be overruled, but would remain.

BOSTON BAKED BEANS

Pick over 1 qt. navy beans, cover with cold water and let soak over night; in the morning drain and cover with cold water, heat slowly to boiling point and cook until skin bursts. (Test beans by taking up a teaspoonful and blowing on them. The skin will burst if cooked enough. Beans thus tested should be thrown away). Drain beans, scald rind of ½ lb. fat pork, cut in ½ in. slices and put in bottom of bean pot with 1 onion sliced. Cut enough rind of remainder pork every ½ in. at right angles, making cute 1 in. in deep. Turn beans into pot and bury pork in beans, leaving rind exposed. Mix 1½ tablespoons salt, ½ tablespoon mustard, 3 tablespoons molasses or brown sugar and 1 cup boiling water to cover beans. Cover bean pot, put in oven and bake slowly 6 or 8 hrs., uncovering the last hour of cooking that rind may become brown and crisp. Add water as needed. Onions may be omitted. Turn from bean pot onto serving platter and cover beans with a "blanket of fried onions".

THIS MAN AN OLD OFFENDER

Ottawa Man's 105th Appearance for Drunkenness—Can Stop Any Time He Says

Ottawa, Jan. 10.—"You should be nearly run out of excuses by this time," were the words with which Magistrate Hopewell greeted Alfred Christie, aged 60 years, in Police Court today on Christie's 105th charge of drunkenness. Most of Christie's convictions, which date back to December 13, 1894, when he was fined for drunkenness, are for that offence, but a few are for theft, and he has served a number of short penal terms.

In response to the magistrate's query if Christie still held any hopes of reforming, Christie replied: "Oh, yes, I can stop any time I like." The magistrate pointed out that he had been lenient with him shortly before Christmas and it had not produced any beneficial result. He was remanded until tomorrow.

POSITION OF ONTARIO

IMMIGRATION POLICY Has Her Agency in London But Willing to Co-operate United States Field Discussed

Ottawa, Jan. 11.—The position of Ontario in respect to immigration was set forth by Hon. Manning Doherty, Provincial Minister of Agriculture, at the continuation conference of Federal and Provincial representatives. Mr. Doherty stated that Ontario is somewhat differently situated from the other provinces in that it has its own immigration agency and agent-general in London, and recently, with the approval of the Federal authorities, entered into an agreement with the overseas settlement board of Great Britain. He expressed, however, a willingness to co-operate fully with the Dominion Department in carrying out any policy that is initiated.

Questions Not Answered.

The provincial representatives are not in a position to specifically answer yet all the questions submitted by Hon. Charles Stewart, under three heads: The number of immigrants actually wanted, the classes desired, and from what sources they should be drawn. The common wish is that British stock should predominate but the conditions prevailing in the different provinces or even in parts of provinces are not similar. There is a pronounced desire for agricultural class is most demanded, but the great number of artisans who have gone to the States have found ordinary wages, especially in building trades, suggests a lowering of the bars to certain classes of skilled labor.

The department has suggested that the provinces locate the immigrants and also keep in touch with them once they are settled, but this has not been accepted to as yet. Considerable attention is being paid to the class of renters who are to be tried out. Many who are willing to embark on a rent in a position to purchase land at the outset. Another departmental proposal, which cannot be acceded to without consultation is that when the Dominion prepays the passage of household workers the provinces should be responsible for reimbursement, they in turn collecting from the immigrant.

Today's meeting is taking up immigration from the United States of which the Minister thinks there is considerable prospect from the middle west, while Quebec is particularly interested in repatriation from the New England States.

P. E. COUNTY'S TREASURE SHIP

They Appreciate the Coal Supplied Across the Bay

Those who remember the steamer Aragon as the queen of the winter, abandoned on Salmon Point Reef, and who were among the crowd on Hepburn Hill, Cape, to witness her arrival, transformed into a new vessel, as she plowed her way through the ice to the wharf three weeks ago, found it hard to recognize her as the same and the same boat. And those who realized what her coming meant to the residents of Prince Edward county, will be quick to again congratulate Captain Heffernan on the splendid showing the vessel has made. We have been reliably informed that a dividend of $8.00 per cent. for the season has just been paid by the owning and operating company, of which Captain Heffernan is a member. Slightly more than before the vessel could be repaired and placed in commission.—Picton Times.

NOT NEEDED

Frank Yeigh gave his entertainment in an Ontario town and a kindhearted lady grasped his hand, as she italicized every word:

"I certainly did — enjoy — your lecture."

Whereupon the complimented party gallantly replied: "Thank you, madam; your evidently are an intelligent lady."

"Oh," came the doubtful rejoinder, the well meant, "one doesn't need to be intelligent to enjoy such an evening."

The boy told his story, how he had his furs and dogs stolen, and how he had traveled "blind baggage" to Toronto in search of the thieves. The prospectors questioned him and were satisfied that he was a native of the Athabasca. Jones is to give him an opportunity of making a trip with him into the Hudson Bay district.

CORRECT BURNING OF COAL IF YOU HAVE SUPPLY

How to Burn This Commodity Economically

BUILDING THE FIRE

In dealing with smoke let us bear in mind continually that we are burning coals rich in by-products distilled off at low temperatures apparently as gases and smoke. It is our problem to get the most heat out of our coal by burning these gases and thus eliminate smoke and soot.

There is no excuse for smoke and we can free the air of our city from these foul gases by proper firing of the fuel. START WITH BUILDING THE FIRE.

In kindling a fire the general practice has been to clean the grates from ashes, close the damper in the pipe leading to the chimney, open the draft door in the ash pit. Then put in some paper, and kindling, putting the larger pieces on top, and after the fire is lighted throw on from two to four scoops of green coal. (By green coal we mean fresh coal taken from the coal bin.)

WHAT HAPPENS?

The kindling catches fire from the paper and the heat generated begins to drive off the volatile matter from the coal, which goes up the chimney unburned and into the atmosphere as smoke and gas, simply because no provision was made for burning these gases which are of high heat value.

No one would think of sitting beside a leaking gas jet and inhaling the fumes, but yet daily we deliver these gases into the atmosphere through our chimneys causing waste in every sense of the words.

It takes considerable time to get a good fire going in the furnace following this method, and it is most unsatisfactory because of the smoke and soot made and fuel wasted.

Compare lighting coal to lighting a candle. Are they parallel cases? Isn't the wick of a candle the kindling used in a fire? And isn't the tallow the fuel?

Would you burn a candle upside down? Try it and watch it smoke.

If readers of these articles will carefully follow the methods explained below, you will build your fires without smoking and soaking your neighbors to death and have your furnace delivering maximum heat within seven to ten minutes after lighting. And best of all, you are getting the heat from the coal you placed in the furnace.

Compare the following method with the old way and see if 90 per cent of your trouble is not eliminated:

1st. Close check draft in breeching and open draft in ash pit.

2nd. Clean grates of all ashes.

3rd. Cover the bare grates about three inches deep with green coal of a size not larger than a goose egg or three inches in diameter. It is well to have the fine coal along with the "nut" sizes.

Note—The success of your fire lies in the size of coal with which you cover the grates. Do not use large pieces.

4th. Place on top of this coal plenty of paper covered with kindling—a few shingles are good. (Use plenty of paper and kindling.)

5th. Light the paper and close the door and go upstairs.

If instructions have been carefully followed you will have a roaring fire from the first, delivering maximum heat within ten minutes after lighting and without smoke.

The reason is this: The heat generated by the kindling begins to drive off the volatile in the coal which is below the kindling. These gases rise and are burned with the flames from the kindling, producing more heat, driving off more volatile gases. The fire burns down, not up.

Watch your chimney during the process and see if it doesn't beat the old smoky way.

The next article will be on firing after the fire is once started.

MUSIC and DRAMA

"UNDER SATAN SLEEPS" KEEPS AUDIENCE AWAKE

Jack Holt immortalized the role of Fighting Parson in his second Paramount starring picture, "Under Satan Sleeps" which was shown with personal effects at Griffin's Theatre last night.

He is cast as a fighting, two-fisted, out fighting parson, but a crook who poses as a preacher to ward off suspicion while he robs the safe in the bank in a small western mining town. But the faith of the people of the town in him and his confidence in a dying dance hall girl, who has been mortally wounded in an effort to shield him from a gunman's bullet awakens faith in himself and he finishes by returning not only himself but the stolen money.

Pritist Brunette plays the leading feminine role—she dances half you pristor's daughter, and the other colorful characterizations are splendidly portrayed by Wade Boteler, J. P. Lockney, Mabel Baron, Will R. Walling, Fred Huntly, Betty Francisco, Bobby Mack, Sylvia Ashton and Herbert Standing, of the Paramount stock company.

Lloyd Hamilton in an amusing Mermaid comedy called, "The Adviser" a beautiful Travelogue with many interesting shots in British Columbia, and a thrilling chapter of "Buffalo Bill" adventure story completes an entertaining program, all of which will be repeated again Tomorrow, matinee and night, the road show "The Dover Road" holding the boards tonight.

GLADYS BROCKWELL AND STUART HOLMES PLAY LEADING ROLES IN "PAID BACK"

People have a habit of making decisions and thanking that Fate will let them stand. "Paid Back" is a Universal all star film play which presents a satire on these same people at the largest theater. It pictures a woman who thought she would ruin her own life in order to ruin a man's, and when she got nicely settled in self-satisfied purgatory the hand of Fate came along and ruined her into happiness.

It isn't quite that simple, however. If it was, there wouldn't be any need for the remarkable all star cast that impersonates the figures in this vivid drama. Gladys Brockwell, Stuart Holmes, Mahlon Hamilton, Edna Murphy, Kate Price, Arthur Stewart Hull, Lillian West and Wilfred Lucas weren't engaged for a wishy-washy story. They were selected because the elements of th story demand fine acting.

Yedwyl Movies, "Hello Mars," a Century comedy, Pathe News, and a Kinogram were exhibited during the evening.

CHARLES CHERRY IN BRILLIANT COMEDY AT GRIFFIN'S TONIGHT

Guthrie McClintic brings to Griffin's Opera House, Tonight, for one night only his well liked and greatly endorsed production of "The Dover Road," a comedy by A. A. Milne, author of "Mr. Pim Passes By," with Charles Cherry at the head of an excellent company, which includes Molly Pearson, Kathleen Comegys, Reginald Mason, Lyonel Watts, George Riddell and others. "The Dover Road" played two months at the Bijou Theatre, New York, breaking the record for long engagements of that house. It was the first Maughan play ever to have a premier in America, and holds the record for continuous performances of any English play ever produced in New York. The London production made last June stopped after Mr. McClintic's presentation by particular request of the author. The play is said to be the best brilliant of all the Milne comedies and acted almost flawlessly.

PATIENTS AT COUE CLINIC BENEFITTED

Few Cases Failed of Success Through Incorrect Mental Attitude

New York, January 18.—A man who said he was a lawyer from Boston, Mass., and that he sometimes averaged seven yawns a minute, was among the thirty-three persons who attended Emile Coue's clinic at the McDowell Club. Also there were several persons who seemingly were not out and out acceptors of the French pharmacist's creed of healthy-by-thought.

The yawner took the course at the clinic last Saturday. He reported great improvement, and sat through the proceedings without a single gape. However, when he was leaving he had a yawning spell and declared apparent was that of a man possessed of a nervous itch, who said that Coue-ism had completely cured him. Believe a complete victory. He said he noticed the itch was disappearing last Saturday afternoon, when he left the hall. It was not present and that now it has some complexity.

Only four of the thirty-three persons who worried the big semi-circle facing Coue failed to say they felt much better for the lecture. They asserted that the treatment of 150 physicians had not helped him, was duly impressed with Coue made him participant in his handicapping demonstrations. One of them, that of the man seeking aid was a cripple by to a wheel-chair, accompanied by his brother. It was obvious the ambulatory question would not straighten those pathetically twisted limbs, and the committee in charge, with a consultation, informed the mother that Coue would not attempt to aid his case.

One woman, supporting herself on crutches, was there seeking relief.

"Why can't I throw my crutches away, so they will at Nancy?" she asked. "Why can't he cure me, too?"

A woman member of the committee explained to her that reports of cures of cripples at Nancy were exaggeration, and the Coue was effective only in mental cases. The woman left plainly disappointed.

Pausing before a woman whose extending pale face was cushioned and crossed by a nervous switching, Coue recognized her as a patient at the last clinic and his face brightened.

"Ah, madame," he said, cordially "I congulse you—you were here Saturday."

"Yes," was the reply, "but I've got worse. My headache is much worse."

"Then you have not been using the method," said Coue.

"Oh, yes, I have been trying to."

"You have not been trying right thinking right. You have fear. You must not have fear."

The patient smiled as Coue passed on. When he was asked about her he said that it was not his fault that the method, but of her failure to think correctly. There was a woman, well dressed, of middle age whom Coue tried the hand-clasping demonstration. But each time she brooke her hands apart.

"Say, I can't, I can't," counselled Coue, but it was of no avail and finally he informed the patient that she, too, failed to think correctly.

MANITOBA IS A NETWORK OF STILLS

Moderation League President Makes Charge Before Farmers' Convention

Wants Quebec's System

Beer and Wine League Pleads for its program and Prohibitionists Reply

Brandon, Jan. 9.—A debate on the Manitoba Temperance Act was staged tonight before the delegates to the convention of United Farmers of Manitoba. F. W. Russell, president of the Manitoba Moderation League, spoke first in defence of the plan under which the League pressed Government sale of liquor for beverage purposes.

"We are pledged," said Mr. Russell, "as your are, to the promotion of temperance and sobriety in this province. We believe prohibition has failed and that temperance and sobriety best can be furthered by the modification we have put forward. Moderation Bill meant that the traffic which already exists shall be taken out of the hands of bootleggers and moonshiners and put in the hands of Government commissioners, while the profits would go to relieve the hard-pressed taxpayer."

Mr. Russell said—the city of Winnipeg was "flooded" with liquor. The province was "a network of stills." He described the Moderation League as a social service agency.

T. J. Murray, counsel for the Beer and Wine League, who followed, briefly suggested that the referendum by, instead, should include the proposition other than that of the Moderation League, for instance, that of the Beer and Wine League, which would permit consumption of beer and wine in homes and in hotel dining rooms with meals.

Miss M. M. McMurray, a young Winnipeg lawyer, opened the case on behalf of the existing Manitoba Temperance Act.

Miss McMurray analyzed the Moderation League's Bill and declared that powers on the proposed commission, which would be "impelled to the widest possible extension of the liquor traffic." The Bill, she said, satisfied the drinker who was "on the fringe" of the habitual drinker, and the hotels had suggested the beer and wine measure. As to the latter, she "doubted if all hotel men could be trusted not to overstep the boundaries of the bill, and she was afraid that the result would include a public bar. Such a thing would be very wet, indeed, and the provision as to meals would be mere a subterfuge.

It conferred vast and autocratic powers on the commission, she declared.

Rev. Hugh Dobbin, Social Service secretary of the Methodist Church in Western Canada, concluded the debate with an address on "The Challenge of the Hour." If Government sale for beverage purposes dominated the bootlegger, how could one account, he said, for the persistence of bootlegging in British Columbia? Mr. Dobson read from newspaper advertisements of officials that proved, "that there was still a great amount of bootlegging, that hotel bars were forced to drink drinking places and that there was a good deal of general lawlessness."

A DOCTOR IN A TIN BOX!

Sounds strange, does it not? Yet that is how Mr. Archer says Zam-Buk is regarded by his family. Mr. Archer, who is a member of the family of the late Sir George Cartier, is Justice of the Peace and Assistant Clerk of the Circuit Court, Montreal. His first discovered the wonderful power of Zam-Buk by using it for eczema, which it completely ended. Since then his family is never without it.

"Allow me to express my gratitude," he says, "for the benefit I have derived from the use of Zam-Buk. I have proved that it is, without doubt, the finest remedy for eczema, its general healing and cooling properties are immense. We call it 'Our Family Doctor,' and are never without it."

Mothers should see that Zam-Buk is always handy, for not only does it end pain, draw out inflammation and prevent blood poisoning, but it heals skin diseases and blemishes in the shortest time possible. All dealers, 50c. box.

Here and There

Point Grey, B.C.—The approximate total cost of the new area that is to be developed by the C. P. R. between Thirty-seventh Avenue and Forty-first Avenue, and Granville Street and Maple Street, will be $1,182,270, of which the municipality will be asked to pay $93,445 for the construction of sewers, which will eventually revert to the municipality. This statement was made by Mr. Newton J. Ker, land agent for the C. P. R., at the Point Grey Council meeting.

Winnipeg.—"Never in the history of the west has grain moved more freely and with greater despatch, and also in greater quantities over Canadian Pacific lines than during the past season," said Charles Murphy, general manager in charge of western lines. "Up to the present time," Mr. Murphy continued, "there hasn't been the slightest congestion on western lines." As an illustration of prompt movement the general manager said that fully 85 per cent. of the season's landed was moved east of Winnipeg daily.

Winnipeg.—Speaking of the record crop movement in the Canadian west during the past season and the part the railways played in the marketing of it, D. C. Coleman, vice-president of the Canadian Pacific Railway, addressing the Kiwanis Club luncheon here, declared Winnipeg was now the greatest wheat market in the world in the point of receipts. He quoted figures showing that receipts for the three months ending November 30 at Chicago totalled 8,873,500 bushels, Minneapolis 45,845,100 bushels, while inspections at Winnipeg for the same period amounted to 106,231,813 bushels.

Referring to the shipment of grain over the Canadian Pacific Railway from September 1, Mr. Coleman said an average of 1,016 cars were loaded each day in Winnipeg for transportation east which meant that a loaded train left here for the lakes every 45 minutes during the 21-day period.

Calgary.—Very considerable interest is being taken in Calgary and throughout Southern Alberta and Saskatchewan in the completion of the gap on the Canadian Pacific Weyburn-Lethbridge branch line, which has just been opened for traffic. It is stated a great stimulus will be given to the manufacturing of clay products in Saskatchewan, making it commercially feasible to use coal from the Lethbridge fields for the development of the clays in the south-eastern part of the province.

At the present time there is very little being done in the development of the clays; lack of capital and lack of technical knowledge have been responsible for this tardiness. The completion of the branch line, however, it is expected, will centre attention to the development of what some people are firmly inclined to believe, will be a new and important industry in the West.

Moose Jaw.—After being in the employ of the Canadian Pacific Railway for forty years, William Pearce, locomotive engineer, of this city, has retired, at the age of 66 years. Mr. Pearce joined the Moose Jaw roundhouse staff in 1882. The following year he was promoted to fireman, and shortly after handled the shovel on the first Trans-Canada train, over the Moose Jaw-Medicine Hat division. In 1887, Mr. Pearce was placed on the "hog-head" side of the engine, and handled the throttle on the first locomotive that hauled a passenger train from Moose Jaw to North Portal.

Mr. Pearce was one of the first to homestead in the Moose Jaw district, and after leaving his home in North Dorchester, Ont., he travelled to the end of the steel, then at Winnipeg, and completed his journey to the district by means of an ox cart. The days of the railroad was too strong for Mr. Pearce, and he abandoned his homestead to enter the employ of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company shortly afterwards, when the steel had reached Moose Jaw.

Quebec.—A beautiful booklet which describes the past and present of the Chateau Frontenac has been issued by the C. P. R. and has been sent by the thousands of copies to all leading hotels in Europe and the United States. It is magnificently a work of art, complete with illustrations, and contains a complete history of the "grand chateau." Not only this, but the early history of French Canada from the first landing of Jacques Cartier to the battle on the Plains of Abraham, and from that time on. The cover is very appropriately adorned by a picture of the Count de Frontenac, with the Chateau Frontenac in the background. This book gives interior and exterior views of the hotel, and affords a description of Quebec, "the ancient capital of the new world."

Woman's Sphere

NEW USES FOR BUCKLES

Most women admire bead buckles worn this season as ornamentation of dresses and shoes. A great many would like to wear them, but hesitate at paying the high prices asked for the buckles at the stores. But any woman who can string beads can make of beaded buckles. Provided she knows the correct method, her buckles will be just as good as if they bought in the stores, and this at a cost within the reach of the most modest pocketbook. The only high-priced home made buckles are those made from steel or gold cut steels. And though these will cost, for materials, more than $1.75, when one considers the prices asked for them, bought ready made, the cost is extremely low.

The beads for a pair of ordinary buckles will cost not more than thirty cents. Fifteen cents a dozen for two bunches will make two buckles. Steel beads cost around seventy-five cents per bunch. There are some cut steel black beads which are as expensive as steel, but it is not necessary to use these to have pretty black buckles, as thin cheaper ones answering the purpose.

The method of making the buckles is simple. The secret of success lies in first stringing the beads on fine cotton wire. If you try to sew them one by one on the foundation, the buckles will have a ragged appearance which is not desirable. Buy a spool of copper wire, very fine. Thirty-two wire is a good number. Twenty-seventy-eight will do, but nothing coarser than that. The beads will thread on a wire much better than on a needle. They can be threaded on the wire right from the strings on which they come, at a saving of time and patience.

A small piece of the stiffest buckram obtainable will answer for the foundation. Cut both foundations at the same time exactly alike. If one is correct and made first it will be nearly impossible to get the second exactly the same size. Cover the buckram with white bead of material which will look well under the beads you are going to use, though it does not show by silver. Oval buckles are the favorite, though the square ones are. I think the most attractive. Begin by running the wire through the buckram, leaving a small piece of the wire to go over to the back of the buckle, and fastening it securely in place with small stitches. Sew a tiny stitch between every bead, making the beads stand out around the edge of the foundation, and being sure they are so close together that the stitches do not show. If an oval buckle is being made, after the first row is complete, continue sewing around and round till the center is reached.

It is not necessary to put a stitch between every bead after the first row, a stitch every third bead or two being sufficient to fasten the rows firmly in place. See that the rows, as well as the beads, are kept close together as possible. In case you are making square or oblong buckles, be very careful in turning the corners that no bare spaces are left exposed. When the foundation is entirely covered with rows of beads, put the end of the wire through the foundation and fasten it in place in the back.

For white pumps, lovely effects may be obtained with the crystal beads in pale shades, such as white, pink, lavender, pink, and delicate green. Sometimes buckles are made with borders or centers of contrasting beads, as in the large buckles shown above. The outside is round steel beads, the centre cut steel, and the space between black cut beads. Sometimes the centre of the buckles is filled in with a large flat fancy bead, such as can be bought at the bead stores, or art counters.

These beaded buckles make ideal gifts and give the needed touch to the new gown or shoes.

AND THEN THE ALARM WENT OFF.

It's come at last.
Oh, joyful day!
The hour has struck
"I'll raise you," pay."

MUSIC

Is the most wondrous and most beautiful art,
Whose breathing surprises all;
Thy works may be rivaled by no ephemeral phantom,
Or simple, lackaisa as are the heart.

Depictor of the very heart of man,
Portrayer of life's many, varied moods,
Combining the charms of melodies
Lend us life's ever-changing scenes to scan.

The ever dream inspiring symphony,
Waving around a simple melody,
Those harmonies of melodies combined
Which with the eye of soul alone we see.

How like a prisoner without the chains,
Free but for many bonds within that bind.
We wander here and there through many, mods,
Soul wandering led by thy melodious strains.

From babbling brooks to mighty thunderous storm,
The soul views every passing, changing scene;
Restless emotions stirred like wind
Ideals, renewed and inspirations born.

With lightest pleasure or with deepest pain,
We view new incidents or old recall,
The supreme fickle day we see portray,
Or childhood's happy days we live again.

Hope, sorrow, joy, flit through his waking dream.
Comfort contentment and remorse are there;
Love, reverence, eye revenge and all-times hate,
With all these moods our minds, so restless, team.

O music, thou most wond'rous, beauteous art,
Thy work, thy duty should be doubly clear,
The heav'nly words which arouse our passions' sense.
Should never of thy pure, true self be part.

But an inspired wings of melodies,
Love, reverence, purity, should be the theme.
Of all thy truly wond'rous abilities,
Then, then thy works a work divine will be.

Cream Cookies.

(By Aylmer Macpherson)

Three-quarters cup of sour cream, 2 teaspoon hot water, 1 level teaspoon soda, ¾ cup sugar, 1½ cups flour, ¾ teaspoon salt, ½ cup walnut meats. Dissolve the soda in hot water, and add to the cream. Sift the dry ingredients, and add the cream; then put in the walnuts. Drop by spoonfuls on to a greased pan. Bake till brown. Remove from the pan while warm, and lay on a brown paper to cool.

Tarnish Removed.

A cloth dipped in ammonia, rubbed on the tarnished brass before any metal polish is applied, will brighten it quickly.

Avoid Those Pests.

Pails used for scrubbing should never be put away until absolutely dry. This also applies to floor cloths and the scrubbing brush. Cockroaches are easily attracted to damp brushes and cloths.

Mending Lace.

A novel way of mending a hole in lace is to put a piece of paper under the hole and stitch on the machine until the hole is filled. Then pick out the paper. Use very fine thread for this.

Pineapple Pie.

One pint milk, one tablespoon butter, one can grated pineapple. Heat in double boiler; yolks of three eggs, one cup sugar, two tablespoons cornstarch. Mix well, add to milk, stir until thick, then pour into baked crust. Place meringue on top, and brown.

Jam Frosting.

Cream three tablespoons of butter and one cup confectioner's sugar. Add half a cup of any fruit jam and whip in enough more sugar to make it stiff for frosting. Spread on small cup cakes or slices of fruit cake.

Jane, the forester's wife, had been waiting emotional for some minutes, not wishing to intrude upon Nola's evident preoccupation. There was some thing strange and mysterious to her in the fact that while she was near enough to touch wife her hand this strange guest of hers, had also so desired, she knew that her thoughts had in fact stripped the bounds of her surroundings, and had travelled miles away. She waited patiently until Nola turned toward the settee.

"The stranger is delicious, ma'am, she said naively, and then tearfully: "my husband and son find it that quite wrong, you know."

"I wish I could forget the things he says, ma'am," Jane said, with a shudder of horror. 'My husband says,' she added impressively, 'that it is not fit I should hear the awful things he is saying, 'not fit or safe!'

"He must be very ill!' Nola remarked thoughtfully, as she made her way to the room.

"You will not go near him?' Jane pleaded, 'you will surely not go near him, ma'am!' and she put out her hand to detain her.

'Of course I'll see him, my faithful, foolish Jane ,' she said, a bright smile lighting up her face, and banishing any trace of the recent sorrow which had clouded it. 'He is a poor, sick, demented creature and needs care and kindness, and we must do our best.' But the look which met her gaze, to say other than the strange woman, might have amply justified Jane's solicitude.

Blackman was in a perfect frenzy of fever and fear, and was fighting the two men with extraordinary determination and energy, taxing their united efforts to hold him; while at the same time he talked with amazing rapidity in a medley of European languages.

We know that he had picked up a very full vocabulary of foreign tongues in his wanderings, but the chief feature was that his long-practised habit of secrecy clung to him even in his state of madness. Another of his points to spoil his mother tongue it was in a whisper as though fearful of being heard and understood.

Nola observed him closely for a few minutes without moving, as he lay exhausted after one of these fearful outbursts, and then touched his wrists lightly to feel his pulse. Slight as the touch was, it roused him like a shock of an electric battery and with a look of fiendish hatred, he sprang at the throat of an imaginary enemy, the fingers of his left hand working with convulsive fierceness and tenacity, while the right hand drove home the death stroke. Then, with a hideous smile of satisfied ferocity, he went through all the actions of wiping the death-dealing weapon and putting it away for future use.

It was a sight, unspeakably horrible, and held all the occupants of the room spell-bound. Then suddenly he started back with an eager look, as of a man listening; then crouched and waited with a look of extreme cunning; pressed by he levelled an imaginary pistol and fired, and after staring into space with intense eagerness, drew a long breath of rest and satisfaction, as though a veil had suddenly fallen over his evil nature; and then falling back, limp and helpless, he lay as one asleep.

Nola had been away from the district for many years. Her life and character had been moulded by circumstances over which she had no control. A woman at once strong and tender, she had abundant sympathy for others, and a brave self-denial equal to any sacrifice.

Why she should have left the ordinary path of womanhood and contributed herself an early Florence Nightingale, caring for the suffering and the poor, cannot now be told.

She waited till the sick man's breathing told her that he was asleep, and then pouring some drops of medicine into a glass of water which stood on a table within reach of his hand, she retired to think over what had passed.

The many parings were sufficiently incoherent to dissipate the original conditions, and at the same time sufficiently startling to suggest a criminal course of appalling horror, for Nola was also to follow him in his use of foreign patois, and the result was that his crimes were startlingly revealed.

It would have been easy enough to have called in the guardians of the law, and furnish information which might have led to strange discoveries.

She did not, however, consider it her duty to betray a trust. The sick man indicated names with which she was familiar, and she fact made the situation exceedingly perplexing and full of difficulty.

There was no hurry, she told herself, the man's condition, whatever his evil deeds, was such that he could not be moved for some time. There was time to consider what was best.

And so the wretched creature tossed and moaned, through weary days and nights, while the fever was in course.

The man's strange ravings came back to her, and in spite of herself almost she pieced them together, until the broken and tangled utterances brought back the long-past years of the neighbourhood, until there was no longer any doubt in her mind of whom he spoke. Had the fraudulent trust been twenty-five years before, much of this story need not have been written, and more than one life would have shaped its course on far other lines than those we have briefly sketched in these pages.

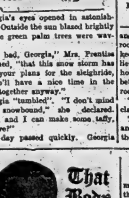
SNOWED-IN



Georgia had two letters and a postal card, which was more mail than she usually got. She was humming gaily as she opened the first of the letters. Suddenly the humming stopped and Georgia's mother looked up to see a tear-drop on the end of the scrawl of her eye. "Whatever's the matter, Georgia?" she exclaimed.

"Nothing, mother," said Georgia. "Only—only I had a letter from Annabelle and she was telling about a sleighing party she's going to, and—I can't help missing snow a little, when I've been used to it all my life."

"Well, you can't have snow in this part of India, my dear," replied her mother, "and as long as daddy's business keeps him here, here we'll have to make the best of it."

"Just one day of real Canadian winter," declared Georgia, "I'd give anything for it."

"I'm afraid the snow won't be off the ice for some time," Mrs. Prentiss answered gravely. "You won't get out of the house today."

Georgia's eyes opened in astonishment. Could it be sun blazed brightly and the green palm trees were waving.

"Too bad, Georgia," Mrs. Prentiss continued, "that this snow storm has spoilt your plans for the sleighride, but we'll have a nice time in the house together anyway."

Georgia "tumbled". "I don't mind being snowbound," she declared. "Keith and I can make some taffy, can't we?"

The day passed quickly. Georgia and Keith stretched out on the living room rug and read, pretending to be keeping warm in front of a make-believe fireplace. "Listen to the wind howling," Georgia would cry. "I'll bet the snow will be 'most to the roof by morning."

"We'll have to shovel a path," declared Keith.

Their father was gone for the day, and so they discussed anxiously whether he'd be able to get out through the snow, until they almost believed themselves. When he did come that night, he brought his family had suddenly gone mad, for they rushed up "brush the snow off" and slammed the door quickly to "keep out the cold."

"This has been the nicest day," sighed Georgia, as she went to bed. It's great to have a family that carries the weather with it."

That Body of Yours

By Leroy W. Barton, M.D.

THE PROTRUDING ABDOMEN

Because you have passed your first youth and you see the corporation or bay window on yourself an others, you have assumed that it was the natural order of things and have accepted it.

As a matter of fact it is the natural order of things if you are willing to accept it. It simply means that you have made no effort to forestall or prevent it.

As men and women near the thirty mark Nature would like to give them a little warning that they are getting around the age of puberty. Accordingly there is an increase in weight and general well being. People who have been extremely thin begin to grow stout, and their parents tell them that they too become stouter about that same age. Now this is the time that you should take advantage of Nature's gift, and instead of allowing yourself to get fat and have your abdominal girth increase, you should take regular systematic exercise and work this extra deposit of flesh into firm, healthy muscle.

Simple bending exercise such as endeavouring to touch the floor with your hands with knees held perfectly stiff, twisting from side to side, and rocking from side to side will so tighten all the abdominal muscles that they will hold your abdomen in, just as would a belt or corset. In other words your abdominal muscles are Nature's corsets and hold the abdomen in, thus giving you the proper carriage. For the more you develop the abdominal muscles the smaller becomes the waist.

INDUSTRIAL ALCOHOL

Canadian Industrial Alcohol was most active of the dollar stocks on the unlisted department list of the Montreal Stock Exchange yesterday, and further distinguished itself by establishing a new high level at 13 7-8. This new issue has attracted considerable attention about the Street since it made its appearance on December 22nd, and is regarded with considerable favor, the stock being easy to handle and selling on a basis to yield over 8 per cent. During the brief period since it made its first appearance, it has furnished trading in nearly 5,000 shares, with a uniform firm price tendency. The company is by far the largest unit in the Canadian industry which holds out much promise, this aside from the beverage end of the company's business, which is understood to be on a very profitable basis. The plant at Corbyville has a capacity of six million gallons per annum.

CRUISING IN THE WEST INDIES.

(1)—Empress of Britain at St. Pierre, of Martinique, the scene of the volcanic eruption in 1902, when 30,000 people lost their lives. The path shown was once a busy street. (2)—Headquarter Palace of Cuban Republic, Havana. (3)—Statue of Empress Josephine, first wife of Napoleon, in Martinique Island, West Indies. (4)—Morro Castle, Santiago, Cuba.

SINCE ocean liners have been made as comfortable as the best city hotels, cruising has become very attractive to those seeking a rest. The luxury of the ship, the fresh sea breezes, the trips ashore at the places visited, the making of new acquaintances, the entertainments aboard ship by travel cruise on ocean cruise are indeed delightful.

In former winters many Canadians and Americans escaped from the severity of the storm winter by taking sea cruises. Cruises to the West Indies are very popular, not only on account of the coolness of the climate and the beauty of the scenery, but because of the romantic history attached to these places. In the seventeenth century the West Indies were the headquarters of large numbers of British pirates who ground on Spanish trading ships. These pirates were in a large way responsible for destroying the commerce of Spain. A few of the interesting sights of the West Indies are beautiful plantations, mahogany groves, sponge fishing fleets, and woods of cocoanut palm trees.

Two cruises to the West Indies, and visiting parts of the Spanish Main, Panama and Venezuela, will be made by the Empress of Britain this winter. The many special features that contributed last winter to the success of these Canadian Pacific cruises have been retained and new ones added. The Empress of Britain was again selected by the Canadian Pacific for the cruises to the West Indies by reason of her great popularity as a luxurious ocean liner of the most modern and comfortable type and size, being of 22,200 tons displacement. The Empress of Britain is also the only twin-screw steamer going to the West Indies burning fuel oil. This outstanding feature appeals to passengers who have travelled in the Tropics as coaling or shifting coal at the various ports is eliminated and passengers are assured of spotless promenade and ocean spaces, with no noise, dirt, or cinders.

The Empress of Britain is devoted entirely to the purposes of the cruises, and no cargo is carried. In addition to the comfort it will be found equally as cosy the best hotels ashore. The food and service are of Canadian Pacific standard. The passenger accommodation is most attractive, and not more than two persons are assigned in a room unless it is desired to accommodate a family party. Those who desire to travel alone will find a good proportion of single cabins. The cruise itinerations include a gymnasium, swimming pool, verandah cafe and large decks for games and dancing. An orchestra of high musical merit is carried for concerts and dancing.

The itinerary of the first cruise, starting from New York on January 20th, includes the following ports of call: Havana, Cuba; Port Antonio, Jamaica; Kingston, Jamaica; Colon, Panama; La Guayra, Venezuela; Port of Spain, Trinidad; La Brea Point, Trinidad; Bridgetown, Barbados; Fort de France, Martinique; St. Pierre, Martinique; San Juan, Porto Rico; Nassau, Bahamas; returning to New York, covering a distance of over six thousand miles during the 27 days of the cruise. The second cruise will start from New York on February 20th, and will be similar in most details to the schedule of the first cruise, Hamilton, Bermuda, being substituted as the final port of call.

There are excursions ashore at the various ports, conducted by representatives of the Canadian Pacific, allowing unusual opportunities for visiting every possible point of interest during each cruise. Two days will be spent ashore in Havana and two days in Jamaica, including trips to many nearby points. An additional day is provided this year at Panama and a journey will be made from Colon through the Culebra Cut to Pedro Miguel, Panama City and Balboa. In Venezuela the trip includes one of the most fascinating rides in the world from the port of La Guayra to Caracas. Its 3,000 feet above the Caribbean Sea. Port Antonio, one of the prettiest spots in Jamaica, has been included in the itinerary this year.

BOTTLE SEIZED BY BAILIFF RETURNS TO COURT ROOM

Every Day in Every Way the Gin Case Becomes More Interesting.

CROCK NOW EMPTY.

Crown Attorney Carnew Retains Possession Until Evidence—Chas. Trevertion of Corbyville Testifies at Oshawa

Oshawa, Jan. 10.—The further the Robernick case goes the more interesting it becomes. Crown Attorney Carnew, of Belleville, the Crown prosecutor, sprung a surprise at the Police Court this morning when the trial of Frank Kubernick for having in his possession liquor for sale or consumption contrary to the Liquor Transportation Act was resumed. He produced a bottle. This innocent-looking bottle was the cause of a sharply ending police proceedings against Kubernick on Dec. 19 when it was seized by Bailiff Frank Rogers who was dismissed by Attorney-General Raney for his drastic seizure scene enacted under a writ of replevin.

On its former appearance it was one-fourth full, now it is empty, and was found in this condition by Crown officers on a shelf in the home of Basil Seeban, one of the two bondsmen who went bail for one thousand dollars each for Kubertick.

In the course of the evidence another bottle of the same kind of gin was produced. The bottle was gently unwrapped and softly laid on the magistrate's desk amid ominous silence, while assurances were given by the Crown that it would receive the best of care, if there was no objection in leaving the bottle in the court's custody, say even temporarily.

Case Proceeds.

J. F. Grierson, acting for Kubernick objected to the introduction of this court on the ground that the matter was before it by reason of illegal process. This was overruled and the witness excluded until the case proceeded with. Kubernick pleaded not guilty to the charge of having illegally for sale or consumption of liquor contrary to the Liquor Transportation Act.

C. A. Mason, License Inspector, the first witness, identified Kubernick whose home he had searched and seized about a gallon of high wines, a bottle of high wine slightly colored and a bottle of gin bearing the label of Hill and Underwood, branded "London Dry."

At this point he made way for J. E. Connor, provincial inspector, who was put in the box and produced a 26-ounce bottle labelled "Hill and Underwood" adorned with the government seizure label, the signatures of C. A. Mason, License Inspector, Constable Palmer and two other officials. This, he said, had been obtained on visiting the home of Basil Seeban on Olive avenue.

This is the Bottle.

Inspector Mason, recalled, deposed that this was the bottle seized by him on November 1st last under a search warrant at Kubernick's home and which was subsequently seized in the Police Court at Oshawa on December 19, by Bailiff Frank Rogers on a Replevin affect under writ of replevin while proceedings were in progress against Kubernick, and for which Bailiff Rogers was dismissed on Dec. 19.

Charles B. Treverton of Belleville, one of the managers of the Corbyville distillery at Corbyville, swore the bottle of Hill and Underwood gin was a product of the Consolidated Distilleries at Corbyville made from a formula secured in Holland. It first made its appearance in the fall of 1923, 1923, and a few days later was shipped into the United States. It was not until July 5, 1923, that any shipments were made to the Quebec License Commission. None could, of course, be shipped to Ontario.

Answering Counsel, the witness could not say how the liquor could have come into Ontario, but none was shipped to Ontario by his firm.

The Court adjourned until 2 o'clock after the charge had been read against Basil Seeban and the bail for Kubernick renewed in his two sureties. The liquor was handed to License Inspector Mason to be locked up in the safe.

When the police court resumed this afternoon, when Frank Kubernick, Miss MacDonell, Division Court Clerk at Whitby, produced the affidavit made by Frank Kubernick when he asked for the writ of replevin, in which he declared the goods seized at the police court, consisting of high wines, originally to be his property. The order of His Honor Judge McGillivray was also produced. Miss MacDonell said the writ was given to Frank Rogers, bailiff, with instruction to serve them.

"Did the bailiff make any returns to you of what he had done? Did he return the liquor to you?"

"No, he did not," she replied.

Frank Rogers, bailiff, called, explained his duties and said when he seized the liquor in the police court under the instruction from Kubernick's counsel, in 75 percent. of the cases, he said, he consulted the solicitor in the cases in which he was engaged. He did not, he said, deliver the goods seized to the plaintiff, but to a man, the name of whom he did not know. This man was sent with him, and after seizing the liquor he took it to this man, who was waiting in his car (motor) car. The man under bond, given by Mr. Grierson for the return of the goods as the latter had requested.

"Did you take the trouble to ask either Inspector Mason or Magistrate Ponton what you might be secured?"

"I did not," said the bailiff.

Mr. Grierson—"There was no necessity for that as a request was made for the return of the liquor and replevin."

The Magistrate—"Were you told you could get the liquor whether the court was in session or not?"

"I was not," replied Bailiff Rogers.

PERTINENT QUESTION

A certain collegiate young man entered a haberdashery and asked to be shown a light-class hat. A chapeau was brought to him and after carefully inspecting it he seated the price.

"Twenty-two dollars," was the reply.

He again turned his attention to the hat, turning it over and over in his hands.

"What's the matter?" asked the dealer.

"I'm looking for the holes," answered the Collegiate Kiddy.

"The holes! What holes?"

"Why the holes for the lackeys that would buy this to put his ears through."

The white pine blister rust, a parasitic fungus disease, has invaded Montana, foreste of the American north-west, and promises to do great damage.

The rose was discovered to be one of the worst enemies of the potato because it harbours the eggs of aphids that carry disease.

Differences in bacteria due to age were discovered, also the fact that these creatures suffer from infant mortality.

PROGRESS OF SCIENCE.

The progress science has made during the past year is demonstrated by the number of useful discoveries made in the realms of medicine, chemistry, astronomy, mechanics, meteorology, agriculture, etc., since 922 was ushered in. Some of the discoveries are of immense practical value, and others, though seemingly of little actual use, will help in the advancement of knowledge. Here is part of the list compiled by a Washington man, though not given in the order he wrote it:

INSULIN AT TORONTO.

Insulin, an extract of pancreas, was discovered by doctors of Toronto University, and in producing wonderful results at the Toronto General Hospital in the treatment of diabetes. It enables the patient to eat normal food, and promises to control the disease, which is usually fatal.

Ten years of solar radiation observations were recorded, and that over the age value of the sun's heat on the earth is 1.94 calories per square centimeter per minute, enough to melt a layer of ice 4?4 feet thick in one year.

Researches determined the rays of blue and violet light pass through empty space at the same speed.

EGYPTIAN DISCOVERY.

Radio - broadcasting of speeches, music, entertainment and news became general.

Dr. D. B. McMillan returned from his expedition to Baffin Land bringing important geographic, magnetic and other scientific data.

Capt. Roald Amundsen and his expedition left via the Panama Canal for a drift across the Arctic Ocean.

A fossil tooth said by some to be that of the Darwin prehistoric species, was found in Nebraska, the native state of William Jennings Bryan, a powerful opponent of Darwinism.

The greatest find both as regards interest and scientific value that has ever been made in Egypt, was that in which the Earl of Carnarvon and an American friend discovered the treasures of King Tutankhamen's tomb in the Valley of the Kings.

SUN IS RICKETS' CURE.

The essential oils that cause the fragrance of flowers are found to serve as a protection against extreme heat and chill.

Mother's milk was found to act as an anti-tooth and vaccine that protects the new-born child against disease germs.

The coal strike beginning April 1 shut off power equal to 400 times the energy developed at Niagara Falls.

Direct sunlight unimpeded by glass or clothing was found to be an effective cure for rickets.

HEAVY OIL FOR AUTOS.

Spraying the throat with pneumonia vaccine produced considerable immunity against virulent pneumonia in a lot of monkeys during the Rockefeller Institute experiment.

By using paper models the design of modern buildings was improved.

French experiments with motors of the Diesel type indicated that motor vehicles may presently be able to use heavy oil instead of gasoline.

Writing in the sky by airplane was perfected.

In gliding and soaring contests in France, Germany and England, two motorless flights over three hours in length were attained.

THE AVON RIVER

I love thee in the Springtime,
When the trees are budding new;
In tender'st green above thee
And kiss thy lovely breast:

By starlight and by moonlight
Or in Winter's icy away:
Thou sallindoes at even
Or when breaks th' imperial day

When the white swans with folded wings are sailing
To seek thy lodgy banks and find their pond,
Then do I love that quiet hour of even
When flutting wild birds sink to rest.

And forever and forever
Shall the Avon River run:
When night shall close upon me,
And travelling days are gone.

POLICE COURT

- LIQUOR CASE.

A charge of having liquor in a public place was today brought up in police magistrate Wm. Vandusen's court. Magistrate Judge Wills enlarged the case for a few days. H. Vanover was the man on trial on a charge of having illegally a number of mustrats skins in his possession. Case in progress when we went to press.

Mr. Gordon Miller was this morning before Judge Wills as Police Magistrate, charged with driving a motor car at a speed estimated by him in excess of 8 miles, which is the speed limit across the bridge, according to a By-law passed not a long time ago on the bridge to that effect. The accused admited he drove over the bridge at a speed of about 15 miles. A fine of $1 and costs was imposed and His Honor in delivering judgment, stated that all chauffeurs and others must obey the law in regard to speed over the bridges. His Honour also referred to the necessity there was for all drivers of autos to keep on the right side of roads and thus assist in helping to avoid accidents. It was imperative if this the law be observed.

STEAMBOAT SERVICE TO BE RESTORED ON BAY OF QUINTE

Efforts of Chamber of Commerce Bear Fruit—S.S. Cape Trinity Will be In Service

The good news this morning received by the Manager of the Chamber of Commerce that the Canada Steamship Lines will restore a passenger service to the Bay of Quinte. This intimation was communicated by a letter from Mr. W. E. Burke, General Traffic Manager of the Canada Steamship Lines.

It will be recalled that last year strenuous efforts were made by the Chamber of Commerce to induce Canada Steamship Lines to restore a service of this nature to the Bay of Quinte. During the latter part of the war all steamships were withdrawn from the Bay of Quinte for service elsewhere and since that time there has been no regular steamer plying up and down the Bay. Mr. Burke in his letter announces that Canada Steamships will place on the Toronto-Prescott route, the excellent passenger steamer the "Cape Trinity," which had hitherto been on the Owen Sound-Sarnia run. The "Cape Trinity" will go direct from Toronto to Prescott by Lake Ontario and the American channel through the Thousand Islands. The return trip will be by Bay of Quinte and there will be weekly service. The "Cape Trinity" will leave Prescott every Wednesday, Friday and Sunday during the passenger season at 8 a.m., calling at Belleville at 10 p.m. the same day and arriving in Toronto at 8.30 a.m. the succeeding morning. The steamer will lay over in Toronto until 2 p.m. that same day and then proceed eastward again. At Prescott through passengers will be transfered for Montreal and points east to the rapids steamship.

This service does not meet the full desires of the Chamber of Commerce but it marks a most important step in statement towards former conditions. In fact the "Cape Trinity" is much the finest boat that has ever been placed upon the Bay of Quinte service. It is believed that if the financial returns warrant it, that the boat will be routed eastward also through the Bay of Quinte. If that were done it would give prospective passengers here a direct and convenient route to the Thousand Islands and points east, but such service will come later.

It should be remembered that steamship passenger lines all over America have been discontinued within the past half dozen years. The automobile and motor boat have created a formidable competitor of the more leisurely passenger boat and the former has almost succumbed. The attractiveness, however, of the Bay of Quinte both scenic and otherwise is incentive for tourists to use this route, and the belief is that it will be a financial success. The old time desire for water trips is already receiving itself and it is thought that this new venture on the part of Canada Steamship Lines will be a success in every way.

The agency with Canada Steamship Lines Ltd. has been a highly successful one and needless to say the officials and shareholders of this company are greatly elated.

GRAND MASTER W. N. PONTON OFFICIATES AT GUELPH

Masonic Installation of Mark Dalgoise to the 'Master's Chair — Grand Master Delivers Splendid Address to Brethren

Waverley Lodge A. F. and A. M. No. 361, C.R.C., was on feta Thursday night, the occasion being the annual installation of officers. The new interest was added to the occasion by the presence of the Most Worshipful the Grand Master, W. N. Ponton, K.C., of Belleville, who had kindly consented to officiate at the installation of his former townsman and friend, Mark Thomas Dalgoise, to the Master's chair of Waverley Lodge.

It was an installation that will not soon be forgotten by the large gathering in attendance. The cosmopolitan character of the members was noted by the Grand Master, who had been powerfully the register, and discovered that among those present last night, were visiting members of the craft from Scotland, Newfoundland, British Columbia and the United States jurisdictions, bearing testimony to the cosmos of the fraternity everywhere in the world.

Following the supper there was a delightful programme of music under the direction of Bro. Gladstone Brown, who has developed a choir of singers unsurpassed in musical quality in this province in any jurisdiction. Then there were solos by Bro. Brown and Bro. Howard Fielding, who delighted the audience with their offerings.

The Grand Master again spoke to the audience in response to the toast to the Grand Lodge of Canada, and told of the wonderful growth and expansion and urged all to stand loyal to the cause of the King and the state.

The following incidents was the discovery before the plate of the newly installed Master of a beautiful bouquet of roses from his fellow workers on the staff of The Guelph Herald.

POSTPONEMENT OF GERMAN REPARATIONS ANNOUNCED BY COMMISSION

French are Conciliatory and Hope to Gain Good-will of the People by Mildness of Their Rule

Ruhr Unions Urge Calmness—Germany Has No Means of Paying—Situation Steady

Paris, Jan. 13.—The Reparations Commission this morning postponed until January 31st, payments of five hundred million gold marks due from Germany next Monday, France, Italy and Belgium voted for delay. Sir John Bradbury, British member did not vote. There was no discussion of this brief moratorium on its merits. The French requested the postponement of the payment in order that they might think preparation of their new moratorium plan.

PASSIVENESS URGED

Berlin, Jan. 13.—The miners' union has issued an appeal to the Ruhr miners urging the mto remain calm and commit no excesses against the occupying forces. The statement adds that the union expects the French to keep their promise regarding the maintenance of the eight hour day.

PASSIVE RESISTANCE

Passive resistance by the Germans to the occupation of the Ruhr has brought about a deadlock in the negotiations whereby the occupational authorities are trying to bring pressure through the German officials, on the mining and industrial operators in order to obtain compliance in their demands for reparations deliveries.

The Germans hold that they are not authorized to act in regard to the management of Mussen and industrial works or the distribution of their products.

According to information here, Germany no longer considers herself bound to deliver coal to France and Belgium but will also recompense the Ruhr operators for further deliveries.

Unless enforced deliveries would thus leave the operators without means for paying their employes for an output belonging, in monetary returns, it is feared general dismployment involving considerable danger may follow within a fortnight if the occupational authorities enforce the deliveries.

At the Essen meetings an Italian representative appeared, as well as the French and Belgians.

COUE'S METHOD SUCCESSFUL WITH CANUCK IN NEW YORK

Patient Before Treatment Unable to Use Limbs Owing to Weakening of Nervous System

NAME WITHHELD

New York, Jan. 13.—A patient who came from Canada to try the auto-suggestion treatment of Dr. Emile Coue, the latter reported that he ready to return home practically cured. Those who have been witnessing the Coue clinic here believe the cure of the Canadian is the most remarkable feat the little French doctor has accomplished since he arrived in New York. The name of the patient was withheld, as well as his place of residence. The chief information given in charge of the clinic was: "He came on a stretcher; the patient had come from Canada an... is a former newspaper man."

Dr. Coue says the Canadian with him after the public clinic yesterday afternoon and worked with him in private class. The man, it was said was to all appearance a semi-cripple, his joints still at times useless, as a result of a gradually weakening nervous system.

"Lift me on the shoulder," Coue directed.

The Canadian raised his right arm stiffly and brought his open palm down.

It was a sharp hard blow. Then he tried his left. He did it again and again at Coue's command.

"Say 'I will,'" Coue kept ordering him.

Then he ran across the floor. First he walked, then at Coue's insistence, he ran, a stiff run, to be sure, but obviously more than he'd done for a long time. Though not yet well-cured, he ran like an old man.

Coue put him through other experiments. He made him write, r that had been a matter of ... tedious effort and productive of illegible scrawls a few days ago. To his great astonishment and delight and to his wife's almost tearful pleasure, he wrote "I am glad" with ordinary facility and speed.

"I congratulate you," Coue beamed. "You will get well. You are treating yourself correctly."

The doctor's wife declared that her husband was not completely cured before Dr. Coue left New York they would follow him back to France.

MOVING PICTURES OF THE TRENT RIVER SCENES

Publicity Enterprise of Government to Attract Tourists to This Section of the Province

SHOW IN NEW YORK

Trenton, Bay of Quinte, Frankford, Campbellford and Other Points Further on Pictured

The first run of two films of motion pictures of the Trent Canal water route was a verdict of approval from members of the Trent Waterway Improvement Association, at the Petroborough Council and Chamber of Commerce Wednesday afternoon. They were exhibited in the board room under the Chamber of Commerce, and will be a feature of the Ontario Government publicity and propaganda display of this Province's summer resorts at the annual Motor Boat show in New York next month.

Limited to only two reels, these pictures of the Trent course from Lake Ontario to Georgian Bay could not dwell in detail, but they are replete with suggestion of the wealth of scenic beauty along the historic route traveled first among white men by Champlain. The trip along the fitting-strip down the Trent with a glimpse of the town and the lower water-Frankford is passed, and with a pause at Glen Ross, the picture includes an interesting incident of a passing tug and long raft of logs, showing a river driver in action, the next step in at Campbellford

A TOUCH OF COMEDY.

Evidently seeking a touch of humour, the photographer succeeded in getting Lock Keeper Nicholas, the lockmaster last year at Camp bellford, need not be told that he never sleeps on the jobs at one of the biggest locks on the Trent.

A. L. Killaly, Superintendent of the canal, who identified the points of call on the screen trip, may request the censor to cut out that episode, although it was palpably staged for comic relief. It is capable of an interpretation by strangers, New York critics, for instance, as an example of laxity and laziness that does not exist at the Trent service stations.

The photographer shot Campbellford in several places and with impressive effect. In fact, the busy Trent town and its environs received more than its share of the first-reel. Hastings also in the scenery, and the next stop is at Gore's Landing, with a view from the hill-top behind the hotels looking easterly down the canal, catching a charming vista of wooded islands set in a summer "sea." River traffic is illustrated by a passing tug and barge and the "Stoney Lake" with an excursion crowd against a tented shore line somewhere on the Otonabee River.

THE LIFT LOCK.

After a close-up of the Hunter Street Bridge, the picture pauses to sketch the lift lock at work. The Kawartha chain includes Lovesick Lake, Stoney Point and Young's Lake, which is presented as one of the many attractive resorts along the entire course. The cameraman excelled himself with a sweeping panorama of Cameron Lake, Balsam Lake and Sturgeon Lake, Peesles Falls, Islands that spell summer enchantment bathing scenes and all the pleasures of halcyon days that about appeal powerfully to a New York naughty of motor boat enthusiasts and outdoor mortals in search of a summer playground if only for two weeks.

HAMLET LEFT OUT

These films on the whole are quite satisfactory and are a credit to the Ontario Government. They are designed to furnish information of the Trent waterway and to arouse the interest of American and even Canadian tourists and vacationists, in the scenic grandeurs, summer resort attractions and accommodations along the Trent. The Burnt River, Severn River, Orillia and Couchiching Beach, Georgian Bay and other Lakes are included; but Rice Lake, the most populous and perhaps the most favoured and popular of the whole chain, is conspicuously absent.

MUSIC and DRAMA

JACK HOLT IN "PETER B. KYNE'S 'WHILE SATAN SLEEPS' AT GRIFFIN'S TONIGHT

One of Peter B. Kyne's most popular novels, "The Parson of Panamint," has reached the screen as a Paramount picture under the title of "While Satan Sleeps." It provides the second starring photoplay for Jack Holt and it is an ideal vehicle for him. A rugged, virile hephan picture, with a very strong love interest running throughout, it has delighted the audiences at Griffin's Theatre and where it is being exhibited for the last time tonight. It is of that type of picture which has the widest possible appeal. The story upon which "While Satan Sleeps" is built, represents one of Mr. Kyne's best Western efforts. A most competent cast, which includes Frita Brunette, Wade Boteler, Mabel Van Verne, J. Leonard and others, appears in support of the star.

A beautiful Travelogue, a new chapter of the popular adventure play, "Buffalo Bill," and a funny two-reel Mermaid comedy featuring Lloyd Hamilton and titled "The Adviser" are being exhibited on the same program.

GLADYS BROCKWELL AND STUART HOLMES AT REGENT

The jagged rock and waves of Lands End, the cliffs and sea caves of Catalina Island, the quiet of a lonely spot in the center of a Pacific island and other strange and beautiful backgrounds were used in filming the Universal all star photoplay which is showing at the Regent Tonight, and will end on Monday. Gladys Brockwell, Stuart Holmes, Mahlon Hamilton, Kate Price, Edna Irving Cummings in the production.

EARL WILLIAMS IN A UNIQUE PHOTOPLAY AT REGENT MONDAY

"It Can Be Done", which is the feature offering at the Regent Monday to Wednesday, is a photoplay adapted from a popular magazine story by Frederick J. Jackson, a well known writer of fiction, whose stories are renowned for their unusual plots and strange situations. This is the record of Mr. Jackson's stories to be picturized by Earle Williams, and in each he has appeared in a role that fits him perfectly. It is the type of role in which Williams excels. The character is that of a youth, who has led a wild, reckless life as it comes, meeting each situation squarely and disposing of it in manly fashion. The plot of "It Can be Done" will be found novel, timely and of general interest.

"Breaking Through", the new Vitagraph serial which stars at the Regent Monday, is an outdoor picture. Some of the most beautiful scenic spots on the west coast were used as backgrounds for the action. The snow-capped range of mountains, the grey expanses of age-old forests and the rushing splendor of rock-strewn torrents appear in this splendid production. It is a story of fighting and adventure, as wholesome as the great north woods where its action is held. Carmel Meyers and Wallace MacDonald are the co-stars.

A Fox Sunshine comedy, and Fox News are also announced for presentation.

Holding the theatrical world spellbound for years, the dramatic version of Ouida's immortal novel, "Under Two Flags", was one of the greatest of all stage plays. Blanche Bates was perhaps the most noted artist who ever portrayed the tragic figure of Cigarette. The screen has been waiting for years

Vanished After Using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

"Branchton, Ont.—"When I wrote to you for help my ailment was mostly prompted by one of those functional ills, so would be... I suffered with pains in my back and head... It was the medicine I was taking... but I can assure you, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is all I am relieved of... After using one bottle, I have taken three bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Tablets and a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Blood Medicine, and I can honestly say I have never been so well before... I had suffered from pains and other troubles since I was fifteen years old, and during the 'Great War' I worked on munitions, and for two years after that, and then called for, I strained myself, causing inflammation and bearing down. I suffered untold agony, and I often had to give up and go to bed. I had doctored for years without getting permanent relief, when I started to take your medicine." Mrs. GOLDWIN MISENER, Branchton, Ont.

Sick and ailing women everywhere in the Dominion should try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound before they give up hope of recovery.

for Priscilla Dean to impersonate Cigarette as she does in the Universal-Jewel film version of "Under Two Flags", coming to Griffin's this Thursday to Saturday, with a matinee Thursday and Saturday. Matching Priscilla Dean's dynamic personality and masculine touch in emotionalism, James Kirkwood, with his manly virility, and John Davidson, with his cool poise, provide excellent foils for the star.

"THE DOVER ROAD"

Not in Belleville alone but Belleville had an opportunity to see an excellent comedy perfectly acted and in every way so thoroughly enjoyable as the performance of A. A. Milne's English comedy, "The Dover Road", at Griffin's Theatre last night. Charles Cartwright played the leading role and it was depicted to perfection. The play is a sparkling one, full of wit, dialogue and many situations are genuine surprises and the denouements come upon one with ludicrous explosive force.

On the Road to Dover, which may be considered the modern gretna greys, for runaway couples, we are shown the home in which Mr. Lattimer (Charles Cherry) detains and holds up would-be elopers much as the children were detained and sent back at the Holly Tree inn, in Dicken's delightful tale. In this case, however, a middle-aged and genial man illegally and with some risk conspires to detain the couples and enable them in turn to find out and come thing about each other before they are turned loose. The result is generally a disillusionment and abandonment of the romance and a return to conditions which are found to be better than those which might come if the adventures were persisted in.

The play is all in one scene, simply and artistically presented. Mr. Cherry interprets his role in an altogether delightful bit of comedy. Domaine, the butler, played by George Riddell was a perfect volcano of stolid humor. Anne, by Kathline Cooper, is most natural and unaffected and Miss Mollie Pearson, one of the old favorites played the leading event Eustasia so that she kept the audience in continual glee. Leonard, played by Reginald Mason was done in his most convincing manner and Lionel Watts as Nicholas, proved most unsophisticated. Altogether the cast was perfectly balanced and Manager Forbes certainly lived up to his reputation of guaranteeing good attractions. It is to be hoped that he brings attractions of equal standard to Belleville this season. If Mr. Forbes can persuade this same Company to return to Belleville at some future date, he can rest assured that a capacity house will be the obvious result. Theatre-goers were exceptionally well pleased and delighted with last night's presentation.

WHY BACKS ACHE

The Kidneys Seldom to Blame—The Trouble Due to Blood Impurities

There is more nonsense talked about backaches than any other trouble. Some people have been frightened into the belief that every backache means deadly kidney trouble. As a matter of medical fact not one backache in twenty is necessary to do with the kidneys. Most backaches come from sheer weakness and kidney weakness is only that. You need something to improve your blood and build you up, and that is exactly what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will do. Some backaches are really muscular rheumatism; some are the symptoms of such ailments as influenza, indigestion, constipation and liver troubles. In women most backaches come from the weakness or irregularity of the blood supply. To get rid of the trouble take a tonic like Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to enrich the blood and bring strength to aching backs and weak nerves. Mr. W. Prince, Leverdale, tells what these pills did for him. He says:—"Periodically I suffered for about five years from backache. At it I caught cold it seemed to settle in my back, which pained me so badly that I could hardly turn over in bed. These attacks would last for a week or ten days. I tried many remedies but they did not drive the trouble. About two years ago, while suffering from one of these attacks a friend advised me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I followed his advice with the best of results, as I have had no attack of the trouble since, and I feel sure that I am permanently relieved."

You can get these pills through any dealer in medicine or by mail post-paid at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

POINT ANNE TEAM TROUNCE 34th BATTERY BUNCH IN OVERTIME GAME

Cement Mixers Are Formidable Aggregation—Pat Boland in the Nets—Artillerymen Hand the Village Squad Game in Extra Period by Scoring in Own Net

It took ten minutes of overtime playtursed in a good game. Boland's work between the posts was excellent and he played nicely on many occasions. Point Anne led in the first period with a 3–2 count. The Gunners held the suburbanites scoreless while they themselves managed to get two past Boland in the second frame. Full time score stood 5–5 and ten minutes overtime was necessary. In an attempt to clear the rubber Josh Canning accidentally placed the puck in his own net in the first five minutes of the overtime. The "Butch" Bettnel's boys play a return game on Monday night at the Arena and the encounter is bound to be a humdinger. Point Anne folk are backing their favorites to the limit and a battle royal is assured. Ken. Colling referee'd the match. Line up:—

Point Anne—Goal, Boland; defence, Genereux and Leggat; centre, Morsele; wings, Lake and Brant; subs, Green and Hall.

BELLEVILLE HIGH SCHOOL WIN FROM DESERONTO STUDENTS LAST NIGHT

Local Boys From This Seat of Learning Show the Fans That They Can Play a Decent Brand of Hockey—Showing Steady Improvement

SCORE 4-1

Home-Brews Depend Too Much on Individual Rushing—Cheer Leaders There—Tiger Tire Sweaters Used—Deseronto Collects Penalties—Should Be More Combination Plays

Playing a better all-round brand of hockey than their opponents the Belleville High School sextette managed to defeat the Deseronto hopefuls in a Central Intermediate game here last night evening. The locals retained the best part of the play and should have won by a larger margin. But with the lack of practice in combination play, Belleville should easily win this group. Time after time they got in on the Deseronto goal only to lose the disc by failure to combine. Last night the homesters did not play the same brand of hockey as they did in Napanee last Wednesday. The Deserontonites came to town in the Belleville defence instead of shooting from outside. They overskated the puck and passed at the wrong time. They were fairly fast skaters, but need coaching in their mode of attack. The players had a tendency to bunch at centre ice and their marksmanship was off. But all in all it was a fairly good exhibition. The winners ran into hard luck a number of times. After having stated that Deseronto combination except the goalie the little disc would flip over the net or land on Deserontonian pads. The home-fans led in every period and the visitors were only able to break into the scoreless in the final period. In this frame they held the Bellevillians scoreless while they notched the lone counter. The boys from the "Smoky Town" checked persistently but the local forwards generally eluded them. The scoring was fairly well divided and was the result of solo or combined effort. Belleville used the Tiger Tire sweaters as Deseronto colours blended too closely with those of B. H. S. The generosity on the part of the tire builders was appreciated. No individual star graced the ice in last night's scene. Some of the lads showed an improvement from the Napanee encounter while others were not so effective.

The Belleville forward line showed mediocre form. Christy worked hard and incessantly and showed a little improvement from last Wednesday. He was always ready to receive a pass and very unselfish himself.

Buskard put up a good brand of hockey and watched his man carefully. His bullet shot was not strong as it did in the first game but nevertheless he was responsible for one goal.

Townsend started at centre and made a good job of it. He is coming along nicely and will no doubt cut a big figure when the final selection is made.

Both Ritchie and Ray Arnott were absentees through illness and Alex Weir was given a chance. While on the ice he played well and like Yorn he is developing into a nice backchecker. "Dracor" will probably be injected into future games and should do well.

Charley Kerr's cork-screw rushes were much in evidence. He left the Deseronto forwards standing open-mouthed at centre ice while he tore into th defence. When he secures the rubber he is off like a flash.

Bill Strachan started on the forward line but he preferred the defence and was shifted back to his regular position. He generally manages to pass the opposing wing men and then dashes down the centre. He rang up one goal last evening.

Jimmy Hurley was as usual on the defence and turned in a nifty exhibition. His solo rush which netted a goal was easily the prettiest of the evening. The scoring flair which has been following Jimmy of late has evidently left.

Leavens' solo goal was not called upon to don the duds and assisted Mr. Lesty in tabulating scores, etc. He will probably get a chance to show his wares at some future date.

Stan. Nurse kept a close watch on the play and checked the offenders who were inclined to slash and cross-check. His refereeing can compare with the best of 'em.

A good crowd of students and town-folk witnessed the game.

Jack Deacon led the supporters in the various yells. Everyone was naturally elated over the win.

Deseronto presented a formidable goal-keeper in Bowerman. His work at all times was excellent and he made some beautiful saves. The Deserontonians say that they will turn the tables next Friday night when this same teams are in the neighbouring town.

The play centred around the Deseronto end during the first period. Four penalties were inflicted on Belleville players. Christy notched the only tally of the period.

In the first few minutes of the second period Buskard dinged the drapery for the second counter.

Hurley and Strachan tallied the remaining counters of the period. Referee Nurse created a laugh when he took a hard tumble.

Brennan scored the only goal of the final period when the disc twirled into the corner. The game ending with Belleville leading by a 4-1 score.

The line-up of the teams was:—

BELLEVILLE	DESERONTO

Strachan	L. Defence Naylor

SCOTCH TOURISTS

Montreal, Jan. 12.—Three rinks of Scottish curlers arrived in Montreal this morning. After breakfast at the Windsor Hotel two rinks with the players in advance were escorted to the Caledonia Curling Club, and the famous Jackson rink was taken to the St. Lawrence rink. Friendly games were played which resulted in a victory for each of the Scots, who scored two wins at Caledonia and battled gamely to draw at St. Lawrence.

There was one curling marvel on the ice at Caledonia Rink, this morning, James Thomson, of Upper Middlesex, Dunfriesshire, who curled in his shirt sleeves. He said he was too hot when on the ice, so it also was put to one side. Mr. Thomson, who is a very fine curler and a favorite of great renown, said today that he simply could feel cold when he is curling.

ECONOMY AT THE CITY HALL

Mayor Bennett's announced determination to insist on a policy of severest economy in civic expenditures this year will meet with the approval of the citizens. For while it will undoubtedly be some heavy demands upon the civic funds, which charges will have to be provided for and met. It is not a wise policy, in keeping with this much preached economy, for the city to allow public utilities, services and institutions to be neglected and to fall behind the requirements, as, if they are neglected now, they will eventually have to be brought to a point of adequacy and settled for in the end. We cannot reasonably expect posterity to bear all the burdens incurred during the present day.

It is significant, that nearly every municipality throughout Ontario this season, voted negatively on all money by-laws. This wave of economy appears to be general as far as municipal affairs are concerned.

There are many expenditures, of course, that are unforseen at present, and over which the administration has no control, but even so, would it not be in order for the Finance Committee to budget covering every Department, instead of the more or less tentative estimates now in vogue. In every business concern of importance, expenditures and receipts are carefully detailed and listed and it must needs be, for profitable operation. Such procedure should also apply to civic administration. Officials would then function with confidence and without misapprehensions and besides, those holding the electing positions would know definitely and definitely as to the conditions of affairs.

There are unmistakable indications that the ruling passion of the citizens at present is for a lower tax rate, yet this must be accomplished consistently and with due regard for the future welfare and progress of our city.

Obviously, the Mayor and Aldermen have many difficulties to contend with this year, but it is hoped that same will be surmounted successfully and much achieved for civic benefit.

SIR EDMUND WALKER'S ANNUAL REVIEW

The authoritative utterances of Sir Edmund Walker, President of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, at the annual meeting of that institution held recently, were not less comprehensive in scope, analysis and far reaching exactity than his reviews of former years.

The address, which was published in detail, in Thursday issue of The Intelligencer, should be studied by all.

Sir Edmund does not try to minimize the difficulties of the present economic condition of Canada, although he is calmly confident of our ability to overcome all relative troubles.

In the course of his remarks he stressed the growing importance of our mining industry, urged that Canada compete with Argentina in the chilled beef market in England, and made some thoughtful observations on immigration, advocating in this connection the policy of attracting agricultural settlers from Britain, Northern Europe and the United States. Sir Edmund did not refer to prospective settlers of like occupation, from Eastern and South ern Europe. He also desired that unskilled labor dominate the class of immigration and it is not clearly understood why he should favor this particular policy, inasmuch as at the present time, there is a surplus of unskilled labor at all centres and this condition is likely to prevail for some time to come, and will continue as long as the unemployed, non-artisan or otherwise, in the cities are indisposed to work on our farms, and until the chaos in commerce is more steadied and settled.

We do not desire an influx of such a comparatively non-productive class of people, into this country as, instead of alleviating the present distress, it would become a burden and disrupt the situation carrying with it a further depression in wages.

This condition may be the goal of some manufacturers and other employers of labor, and they are not to be blamed for endeavoring to produce at a minimum cost, but in view of the extremely cordial and peaceful co-operative spirit now existent between the employer and employee, it would be disastrous and distressing to disturb such a condition, which has taken years to achieve.

The Dominion needs immigration and needs it badly, but it should be of the constructive variety.

PASSING COMMENT

Social note—It is said that the girls will buckle their goloshes this winter.

Correct this sentence: "You look rather dowdy," said the husband, "and I insist that you buy some new frocks and hats."

Some families live within their means and some have learned to say: "charge it, please."

If, as reported, Germany spent a drunken New Year's it would be all the more likely to experience a head-ache in meeting the reparations.

HERE AND THERE

PRODUCING STEAM BY ELECTRICITY

Electricity is becoming an important rival of coal as a producer of steam. At present the use of electrical apparatus for generating steam is confined to locations where there is an overabundance of electric power, but an article in the Journal of Industrial and Engineering Chemistry, by Horace Drever, an engineer of Philadelphia, indicates what may be expected of the future.

The recent statement of Thomas A. Edison that eventually humanity will be relieved of the necessity of doing manual labor is made easy by the aid of the imagination play on some of the facts presented by Mr. Drever.

Steam is usually thought of as necessary only for generating power, driving engines. However, it is more important in many plants for other purposes, such as heating, for instance, such steam is required for cooking and bringing about chemical reactions. In the most efficient nitrogen fixation plants, a great deal of steam is essential to the chemical process of making nitrogen from the air units with other elements so that it can be used as fertilizer.

"To compete with coal at $10 per ton, on a basis of fuel cost only," Mr. Drever writes, "electric power would have to be as cheap as two mills per kilowatt hour. The element of fuel cost, is not the only one entering into the problem, however. Labor, interest on investment and fixed charges generally will be much larger for the coal plant than for the electric generator, and in fact, aside from power cost, every item will be considered in favor of plants fore by the electric generator. One man can easily do all the work connected with the latter, except major repairs, for units totaling as much as 5000 boiler horse-power, and where the load is fairly constant, one attendant can operate a plant twice this size."

It is also true that in the electric steam generator plant fuel transportation, storage and handling, ashes, smoke and dirt would all be eliminated.

LIKE JIGGS, ANCIENT KINGS ATE CABBAGE

Should the history of the cabbage ever be written, it may prove to be an unexpectedly thrilling. Remarkable facts concerning that humble vegetable have been discovered by Prof. Rugles Gates, the botanist.

"Cabbage, kales, cauliflowers and brussels sprouts" says the professor, "all originated in the wild cabbage, a native of the coast and the South of England. The cabbage as we know it was the first development of the wild plant, and from it appeared the cauliflower and the sprout.

"The origin of the species is lost in antiquity, but the Romans appear to have cultivated it. The remarkable thing is that each type entered more or less suddenly into the vegetable garden.

"A gardener in these ancient days may have planted a cabbage on a certain spot and have wakened up some morning to find a cauliflower or a stalk of sprouts in its place.

"There was no gradual development. It happened spontaneously. In the case of the cauliflower it was an inflorescence, and the green flower became white, succulent, and fleshy, though not to the degree that we know it to-day.

"The sprout was the result of the cabbage, instead of combining its efforts to the attainment of one large object, determined to multiply itself into a numerous clump of tender heads.

"It is in this way that we now think evolution has taken place—production of new and marked varieties with fully developed characters.

"What causes the transformation? Interesting developments may result from the separation of the plant, for example, a 'cauliflower' from the parent cabbage, or perhaps a 'crimp' from the carrot or the turnip!"

"Cabbage is the cabbage has a long and honorable career," says Dr. Royal S. Copeland, Commissioner of Health, New York City. "It has graced the tables of kings. The favorite dish of Empress Pompey was cabbage. I have no doubt that many another ruler, if he would tell the truth, would confess a yearning for corned beef and cabbage. It must be terrible to live on ambrosia and nectar!

"The cabbage is a valuable food because it is rich in lime and potash.

"Humans require roughage, coarse indigestible material, just as animals do. Every farmer can testify to the necessity of such foods for his stock. Every dietary expert agrees that roughage must be supplied if we are to be healthy.

"Cabbages is important, then, because it supplies lime and because it furnishes roughage. When it is served with delicious mayonnaise or other dressing it makes a fit dish for any table.

"In Scotland the oatmeal is cooked in the cabbage water, making a dish called 'kale brose.' In this way the mineral elements are saved.

"Almost everybody can eat raw cabbage, but the cooked vegetable disagrees with many. As a matter of fact, too, when the cabbage is boiled, much of the valuable material is carried away. Steaming, instead of boiling, guards against the calcium loss."

HOW CANADA DOES IT
(Indianapolis News)
Some months ago an Indian was found dead in the Canadian Hudson Bay country. The frequent brought out the information that poison bottling whiskey was responsible for the death. The man in the Indian was buried—but Canada did not stop there. The Royal Canadian mounted police called in a sergeant and gave him orders to find the man who sold the bootleg whiskey. The sergeant started out, traveled 1500 miles and part of it via a dog sled. The guilty man was finally arrested, brought back to Saskatchewan and lodged in jail. The date for the trial has been set and the prosecution will be headed by the prosecuting on behalf of the government. Murder is murder, no matter whether bootleg whiskey is used or a revolver—and Canada recognizes no law or rule which permits a bootlegger to commit murder without being punished. Every now and then somebody rises to the question: "How does it happen that in Canada and in England there is much less crime than in the United States. Our answer may not be complete, but here is one reason: In Canada and England the authorities make a strenuous effort to ferret and con vict every criminal. Courts and commissions do not pardon or parole many guilty persons after convictions have been made.

The British say this would be a desperate policy. It would be an abuse of power comparable only to that exercised by Napoleon. The German people of the Rhineland would be in effect the industrial slaves of the French, compelled to produce more or less perforce the world's sympathy would be aroused for Germany and ultimately also, that of France herself. There would be left in a bloody conflict with a foe roused to bitterest hat and resentment of the sheer as a matter of honor and pride. STIRRING MESSAGE TO ONT. MASONS

Grand Master W. N. Ponton of This City Addresses Woodstock Lodge

WORK AS UNIFIERS

Urges All Masons to See That Fanaticism is Excluded from Lodges

Woodstock, Ont., Jan. 10.—With about four hundred guests present the Masonic Lodge of Woodstock brought to a close a red letter day in their history at a monster banquet held in the Armories here last night. The banquet was the concluding event in the ceremonies attending the dedication of the new Masonic Temple and it was a fitting climax to all the high dignitaries of the Grand Lodge of Ontario. The toastmaster of the evening was Rt. Wor. Bro. J. G. Archibald, D.D.G.M., of Wilson District, and a feature of the program was the splendid singing of the Masonic choir of thirty voices and of individual numbers of the choir.

Most Worshipful Grand Master Ponton, of Belleville, who responded to the toast of the Grand Lodge of Canada in Ontario, "This toast was proposed by Rt. Wor. Bro. J. S. Martin, of Pt. Dover, P.D.D.M.M., of Wilson District, and in his response the Grand Master delivered an eloquent oration after carrying sincere greetings to the local brethren and their visitors.

He delivered to the Masons a stirring message regarding their responsibilities. "These are earnest times in Canada," he said. "We have work to do as builders, as makers. I think the public men in this Province should know that there are 100,000 men in Ontario who are strong enough to see that they are administered justly and to help to enforce them. We must be determined to insist on the right of our children to be educated together in this Dominion of Canada. We do not attack any body. We are positive, not negative. We are creative, not destructive."

WARNS AGAINST BOLSHEVISM

The speaker uttered a strong warning against Bolshevism and anarchism and urged all Masons to see that fanaticism be kept out of their lodges and that they meet and fight all kinds of Bolshevism and anarchist propaganda. He said that Masonry was the handmaid of religion and when it ceased to be church it ceased to exist. He urged that the safeguarding of a righteous law should be preached by all intending lawmakers who were members of the craft.

The toast to Canada was proposed by Rt. Wor. Bro. Thomas Forsyth, Toronto Grand J. W., and an able response was made by Rt. Wor. Bro. J. A. Rowland, Toronto, Chairman of the Board of Grievances and Appeals of Grand Lodge. "The Future of Free Masonry" was the toast proposed by Rt. Wor. Bro. A. J. Hamilton Anderson, of Toronto, Rt. Wor. Bro. W. H. Lees, of Wyoming, Grand Secretary, in responding, held out high ideals for the work of the order in years to come.

Wilson District, No. 8, was proposed by Rt. Wor. Bro. Donald M. Sutherland and a kind response was made by Rt. Wor. Bro. J. C. Hegler, Ingersoll; Junior Smiley, Paris; James Ross, Waterford, and A. Mossop, Scotland. The time-honored toast to "The Ladies" was proposed by Wor. Bro. F. Ryall, of Woodstock, and the response was made by Rt. Wor. Bro. J. Fred Reid, Windsor. P.D.D.G.M., Erie District. The toast to the visitors brought speeches from many brethren. The proceedings closed at a late hour with a speech to the Junior Warden's toast by Rt. Wor. Bro. Thomas Forsyth, Toronto, Grand J. W.

SNOOZER'S SIGHT ALL RIGHT

Kitchener, Ont., Jan. 2.—Word reached Manager Harry Watson of the Kitchener senior Hockey Club to-day, that Frank ("snoozer") Trudinski is expected back in a couple of days, and it is anticipated, according to the specialists' report from Toronto, that his sight will be all right in about a week.

His will play no more hockey, as the doctors have told him to urge their hard-luck player to continue say longer, as it is known that Irwin is strongly against his re-entry into the game.

Manager Wismer is not alone down-hearted over the loss of his star defence man, and states that the Green Shirts will yet win the championship. That what he intends to do to bolster up the defence on himself nowa yet.

Next Week Will be Strenuous One For Local Hockey Teams

Belleville hockey teams have a hard week ahead of them. Every game is an important bearing on the championship.

The Belleville Intermediates tackle Queen's, University in the Limestone City on Monday night, while the same club plays here on Friday night. The Presbyterians gave Cornwall a great game at the Hatty Arena last evening and are not to be underrated as Jack Bond last year with Ogoods Hall, and Chick Mondell who played goal for the Royal Military College are both reputed hockypists.

The Juniors play Campbellford on Tuesday night in the "west" Ward town. The local's need this game to stay in the running.

The Big Belleville clash with Point Anne here on Monday night, it will no doubt prove a repetition of last night's game.

ELECTION PROTESTED

It is reported that the recent election in Dungannon township has been protested by the defeated candidate, Mr. Mahr. Mclean, the members protested are Reeve, T. Tariff and councillors R. Kelusky and J. Hawkins. The reasons alleged are varied and interesting and the public will wait out.—Bancroft Times.

CHICAGO WHEAT

Uneasiness over transAtlantic war complications, and an to the domestic winter crop outlook, led to a fresh upturn today in the prices of wheat.

With Liverpool quotations showing a substantial advance and with a continuance of excessive dry weather threatening damage to winter wheat, especially in the southwest, traders on the bear side of the wheat market failed to make any impression in contending that the advance which had been scored from the recent low point of prices was sufficient for the time being. On the contrary, the market began to move upward as soon as business got underway. Meanwhile drastic new moves in the reparations crisis were being reported, and war talk centred in questions such as what Russia might do. Little heed apparently being given to financial and economic factors likely to have a weakening effect on the value of breadstuffs.

Reports that French interests were removing considerable quantities of Canadian wheat afloat in eastern ports had a bearing depressing influence about the middle of the day. Heavy new buying, however, took place on the setback and the market rebounded.

Final transactions were at nearly the top figure of the session yesterday, going about better prospects for farm credit legislation helping to some extent the closing rally. Corn and oats sympathized with the wheat advance. Furthermore Omaha and other centres were reported as far outbidding Chicago for corn at rural points, that usually range higher.

GREY HAIR

Your hair is grey—what then? The frost is grey
When the sun sings it into joyous gold
As Autumn's sun in you begets a day
Even more, of lights mellow and manifold.
Children like Autumn harvest; grey-clad hills
In tender-pencilled twilights, and the sea.
Twist night and sunset, are the fitting star stellas
And palestrina in beatnous mystery;
Like Love's hand brushing back this frosted lock
To find the high-domed temple of thought behind!
'Tis dover's gift, and the mist; the river clock,
And cool cloud, ruffled by the west-wing wind.
Grey hairs? From Thought's white peak, from Learning's light
The silver is caught; show me a soul as bright!

CHICKEN.

Separate 2 young chickens as for "Fried Chicken" sprinkle, with salt, pepper and sage, lightly with flour; dip in egg slightly beaten and diluted with 2 tablespoons cold milk or water to each egg, then roll in fine seasoned bread crumbs. Heat 1/3 cup lard in to-inch skillet, arrange chicken in skillet and cook until a golden brown on both sides, allowing about 5 min. for each side. Watch carefully that chicken does not brown too heavily, remove skillet to a moderate oven, cover and continue cooking (slowly) until chicken is tender. Make a roux of fat from oven, turn in center of hot serving platter and arrange chicken over sauce. Garnish with 6 slices of crisp bacon and arrange hot corn fritters around the platter. Garnish with sprigs of parsley.,

BAKED ONIONS

Usually, onions are boiled to be served at dinner, and butter, salt, and pepper, and occasionally cream added.

Onions, baked, are very good and a change from the boiled ones.

12 medium sized onions.
4 tablespoons butter.
2 tablespoons lemon juice.
2 tablespoons chopped parsley.
1 tablespoon salt.
1 teaspoon paprika.
1 teaspoon sugar.

Peel and parboil onions 10 minutes. Mix butter, lemon juice, parsley and seasonings to a paste. Place onions in a baking dish and divide the butter mixture, placing a little on each onion. Add half cup water to dish and bake slowly for one hour. Keep dish covered until ten minutes before onions are to be taken from the oven.

DAIRY TEST STARTED.

This year's dairy test at the Ottawa Winter Fair got away to a start Thursday. Fifty-nine cows are in the lists striving for supremacy as milk and butter producers, of which number thirty are Holsteins, nine Ayrshires, six Jerseys and fourteen grades. The test continues over four ways and will be completed at 8 p.m. Sunday.

USE CRANBERRIES FREELY

The cranberry is what we would call an anti-scorbutic, because of its vitamines it contains in large amounts. It is also a particularly valuable fruit in that while we are all apt to eat too much of the sweet and starchy foods and not enough of the acids, because it acts like a fruit laxative. If the liver is decidedly inactive, put the raw cranberries through the meat chopper, add sugar enough to sweeten, cover, and let stand for a while in a cold place, then eat, as a sauce, or use a tablespoonful or so with a little lemon juice, salad oil and a hint of salt—as French dressing for a fruit salad.

Most of us are accustomed to the use of cranberries merely as a sauce or jelly for service with poultry. Perhaps we have tried an occasional cranberry pie besides, but that's all.

Why not make a fuller use of this fruit—look for its beauty and its food value? Blend cranberry jelly with cream cheese for a salad, use the fruit (whole) mixed with nuts and celery, again as a salad, use it spiced as a condiment, as a steamed butter pudding, and by all means put up a generous supply of cranberries either as jelly or by the cold water method, for use in the late spring or summer. Blend cranberries with the more neutral fruits, such as pineapple, pears; use them for a shortcake or a pot pie, to be served with hard sauce, and add them to your applesauce as you cook it. Cranberry turnovers for the school lunch basket. Cook a cupful of raw cranberries with your pot roast—they give it a delicious flavor in addition to tendering the meat fibres; use cranberry sauce or a mixture of cranberry and apple sauce with roast pork or indeed with any meat; use it as a filling for shortcake, for pie, for a delicious tart. Indeed the war is a pleasant game is a great menial danger.

The place to begin is in the nursery. Disarm the nursery first. Children's minds are extraordinarily receptive. Impressions are lasting.

Banish all war toys, war clothes, war pictures and war story-books.

No store would put into stock a toy submarine, or a lieutenant's tan and black, with puppets to be beheaded. Parents would revolt at the idea of their children playing games with such toys of violence and death. If they would think, they would revolt at the idea of all kinds of war toys and war clothes. Sham battles are both silly and wicked. Uniforms are made to be soaked in gore.

DISARM NURSERY

Toy pistols, soldiers and guns teach children to tolerate and admire war, and so anticipate killing people in war.

Toy submarines, battleships, airships with bomb-dropping apparatus, and armored automobiles are made and sold.

War is not a pleasant game! War is hideous. There cannot be "civilized warfare." Vast majorities in all countries condemn war. Teaching children that war is a pleasant game is a great mental danger.

ITALY'S DEBT IS ENORMOUS

(By Canadian Press)

Rome, Jan. 11.—After Mussolini's proposal for a joint discussion of the reparation question of the inter-Allied debts, the following figures showing the exact position of Italy in the question were made available.

On April 30, 1922, Italy owed five hundred million sterling to Great Britain, one billion six hundred and sixty million dollars to the United States, and seven million dollars to Brazil, making a total of twenty-one and a half billions of lire in gold.

Germany owes Italy as reparations thirteen billion gold francs, the equivalent of sixteen billion lire in gold.

"I Was Run Down"
"Body was completely covered with Boils"
Will you have ever had boils, some time or other, painful and annoying ones one or two can be. But imagine having your whole body almost entirely covered with them! I am a watchmaker by trade, making a specialty of repairing the highest grade movements. This is probably the most trying of any mechanical work, particularly for a nervous individual like me. Working under great strain both day and night for three months brought me almost to a state of collapse. I was so irritable and nervous that the slightest thing would "send me up in the air." If I managed to get a few hours of sleep at night I was lucky. I had no appetite to speak of. Digestion was miserable. During this time I boils began to appear on different parts of my body and the pain from them made life a misery. My suffering was so great at times that I felt there was nothing left for me to do but to end it all. I consulted doctors but they all told me that I couldn't give up my work and live out of doors, I would go into a decline. As I had no money I couldn't do this. In fact paying doctors' bills and buying medicines used up all the money I made. Finally in desperation, I decided that I would either kill or cure myself, so I began to study my case. I soon found that it was a complete cyst run down as any one could be, and that I had the case of nerves. What I needed was building up. After reading descriptions of different preparations, the one which seemed to fit my case was Dr. Carnol. It has simply performed miracles for me. Four bottles have done more than months of travel could have. I feel like a two-year old. I sleep eight hours every night and can eat anything I like. My skin is like a baby's, free from blemishes of any kind and I have now almost forgotten that I have ever had such things as nerves. I want everybody who is ailing to know about Carnol, because I have such faith in it I believe it will cure any human ill."
Mr. J. B.-Mr. C.
Carnol is sold by your druggist, and if you can conscientiously say, after you have tried it, that it hasn't done you any good, return the empty bottle to him and he will refund your money.

THE CONTROL OF THE EMOTIONS
Many readers will remember the celebrated murder case in Ontario, in which a young Englishman, Bidwell by name, was murdered by another Englishman, Birchall. There was a sensational trial, Birchall's lawyer putting up a wonderful case in his defence.
During the trial Birchall was at ways cool and ate all his meals with evident relish. The trial was a lengthy one and finally Birchall was sentenced to be hanged. The approach of the day of his execution apparently had no effect whatever upon him, such was the wonderful control of the man.
This fact was brought out even more strongly after his death. The morning of his execution he ate a good breakfast consisting of steak, toast and coffee. The execution took place one and one quarter hours after breakfast. The body was opened, and the stomach was found to be absolutely clear of food. I discussed this with a gentlemen of physiology at the time and asked him to account for the rapid passage of the food through the stomach and intestines, the usual average man about twice the length of time consumed in Birchall's case. He said, "Why, there is always a magnificent animal, with a perfect digestion, and with perfect control of his nerves."
You and I would hardly want any food at all, with a hanging ahead of us. And even if we did eat, the food would remain in the stomach like a piece of lead because the nervous mechanism would be paralyzed as to the terrific emotion. You are not a Birchall, "thegefore when you have any unusual worry or emotion, you should eat to keep up your strength and course, but very slowly of easily digested food, such as soft-boiled eggs, or milk, and eat just a little less than usual.

A DROP OF INK
I spilled a drop of ink upon
A little crystal pool,
And watched the tiny ripples run
Along its shallows cool—
The dark rims, fine and finer spun—
That slipped down to the pool.
"They drift apart, now here, now there,"
I said; "they're all alone."
They float with unseen currents there
With the tiny pool,
And fade away, each separately,
Without design or rule."
And then I turned revealing glass
On the marvel I had found,
And saw those cable pans
Through every circling round;
As beads upon a silken cord,
Each spinning disk was bound.
I said: "There is no separate bead
In all the little pool;
But, strung upon one axial thread,
They circle by one rule;
And, round and round, each bound with cadey,
They drift within the pool."
Went . . . And came again.- A blot
Lay in the crystal pool—
One indistinguishable mass
Without design or rule.
Again I went . . . . And came; add found
Only a clouded pool.
O Life, that falleth from above
In heavy drop of sin!
How long shall we, thy coiling rings,
All fused and futile spin?
Let go—that we be scattered up
And melt the Pool within!

CHAPTER XV.

AN OLD FRIEND.

Hardcastle had succeeded in punishing Kinkman for his duplicity in a way which he thought would be more effective and likely to bring him back, humbled and pliable. He had other reasons, too, for his interests were extensive; but when he discovered that Maitland had returned, and that no body answered to the description with which he had contrived to furnish his confidential messenger, of Gone, on the bypath, he was more perplexed than he cared to own. The effect which his reactionary measures had on Kinkman was absolutely beyond his imagination.

Kinkman to this was but a tool to be used as he dictated, but hardly a being to whom his employer had thought of attributing any marked tough of human passion. In fact, it was his perfect machine-like operations which made the instrument so fit for the purpose. At least, such was Hardcastle's estimate of the creature he employed, and he was loath, in any way, to modify it.

But that single exception in Hardcastle's knowledge of Kinkman was farreaching. And, indeed, but a tiny ray in the darkness of the wretched man's character, it let in sufficient light to illustrate to the astute Hardcastle, not enough to enlighten and save the instrument of his wickedness—and turn him into his own ways.

An uncany sense of possible failure crept into Hardcastle's mind at last, in spite of himself and yet how could such a thing be? His success was not a thing of yesterday, and it would seem that he had amply had time and tested, to develop great industries and furnish employment to a large number of human natures. Whatever his faults, he had done well for others as well as for himself, and when he felt he would challenge any man to deny. It would have been much more agreeable to have completed with even tenor of his way without clashing with any man's interests, in which case he would not have been threatened with such a man as Kinkman.

But things seldom fall out as they should, and Hardcastle's present circumstance or persons intervened, of course they had to be brushed aside; and he held himself now with unfinished confidence, as he had held himself in time past, but he was justified by the result, lets fools think or say what they please.

Still, Maitland's visit to Pomeroy with the young Glenmore was singularly calculated for and somewhat disturbing. Had Kinkman any other information which in his terror or cunning he had failed to communicate? Hardcastle asked himself now, with much perplexity: or could it be that he had at last repaired his inherent bungling, and once for all removed that most undesirable young woman out of the way? Ah! in that case the Squire felt he could afford to pay without stint, if indeed the service was complete and sure beyond doubt or question. In that case he knew he would certainly hear from Kinkman. Kinkman was not likely to do such a great piece of service for his employer and miss his reward. And yet if Kinkman had walked in at that moment and demanded his villain's hire, the Squire would have haggled over it as usual, like a man holding a bone almost within reach of a hungry dog, meaning all the time to give it to him when he had gratified his whim to the full in making him jump it to his own satisfaction.

However, Kinkman continued absent, and with every hour's delay the Squire's anxiety and wonder grew. It was a service, he repeated to himself, worth more money than he had ever offered; yes, much more, and money always turned the scale with Kinkman. Still, the hours passed into days and the same state of suspense continued. The Squire tried to put it away from him, sure that a solution, a simple and favourable solution, was bound to come; but when days became weeks, Hardcastle grew positively ill with suspense; his confidence in his own plans and successful manipulation of other men's weaknesses began to forsake him. He could not keep his unwelcome thoughts of him for the first time, as though the air was charged in some mysterious way with danger which eluded all human vigilance. Hardcastle had moved forward all his life with adexterous calculation which seemed almost unerring, and now that he stood face to face with circumstances so menacing he was forced to give up the fight or give terms to the enemy.

He would think it out, and the Manor should, and then there is no time like the present.

His certainly had made an excellent bargain with the old lord, and could afford to make many concessions to the young Glenmore without in any way compromising his position or crippling his resources; and it would look well and show a fine spirit of generosity.

Having come to this conclusion, and thinking it would while to consult his lawyer with a view to giving effect to his intentions he made his way at once to Mr. Jacobs's office.

"Ah!" the man of law said joyfully, "I was just going out to find you." There was a note of suppressed excitement in his voice and manner which did not escape Hardcastle. "Did you meet a gentleman leaving as you came up."

"No!" Hardcastle said, in some astonishment, "I met no one."

"You might have done so," the man of law said, pleasantly, "as he has just left. It is really most strange, most extraordinary."

THE LITTLEST HOUSE

The lights in the window of the littlest house, away down at the end of the street, glowed into the darkness. The flames leaping in the fireplace were reflected on the snow-covered ground outside and made a "witches' fire" beneath the window.

Inside the house there was a great deal of noisy merriment. Foster and little Anne were playing "bear". Foster crouched in his den under the table, and whenever little Anne came close he jumped out with terrifying growls. Mr. White was reading the evening paper, while Mrs. White sat on the other side of the table, sewing, and smiling once in a while at the "bear hunt."

"She looks dad, though," sighed the littlest house. "She's thinking about Dick again. The young scalawag! Of course he'll be coming back some time, but the house is not the same any more. There's too much sorrow, here, now.

"Oh course he's hot-headed, just like his father, and off he goes, 'to see the big having anything,' he said. Well, I can hardly blame him for wanting to leave us," said the littlest house ruefully. "I do look pretty dilapidated, and all my paint is peeling off, and I'm not much to look at, but I bet he's had some mighty good times in me."

The littlest house blinked across the snow. Then it blinked again, this time with surprise. A figure slouched under the street lamp opposite. It didn't take the littlest house to recognize the curly hair and dropping mouth of Dick.

"He's coming home in," breathed the house. "He can't decide whether he'd better or not. If only some one would help him to decide him so, and they wouldn't be cross at all."

The boy across the street shuffled uncertainly. "He looks cold, poor thing," said the house. "He is so large for his age, but he isn't really grown up at all. His money must be running low, for even his savings account must be nearly gone too."

The boy started slowly to move on. "Oh," cried the littlest house. "I must do something!" And it did. It made itself look just inviting and warm as it possibly could. It sent a glow through its windows as if a welcome fire seemed all alive with welcome. The boy turned to take a last look at the house, and then he stopped still. The time past, that he was justified by the

Ring of Steel Tightens

Germans Think They Still Rule

Berlin, Jan. 15—The German Coal Commission has prohibited the coal owners of the Ruhr from supplying coal or coke to France or Belgium save if payment is made for fuel. This stiffening attitude by the German Government is expected here to precipitate dramatic action by the French Government. Dusseldorf, Jan. 15. — France's answer to the German mine owners refusal to deliver coal on any terms was to extend the zone of occupation, originally limited to the area only Bochum region. The new line established by General Degoutte's forces is from 14 to 20 kilometers further eastward, coming to the edge of the great industrial city of Dortmund.

Essen, Jan. 15.—The French authorities in view of the complete change of front by the coal magnates and requisition of their agreement to resume deliveries, are reinforcing their occupation movement. Troops and tanks were being moved in today from the old zone and the ring around Essen was being tightened.

ENFORCEMENT OF O. T. ACT IS ASSAILED BY LENNOX

Conservative Women of Toronto Hear Spirited Member Speak Authoritatively — Miss Constance Boulton Agrees

A large crowd turned out to the euchre given by the North Toronto Women's Liberal-Conservative Association, in the Masonic Hall, Friday night, and listened to a stirring address by Col. T. H. Lennox, M.P., for North York.

Col. Lennox, who received a warm reception, said he intended to confine his remarks to the O.T.A., at the request of the president. The Conservative party was not opposed to prohibition, but was decidedly opposed to the manner in which the Act was being administered. No act was good which necessitated the employment of thugs and criminals in its enforcement. The Conservative Government had administered the law decently, without the aid of undesirables.

Three years of experience under the present system had convinced him, personally, that, while the Act could never be reopened, yet the poor man should be able to get a glass of beer, without harming the wine, he was speaking for himself, not for the Conservative party. His experience in police court practice had convinced him of the belief that things were wrong, and there must be a change. When one saw young girls by the dozens led into the ranks of addicts, there was something wrong. The prohibitionists had said that they would put their so jails and no officials would be required. Today Toronto had five Penitentiary, where the chain gang work under the old system. There were 253 inmates in the Jail Farm today, compared with 60 in 1916. Col. Lennox was loudly applauded throughout his speech. He received an ovation at the conclusion of it, and recorded a hearty vote of thanks on motion of Miss. Constance Boulton, who was loudly applauded when she announced her concurrence in the views expressed by Mr. Lennox. When prohibition first came into force she voted for it because she was deposed that much would be accomplished. Time had vastly changed her mind, and she was not afraid to say so.

MURDER OF GEORGE KAY AT KINCARDINE

Hearing is Enlarged—Important Witness Too Ill to Appear—Case Adjourned For One Week

Walkerton, Jan. 12.—Donald P. (Scobie Dan) McDonald appeared in Police Court here to-day charged with the murder of George Kay, who was shot and killed last Saturday in Kincardine. The preliminary hearing into the murder charge was enlarged for one week on account of the condition of Mrs. Kay, whose life is despaired of as a result o the shooting to which she was also a victim.

McDonald appeared in court but was neither asked to plead nor elect. He sat quietly in the prisoner's dock and seemed to pay little attention to the opening act of the drama which may lead him to the gallows

Owing to the condition of Mrs. Kay and Mrs. John Stout, an invalid woman, who was in a front room of the Kay home during the shooting the scene of the preliminary hearing may be changed to Kincardine. The adjourned hearing, however, as the matter stands at present, will be held on Saturday next.

The town room was filled to overflowing with citizens bent on getting a glimpse of the prisoner across the counter. The hearing was brief. The County Crown Attorney merely pointed out the critical condition of Mrs. Kay, Mrs. Stout's ailment and asked a week's adjournment which was seconded to by the court.

At the request on Wednesday night the jury brought in an open verdict

SNOW NOT SERIOUS HERE

The City and District has been treated to a real old fashioned winter during the last week, the weather assuming the aspect of twenty years ago when those on driving beat, were compelled to bring in the fields to make progress.

Although the snow storm has continued for a couple of days, the railways in this section are not seriously hampered and the trains are running pretty well on time. Track flangers and ploughs are in commission to clear the right of way and railroads are congratulating themselves that they are not obliged to resort to the snow shovel as in the Maritimes where the roads are blocked completely by twelve feet of snow.

ROBERTS STAYS IN JAIL

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, Jan. 15.—Justice Anglin decided this afternoon that the Supreme Court was without jurisdiction to the application for a writ of Habeas Corpus made by John R. Roberts, Montreal Editor, who is held in custody at Quebec for an alleged offence against the privileges and honor of the Legislature.

AGED STEED LOST IN NEWARK SEWER COST CITY $2,000, PLUS PINT OF WHISKEY TO RECOVER

Newark, N. J., Jan. 12.—Paddy, for 22 years just a plain workhorse, fell through a manhole into a six-foot main, 25 feet beneath the street, and wedged two blocky Fitzsons and workmen over the covered into the hole with ropes, and with his rubber boots waded through the mess until they came upon Paddy.

They faced the problem of getting Paddy out. City engineers advised excavation. This was done. A block and tackle, operated by firemen, pulled Paddy to the street. Newark taxpayers will have $4,000 added to their bill.

Dr. John J. Glennon, veterinary, also prescribed a pint of whiskey mixed into a quart of water, and this made the old horse more frisky than his stall-mates in the city stables had beheld him for years and years.

ROTARY CLUB AT WEEKLY LUNCHEON

Local Magnate and Other Rotes Refuse Payment of Club Fines—Were Forced to Settle and Penalty Increased—Good Singing —Prof. Roy of Queen's the Speaker of the Day—An Instructive Address on Germany

The Rotary Club held their Monday luncheon today at the Hotel Quinte and many interesting events happened to hear Professor Roy of Queen's University who delivered an address on Germany. The latter said that on his recent visit to Germany he found a new Germany from that of previous days. The army was practically banished, unemployment was almost unknown, and there was a feelilng prosperity existing on account of the fluctuation of the mark and that the people were not getting the new form of government. He said that the people suffered greatly after the armistice. The people around Cologne were best fed because around that city was an agricultural district, but in some places they suffered so much that when the children were given food their stomachs could not retain same on account of the weakened condition. The people of Bavaria were in favor of the monarchy and had no control of the prohibition question. Germany at present was work. Professor Roy said that the people of Germany admitted the validity of France for

Will be Declared in Default on Deliveries—Bochum Occupied by French Troops—Labor Enters Protest Against Occupation—Seige Stiffened

FRANCE DEMANDS PAYMENT

Announces Plans for Exploitation of Great Industries—Passive Resistance by Germans—Military Operations Complete—People Warned Not to Take Orders From Berlin

GERMAN ARROGANCY

Paris, Jan. 15.—The German government, says an Havas despatch from Essen this afternoon, has sent instructions to all German-industrialists not to co-operate with France in deliveries of coal.

GERMANY IN DEFAULT

Paris, Jan. 15.—It seemed certain to-day that Germany would be declared in default for her 1923 deliveries of merchandise at a meeting of the Reparations Commission which has been called for to-morrow. This would be a new measure against Germany because of her recent declination to keep up with her deliveries.

STINNES CITADEL OCCUPIED

Bochum, Jan. 15.—This city, the heart of the great Stinnes steel works, was occupied by the French to-day. The occupation of Gelsenkirchen has been completed.

LABOR PROTESTS AMID DEMONSTRATIONS

Essen, Jan. 15.—There was a thirty-minute stoppage of work in this industrial centre to-day as a protest against the occupation by the French, and while it was in progress, a crowd carried out an anti-French demonstration outside the mines headquarters. Speeches were delivered and proclamations read but there was no disturbance of the peace.

GERMANS WARNED

General Simon, spokesman for the French authorities, said that if the orders of the French engineers were not carried out, the German people would have to take the consequences. He gave warning that no orders could now come from Berlin as the district was under the control of the French authorities within the terms of the Treaty of Versailles.

The French are experienced in collecting from Belgium to the extent of occupation of the Bochum region and also further forfeitary seaward later, should Germany fail to, comply with the terms. They have already collected from the mines outside of Essen, where the French flag hoisted by the occupying troops was torn down and destroyed, a dispatch to Versailles, to-day. The burgomaster had to apologize to the French and has published publish an appeal warning the population against excesses.

FRENCH FLAG TORN DOWN

Berlin, Jan. 15.—An incident which may result in unpleasant consequences has occurred at Essen, where the French flag hoisted by the occupying troops was torn down and destroyed, a dispatch to Versailles, to-day. The burgomaster had to apologize to the French and has published publish an appeal warning the population against excesses.

FIRE DEPARTMENT HAD TWO CALLS OVER WEEK-END

The Fire Department of this City had no less than two calls over the week-end. On Saturday evening they were called to the home Mr. Mathews, 301½ John Street, to extinguish a blazing chimney. Fortunately there was apparently little damage done. Again on Sunday morning about 8 o'clock, they were called to Bransy Street, where a barn was burning. From the reflections of the fire, it was thought by some citizens that a more serious blaze was in progress but on reaching the scene of operations it was found that a barn was the property of the flames. The fire had gained such headway before the arrival of the "Fire Fighters" that practically nothing could be done to save the building, so they confined their work to save the neighbouring structures and were successful as none ignited.

ANOTHER BANK ROBBERY

$18,000 Taken in the West

Edmonton, Jan. 13.—Eighteen thousand dollars in bank bills, the property of the Imperial Bank, suddenly disappeared in this city a few days ago, while the money was being conveyed from the west end branch of the Imperial Bank to the main office on Jasper Avenue by an employee of the bank.

INTENDED AS PRIVATE

The occupation of the bank was intended as a security for what the French consider the unfulfilled portion by the Germans of final settlement by reason of the failure to supplies of coal from the Ruhr for feeding the industrial population, which, the French say, have in stock a large quantity. It is also that arrangements must be made immediately to import timber and other materials to take their place.

FRANCE STATES PLANS

The French military authorities at Essen today laid their plans for the exploitation of the coal industry. A brief before both the manufacturers and workers. It has become apparent to the French that the bank which they have undertaken is not going to be in any way easy. From the manufacturers and officials the word is expected to come in a kind of passive resistance. From the workers they will have to expect demands for an increase of what they have been made to believe are starvation wages.

MILITARY OPERATIONS COMPLETE

French military operations are at the moment complete. General Degoutte informed correspondents this morning at his headquarters at Essen added that no further advance will be taken except in case of new developments in the reparation situation or in case of local incidents. But nothing of that kind has occurred.

TREASURES OF ANCIENT EGYPTIAN KINGS DISCOVERED

Tombs of Monarchs Opened Up, Disclosing Precious Gems and Treasures Worth Millions, Short Description of the Finds

(By Canadian Press)

London, Jan. 14.—(8 p.m.)—Archeological throughout the world have been stirred up to an unusual pitch of interest by the recent discovery of the tomb of King Tutankhamen, the famous Egyptian monarch of the Eighteenth Dynasty, by Lord Carnarvon, assisted by Howard Carter, a well-known archeologist. For nearly sixteen years Lord Carnarvon and Mr. Carter have been carrying out excavations on the site of the ancient Thebes on the west bank of the Nile, at Luxor, in the Valley of the Kings and the successful result of their long and careful search has been greeted with a chorus of congratulations.

The daily newspapers have given some information on the wonderful discovery of Pharaoh's tomb, but the press generally has not gone into the matter with the wealth of detail given by the Times correspondent of the London Times. Describing the find of the explorers the Times correspond ent says:

First they saw three magnificent State couches, all gilt, with exquisite carving, and animal heads of Typhon, Hathor, and Hou. On these rested bale, beautifully carved, gilt, inlaid with ivory and semi-precious stones and also immensable boxes of exquisite workmanship. One of these boxes was inlaid with gilt inscriptions, and other contained emblems of the underworld; on a third, which contained handsomely embroidered Royal robes, precious stones and golden sandals, were beautifully painted hunting scenes.

Beneath one of the couches was the State Throne of King Tutankhamen, probably one of the most beautiful objects of art ever discovered. There was also a heavily gilt chair, with portraits of the King and Queen, the whole encrusted with turquoise, carnelialapis, and other semi-precious stones.

Two life-sized bituminized statues of the King, with gold work, holding a golden stick and mace, faced each other, the handsome features, the feet and the hands delicately carved, with eyes of glass and headdress richly studded with gems. There were also four chariots, the sides of which were encrusted with semi-precious stones and rich gold decorations. These were dismantled, with a charioteer's apron of leopard's skin hanging over the seat.

Other noteworthy objects were Royal sticks, one of ebony with the head of an Asiatic in gold as a handle; another of the handsomest kind of filigree work; also a stool for a throne with Asiatics carved upon it, showing that the King had placed his foot on the neck of the Asiatic prisoners taken in war. There were some quaint bronze-gilt instruments and a rolling dummy for Royal wigs and robes.

There were enormous quantities of provisions for the dead, comprising trussed duck, haunches of venison, etc., all packed in bons according to the custom of the time. Some remarkable wreaths, still looking evergreen, were found in the ancient tomb. In a box was a roll of papyri, which may render a mass of information about the life and times of King Tutankhamen.

One of the excavated chambers revealed an indescribable state of confusion. Here furniture, gold beds, exquisite boxes, and alabaster vases, similar to those found in the first chamber, were piled high, one on top of another, so closely packed that it was impossible to get inside at the time of the discovery. Numbers of these treasures are still in a very good state of preservation, but others are in a somewhat precarious condition. It is hoped, however, that most of them can be preserved.

MUSIC and DRAMA

MARJORIE DAW, BUSTER KEATON AND SHERLOCK HOLMES SERIES AT GRIFFIN'S TO-NIGHT

The role of Sherlock Holmes in "The Dying Detective", the first of the adventures of Sherlock Holmes series, which are to be exhibited at Griffin's every Monday to Wednesday, starts at Griffin's tonight. The story shown each week is complete, and the series were produced in England and the role of Sherlock Holmes is portrayed by a well-known English actor, Eille Norwood.

Actor, playwright, theatre manager and musical composer, Mr. Norwood is one of the foremost men of the stage in London, and has been seen on the stage in the United States. He made his first appearance in motion pictures several years ago, but his screen work that has attracted most attention is his portrayal of Conan Doyle's great detective character in this series of two-reel pictures. Dr. Watson, the friend of the detective, who is but slightly less known to readers of fiction throughout the world than Holmes himself, is played by Hubert Willis.

The feature offering on the same program is "Fifty Candles," a flippint adventure drama adapted from Earl Burr Digger's famous Saturday Evening Post story, and with the leading roles in the capable hands of Marjorie Daw and Bertram Grassby.

"The Paleface," a highly amusing Buster Keaton comedy, and a Travelogue are also announced for exhibition on the same program.

AUTHOR LIVES STORY TO PROVE IT POSSIBLE

"It Can Be Done" is the title of the Earl Williams production which will be shown at the Regent tonight to Wednesday, matinee daily. The star appears as an author, who is accused of writing wildly improbable stories that his critics claim could never happen in real life. The author proves that such action can and does happen, for he actually lives the story to the satisfaction of his readers. There are many melodramatic scenes and startling pieces of action.

A new kind of serial is being exhibited on the same program. Its title is "Breaking Through," and it fills a long felt want. For months Editors in screen fans have been waiting for another Vitagraph serial with silk-coating impulsions. At last it has come, bigger better, more spectacular and more stirring than any of the famous Vitagraph serials that preceded. Anyone who visits the Regent the first three days of this week will not be disappointed. Wallace MacDonald and Carmel Myers play the leading roles.

A two-reel Fox Sunshine comedy and Fox News Weekly will be exhibited in addition to the above offerings.

PRISCILLA DEAN IN "UNDER TWO FLAGS" HERE THURSDAY

A greater story than nine-tenths of the novels or plays can boast of, more vivid than any picture produced in months, more gripping romance that a "best seller," a higher artistic standard than the average million dollar spectacle, are promised Belleville photoplay lovers in "Under Two Flags," the Universal-Jewel photodrama starring Priscilla Dean at Griffin's this Thursday to Saturday, with a matinee Friday and Saturday. The epic from Ouida's pen is immortal, and the story is essentially simple in its great dramatic punch, but Universal spared nothing in the filming. Supporting Miss Dean are such famous artists as James Kirkwood, a star in his own right; John Davidson, Stuart Holmes, Ethel Grey Terry, W. H. Bainbridge and others.

A two-reel Campbell animal comedy, a new chapter of the "Buffalo Bill" series, and a Travelogue will also be exhibited.

The enjoyment of the spectacle is enhanced by the playing of a special musical setting played by a symphony orchestra.

DRUG GANGSTERS IN MONTREAL

Montreal, Jan. 12.—Innocent girls still in the teens, arriving in Montreal, are being drugged, lured to criminal dens and precipitated to ruin by drug gangsters who haunt railway stations, local social service workers claim. A series of statements from social service and other prominent women's welfare workers are to this effect.

JAPAN STILL FIGHTING BUSINESS DEPRESSION

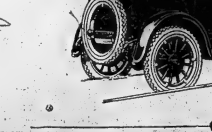
Tokio, Jan. 12.—Business and finance are still suffering depression in Japan, although there has been a noticeable upturn in the general trend since November. The fight for a lower bank rate on capital is being carried on actively by business interests and the fact that the move is winning political support as well as the endorsement of the most influential commercial houses in the country is taken as an indication that something will be done.

Advocates of a reduction in bank rates argue that business is handicapped by lack of capital; that ruling high rates drain the resources of private enterprise, transferring cost of capital to the consumer and thus increasing the cost of living.

Government is expected to release considerable capital within the next five weeks in the form of maturing issues, and the fact that the offlux of gold has been stopped for some time is a sign that the credit situation is improving.

Markets for coal, rubber, edible and drying oils, secondary metals, including tin, lead and zinc and petroleum are growing stronger, but against these are many products that have slumped, such as heavy chemicals, dyes, paints, lumber, iron, steel, fertilizer. Steel registered a series of declines and the outlook is anything but bright.

DODGE BROTHERS
MOTOR CAR



Winter never fails to bring this car renewed praise.

It is because the starting system and carburetor seem to be almost immune from cold weather troubles. The response is prompt, even on the coldest mornings.

The cord tires, with their safety tread, are also particularly desirable in winter. They not only act as a safeguard against skidding, but greatly reduce the possibility of having to change tires under disagreeable weather conditions.

Close fitting curtains, which open with the doors, enable the owner to drive in comfort the whole year round.

Saturday afternoon he came up before Police Magistrate Jarman who assessed him a one hundred dollar fine and a month in the County gaol or in default of payment ten months. Vardy was unable to produce the necessary "greenbacks" so will spend the next ten months at Burwash on the jail farm. License Inspector Nugent took him to Belleville on Wednesday.—Bancroft Times.

FARMERS OF MANITOBA DEMAND GRAIN ENQUIRY

Stated That Federal Government Has Appropriated $40,000 for this Purpose

Brandon, Jan. 12.—An inquiry into the grain trade by a Royal Commission to be appointed by the Dominion Government was demanded unanimously this afternoon by the United Farmers of Manitoba. It was stated that the Government had set aside $40,000 for such an inquiry and that there be any reasonable demand for it. Delegates were anxious that the commission, if appointed, should not be a Farmer representative and should go into all aspects of the grain business very thoroughly.

Manitoba is prepared to co-operate with Alberta and Saskatchewan and the Dominion Government in the organization for 1923 of a compulsory wheat board if the recommendation of the Premier is accepted by his legislature group.

In the meantime steps would have to be taken towards the organization of a permanent co-operative selling agency. This was Premier John Brackon's wheat board policy as announced this afternoon to the United Farmers of Manitoba.

CHINA WILL LIKELY RATIFY THE TREATY

Resolution Defeated Condemning His Acceptance Of the Position

Peking, Jan. 10.—Treaties drawn up at the Washington conference affecting China will shortly be ratified by the Peking parliament, according to Premier Wang Chung-Hui. Nine of the treaties have been submitted to the Chinese legislators recently, including the treaty of peace with Germany and with the Austrian empire. A separate treaty had to be made by China because it did not pledge itself to the agreements arrived at at Versailles.

Popular opinion, according to Premier Wang, has gradually veered from opposition to support of the principal policies laid down at the Washington conference. "At first there was a great deal of misunderstanding as to the work of the conference, but the majority of the people now seem to realize that we got as much out of the conference as was possible."

There is virtually no possibility of the Peking administration endorsing the twenty-one demands made by Japan, however, but the government may even demand return of the leased territory of Kwantung from Japan, but it is believed here that Japan will decline to evacuate.

ANOTHER OVERTIME MATCH

Queen's Win From McGill in Montreal in Extra Session—4-3

Montreal, Jan. 14.—Queen's and McGill played an overtime game in the inter-collegiate series Saturday, going into an extra session to reach a decision, Queen's winning, 4-3. The tricolor fully deserved their victory, having the advantage of the play throughout the greater portion of the 70 minutes.

Good back-checking and a good lot of substitutes were responsible for Queen's victory.

While not a strenuous game, there was plenty of heavy body checking, resulting in three players being carried off the ice. Morrison hurt his head in a fall, and sustained a cut that necessitated two stitches, while Reynolds was taken off with an injured knee. He returned, but could not continue, and was forced to retire from the game. Gibson and Flanagan met in collision, Gibson being carried off.

McGill—Goal, Morris; def., McGeright, Dempsey; centre, Morrison; wings, Flanagan, McNaughton; subs, Davis, Bell, Munro, Brewer.

Queen's—Goal, Quinn; def., Reynolds, Rundall; centre, Boucher; wings, Gibson, Brown; subs, Bond, Smith, Lindsay.

Referee—Walter Small.

Latest Entry in Intercollegiate Hockey Forced Varsity to Overtime Game—Score 6-5

University of Toronto seniors were nearly handed the surprise of their lives at the Arena Saturday afternoon, when University of Montreal, the latest entry in the Intercollegiate Union's senior series, forced the Blue into overtime to win by 6 to 5. The game itself was slow and the close checking also deducted from the interest, but the determined stand of the Montreal students was the saving feature.

FISTIC BATTLES AT HAMILTON

Tigers Win From Ottawa 8-1—A Few Fights Enliven the Game

Hamilton, Jan. 14.—Hamilton improved their position in the N.H.L. race at the expense of Ottawa here on Saturday night when they won by 8 to 1. Tigers, by getting an early lead, broke up Ottawa's defensive tactics. In addition to sixty minutes of fast and interesting hockey the fans were treated to a fat fight by Bouchard and Benedict in the final period. When Referee Marsh stepped in Bouchard had Benedict on the ice, landing on him with both fists. This resulted in a sore nose for Benedict and a two-minute penalty, while Bouchard was ruled off for five minutes.

CITY BOWLING RESULTS

In a league game Saturday night at the Recreation Parlors the G.T.R. Baseball team defeated Springers in a handsome way. R's and Yonse of Springers were the best bowlers of the night. The Springer Boys have improved wonderfully, and are far superior than what they were the past schedule and will make some of the leading teams sit up and take notice. The list up:

ANOTHER OFFER FOR CHAMPION JACK DEMPSEY

English Sportsman Anxious To Provide Match for Joe Beckett

GeorgeMcDonald, representing (Captain Goulding, an English Sportsman, has cabled an offer of £60,000 for Jack Kearns, manager of Jack Dempsey, for a bout between Dempsey and Joe Beckett, English heavyweight, in England June fourth.

This was announced here this afternoon by Jim McKetrick, Kearn's representative in this city.

In the event that Dempsey accepts plans for a Willard-Dempsey bout here next summer may be sidetracked, although it is possible that Dempsey could fight on June fourth, and then fulfil an engagement with Willard on July fourth.

JOHNSTON BEAT BILL BRENNAN

Iowa Heavyweight Looms as Probable Contestant for Dempsey's Crown—Easy Win for Youth

New York, Jan. 13.—The heavyweight battle here last night went to Floyd Johnson, the Iowa sensation, on points, over Bill Brennan, of Chicago, in fifteen rounds. The Iowan has come rapidly forward within the last year, and is looming up as the contender for Jack Dempsey's title.

Johnson's chief belief of Brennan at all stages, whether in boxing or in fighting. He sat a terrific pace from the start, and had the veteran in difficulties several rounds, especially in the 12th and 13th rounds.

Brennan was forced to the defensive from the start, never had a chance to carry the battle to his younger and faster opponent, and only his experience and ring generalship saved him from an early exit.

Johnson's chief fault was his overeagerness, and he missed several good chances in end the affair suddenly.

A galaxy of boxing in past and present heavyweight history witnessed the bout, including three former champions, Jack Dempsey, Jack Johnson and James J. Corbett. Willard, who is seeking a return match with Dempsey, was a tumultuous participant.

Jack Renault, Canadian heavyweight, knocked out Joe McCann, of Newark, N. J., in the second minute of the 12-round semi-final match. Result weighed 193½, and McCann 205½.

JUST SIX WEEKS TO WAIT

Cincinnati, Ohio, Jan. 3.—The battery men of the Cincinnati National League baseball team will spend 6 weeks in Dawson Springs, Ky., getting into condition prior to the departure of the rest of the players for Orlando, Fla., on their southern training trip, Manager Moran announced today. The catchers and pitchers will leave here March 3 for the resort.

GIANTS' COLLEGE CATCHER

New York, Jan. 13.—The New York National League Baseball Club has announced that a contract had been signed with Alberti Comeneau, former University catcher. Comineau was brought with the club on the spring training trip to San Antonio, Texas, in March.

BOXING SHOW

EBER AND WILSHAW

On January 24, at the Collegiate, Toronto in the first boxing show of the year to be held there, Curly Wilshaw of Toronto, and Bobby Eber, of Hamilton, claimants to the featherweight and bantamweight championships of Canada respectively, meet in a ten-round decision bout. The same bouts were matched once before, but an injury to Eber's hand prevented the meeting. Wilshaw's chances of beating Eber have improved greatly since then. The Toronto boy, while training in New York with the best boxers of that city, has developed a stream of aggressiveness. He retains all his old cleverness and has added not a few tricks of the trade. At 118 pounds he will be in a position to give Eber the hardest bout of his career.

FRENCHMEN TIE THE IRISH

Battle Twenty Minutes Over time Saturday Night and Finish 2-2

After battling 80 minutes here Saturday night St. Patrick's and Canadiens were forced to call the bouncs even and the score at the finish was 2 to 2.

St. Patrick's started off as though they fully intended to run the score into double figures and when Alex Connell slipped the rubber past Vezina they appeared well on their way. But this goal seemed to shake the Habitants out of their lethargy and for the remainder of the period they gave the Green Shirts at much as they received. In the second session Canadiens knotted the count, only to have Dye again put the locals in front. In the third period Odie Cleghorn tied the score and for 35 minutes the teams strained on even terms.

In the overtime period, which lasted 20 minutes, Canadiens seemed content to remain on the defensive, and resorted to one-man rushes. They took no chances, and, as events proved, wisely reckoning was right. St. Patrick's attacked determinedly and Adams broke through the defense, only to have Connell hook the rubber away as he went to shoot. Dye duplicated Adams' feat on the next rush, and in the minutes later the French had a close call when the sharpshooter drifted the puck at the upper corner and struck the post. Joe Malone attempted to beat Rosch with long bits, but the little fellow was not letting any easy ones slide past him.

RESIDENCE RULE TO CURB ROVING OF PLAYERS

Secretary of U. S. Association Has Proposal Designed to Stop Wholesale Migration From Canada

Pittsburg, Pa., Jan. 13.—An amendment to the constitution of the U. S. Amateur Hockey Association providing for a one year's residence rule to make a player eligible to participate in championship events will be proposed at the next meeting of the association in Troy, N. Y., Schenley D. Schreiber, treasurer. The amendment will be designed to overcome the wholesale migration of players from Canada during the hockey season.

In announcing that he would offer the amendment, Mr. Schreiber said:

"The amendment, if adopted, would overcome the wholesale migration of hockey players from Canada.

"This will not be done to shut Canadians out of the U.S. hockey," he added, "but a move more stability in their residence in this country, and to curb the migratory player who comes and spends a few months here in the winter and then returns to Canada. Canadian players will always be welcome in the U.S."

Mr. Schooley said that he was in communication with W. A. Hewitt, secretary of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association on the question, and "he is of the opinion that although we can do it might lead to a rupture of our relations with the Canadian authorities."

THE DRURY GOVERNMENT AND THE ELECTION

Already, before the session of the Legislature open in Toronto, there is much speculation as to the date of the provincial elections which must take place, and the general belief appears to be that the date will be set for sometime during the month of October.

The Premier's prospects of return to power are most uncertain and he will face the electors as no other government has done before, as he is denied the right of appeal to all classes of citizens. He is a class leader entirely, and the recent convention of the U.F.O. rejected his "catch-vote" policy of broadening out. By this sudden change in platform plank, Hon. Mr. Drury doubtless hoped to influence the city delegates to vote for his continued administration. It is very uncertain and not improbable that he will have no candidates outside of the rural constituencies and these cannot be regarded as particular strongholds.

These have been many defections from the U.F.O. ranks recently and the resignation of Hon. T. A. Crerar and R. W. E. Burnaby has not helped the Premier's case, while numerous municipalities having Hydro Radial contracts are in rebellion against the government for withdrawing the bond guarantee in an effort to stop the radial enterprises.

There has been a serious split in the U.F.O. political enterprises such as the Co-operative stores, and the disregard and consequent breaking of promises made by the farmers' provincial government has not assisted materially in maintaining the confidence of the electors who supported him initially.

Taxation has been increased since Hon. Mr. Drury's advent to power and no municipality or individual in this province is one dollar richer through the peregrinations of these inexperienced politicians.

Great dissension is evident in the ranks of all U.F.O. organizations which were formed under the guise of commercial institutions, but through subterfuge and application of disillusionment eventually became, as they were intended to develop, part and parcel of the Farmers' political movement.

The U.F.O. clubs have lost fifty per cent. of their membership through this pussyfooting. Hastings County being no exception, and at the recent annual meeting of the Frontenac County U.F.O. only four clubs were represented and the northern part of that County is apparently disorganized.

In the meantime Conservatives and Liberals who forsook their party to join the U.F.O. ranks are wondering whether or not their previous relationships will receive or disclaim them when they revert to their old principles. Some of these floppers have bombarded their friends with requests for personal opinion as to the course which they should follow. Others have a proposed change of heart and have issued manifestos and despatched to their old organizations, communications which have been delegated to the waste basket.

It is a terrible thing to be a man without a country and the time has arrived when those who have temporarily sojourned in the ranks of the Philistines will want to return home.

They will be welcomed at the threshold anyway and will receive the blessings of the heads of the house, who, have realized long since that the prodigals have repented. Doubtless some of them will have to wipe their feet on the doormat before entering the party halls and it is certain that all these deserters will be thinking:

"I wish that my tongue could utter
The thoughts that arise within me."

THE SALVATION ARMY NOT DOWN-HEARTED

The recent disastrous conflagration at Peterborough, involving the total destruction of the splendidly equipped and comparatively newly-erected building of the Salvation Army is indeed a heart-rending loss for that organization to bear.

But the Salvation Army enjoy the rather envious reputation of being able to bear such adverse conditions with fortitude and this recent loss will prove to be only a temporary set-back to their plans.

The general public appreciate the sincerity and application of the Salvation Army in Canada and it is obvious that, while they extend their deepest sympathy in this recent loss, they will come forward abundantly with adequate financial aid to rebuild the edifice destroyed.

The Salvation Army is not down-hearted in this temporary rebuff. It will prove trivial to them in relation to the achievements of the future.

Already a concerted effort is being made by the citizens of Peterborough to assist this useful and indispensible organization in its task of reconstruction and it is likely that a meeting will be called immediately to discuss ways and means of assistance.

Peterborough will not fail in this crisis.

ARTIFICIAL ICE CURLING

Now that the Scottish curlers have arrived in Canada and among other diversions, are indulging in the yearly game, those who have been consistent advocates of artificial ice in some centres are again expressing their arguments.

The seasons in this section of the country seem to be ever changing from year to year and followers of the sport should begin to consider ways and means of safeguarding themselves against possible mild weather. Fortunately there has been little inconvenience occasioned so far during the Scots' trip but in many places, movements have been inaugurated relative to artificial ice surfaces to place sportsmen in an independent position regarding the whims of Jack Frost.

Artificial ice is expensive but it ensures a continuity of play which is impracticable when a club is dependent on natural ice.

Down in Boston, the Clyde Park Club have installed an ice-making plant and the devotees of the sport are daily increasing. In a circular to the members, this club invites women members to play the game and announces "Curling events for women if they will participate, as is done in Canada, and for mixed teams."

Just here, it may be well to mention that Canadian women and particularly some of the fair sex of Belleville, have long been experts with broom and stone.

Many centres have declared for artificial ice surfaces and are operating plants on a profitable basis, in conjunction with the ice-cream, refrigeration storage, and commercial ice businesses, which take care of the overhead during the summer season.

Owing to the fact that the situation may possibly develop in the future, when the ice surface period may be inadequate for the prosecution of the winter sports in this city, the suggestion of such an emergency might well be investigated at this early date and arrangements made to provide against the condition.

PASSING COMMENT

New Yorkers dance to Chicago radio music. In every other place the men dance to the tune their wives call.

Perhaps the bride gets lots of clothes before marriage because she knows she will get so few afterwards.

Now if Wojciechowski is assisinated, we will know that a linotype operator did it.

Indignation against their recreant representative, Mr. Hammell, M.P., who recently flopped over to the Liberal side, is quite justifiable by the Muskoka members of the U.F.O.

Even the air we breathe seems to be no longer entirely free since the radio enthusiasts interfere with each other.

Public ownership of Canada's railroads is not likely to be enhanced by Sir Henry Thornton rescinding the order forbidding employes taking an active part in politics. To many it will appear a retrograde step.

HERE AND THERE

LOVING HEARTS

If loving hearts were never lonely,
If all they wish might always be,
Accepting wishes they look for only,
They might be glad, but not in Thee.

Well may Thy own beloved, who see
In all their lot their Father's pleasure,
Bear loss of all they love, save Thee,
Their living, everlasting Treasure.

Well may Thy happy children cease
From restless wishes prone to sin,
And in Thy own exceeding peace
Yield in Thy own-exceeding peace
Yield to Thy daily disciplies.

We need as much the cross we bear
As air we breathe and light we see,
It draws us to Thy side in prayer,
It binds us to our strength in Thee.

PRESS OPINIONS

PROHIBITION IN CANADA
(Buffalo Express)

The issue of prohibiting the sale or manufacturing liquor in Canada is not without its humorous aspects.

The Ontario Board of Licensee Commissioners have run up against a peculiar situation with regard to the profession of dentistry. Up to the present time it has been customary to permit dentists to use as much liquor in their work as was considered "reasonable." Now it is found necessary to restrict the amount to three quarts a month.

As dentistry is practiced in the United States it is difficult to understand why any liquor should be necessary, but in Canada it seems that the practioner has adopted the pleasant custom of giving their patients the option of laughing gas or liquor. The great majority expressed the choice of liquor, therefore the "reasonable" amount of liquor for this practice became very large.

The hews story does not go into details as to how the liquor was made to take the "place" of a stupefying anesthetic, but the reader can use his imagination.

GIVING PRAISE WHERE PRAISE IS DUE
(Lindsay Post)

In discussing matters municipal and especially the relations existing between the citizens and public, the Brighton Ensign truthfully remarks that these officials do not receive credit for the credit and thanks due them. Each year a small number of men offer their services as councillors, reeve or school trustees for the coming year, and at the municipal elections some of them are chosen by the citizens of the town to fill the positions.

The citizens take an interest in the elections—that is quite natural, because the men they elect to the different offices are the men who will transact the town's business during the next year. But for the week or ten days between nomination meeting and election day the citizens regard the candidates in what strikes us as a peculiar manner. Apparently the candidates running for office are seeking a great favor from each elector—his or her vote. Votes elect candidates or lack of votes defeat them, and when candidates have been elected the people who support them feel that the candidates have been granted favors. But—what about the men the candidates confer on the electors? It is not a favor to the ratepayers when a man helps transact their business during the year? And is it not a favor to the ratepayers when a man offers himself (whether or not he is elected) for a position on the council or school board? The men who fill these positions are doing something for their town—they are doing their duty as citizens by helping to shoulder the burden of their town's responsibilities.

In future let us give a little more credit, praise and real support and less of that condescending sort of support to the men who are willing to fill the public positions and look after our interests.

ADVERTISING CANADA
(Chicago Tribune)

Canada reports that tourists, mostly Americans, spent $100,000,000 in the Dominion last year. Most of that money was for entertainment and of a creation, with a by-product of education. In so far as our people chose Canada for their vacation ground as because its climate was more mildly comment would influence the situation. But for those who travelled for scenery and for a chance at regular outdoor recreation there might be a word said as to the advantages of our own country. The United States hasn't all the game which is offered by Canada, but it has a great variety. It has mountains just as high, streams just as deep and wide, lakes just as clear and blue, and other scenic attractions of equal merit, and of wider range. But Canada has advertised its attractions. The Government sends out to the world. The railroads are very active in it. The hotels and tourists' agencies do their part. And they get the business—$100,000,000 of it last year. In that lies a valuable hint to the United States and especially to those States having the most attractive natural advantages.

EAST AND WEST.
(Montreal Star)

The fact may not yet be fully apparent, but it is true that many Western farmers begin to doubt the wisdom of the methods which they have pursued and to modify their attitude towards the "Eastern interests." They begin to admit that five months of farming and seven months of waiting for the next crop is not a system that can always produce satisfactory results. They begin to realise that they must in greater degree turn to stock-raising and mixed farming. They begin also to realise the value of local markets and the advantages of proximity to industrial communities.

AN EX-PRINTER'S PLAINT

Ha! If but winter would come and go
In a night,
It would fill many people with keenest delight—
With its frost and its snow and its back-biting blast,
That chill one right through to the bone with thy last;
Nok to mention the lack, ever present, of fuel.
And then only gained at a price that is cruel.
So I think to myself, had I plenty of riches,
I would soon hie myself to the fairest of climes,
Where none of these nerve-racking torments I'd see,
Nor coal barons haughty, to grow fat on me.
A place where one needs but a pair of pyjamas,
To loll on the shores of the balmy Bahamas,
I'd enjoy the long hours from sunrise to sunset,
And all that is good out of life I would get.

But alas! When life's toiling and moiling is past,
I may hopefully wish for a long, cooling blast.

BROUGHT MEDICAL AID IN MID-OCEAN

New York, Jan. 12.—Radio brought the surgeon and an operating party performed on the high seas when yesterday the Lloyd Sabaudo liner, Conte Rosso, ran 150 miles off Sandy Hook to pick up a seaman on a freighter whose life would be saved only by an immediate operation.

The Conte Rosso left Naples for New York on January fourth. She was passing near the southern tip when a radio message was received from the United States Shipping Board steamship Eastern King that a member of the crew was seriously ill, and that an operation was imperative within twelve hours if his life was to be saved. The vessel was wrecked within sight of each other at the time, and the captain of the freighter had broadcasted his call for medical assistance hoping it would be answered by a liner with a surgeon on board. When she got the message the Italian vessel was 1,230 miles east of Ambrose Light Ship.

As soon as he got the position of the Eastern King, Captain Cagnoni, of the Conte Rosso, changed his course, and headed in a northeasterly direction. Late in the day the two ships came in sight of each other. There was a rough sea running at the time, but the crew of the freighter lowered a small boat, and started in with the surgeon and nurse to it. The transfer to the Conte Rosso was made in safety, and the sick man, an American seaman, was taken on board.

The Conte Rosso has a staff of three doctors and a well-equipped operating room. Everything was in readiness for the patient. He was taken at once to the operating table, and within an hour he had been successfully operated on. The Conte Rosso will arrive in New York Monday, a day late.

JAPAN INVESTIGATES "BIRTH CONTROL TOO

Tokio, Jan. 16.—A committee to investigate the practicability of the practice of Birth Control in Japan has been appointed by a group of radical thinkers, and will start operations, following an investigation by some of the doctors since the visit to Japan of Mrs. Margaret Sanger, American birth control advocate.

Dr. Nakahara, of Keio University, has submitted reports of his investigations, stating that birth control would promote the welfare of Japan and that the increase of weak people means ruin of the state.

DECORATING AND STENCILLING

Decorations with a stencil are not only artistic, but easy to do. And while the amateur can make really good-looking things by decorating with it, it is not amateurish-looking. Indeed some of the best decorators use it frequently for backgrounds and gives a uniformity of appearances. Then again stencilling can be a base for more elaborate hand-painted effects.

Attractive objects to stencil for either personal use, home decoration or gift-giving include enamelled trays, lamp shades, candle screens, paper or fabric wall hangings, curtains, portieres, table runners, bureau scarfs, bedspreads, "mother-outs," sofa pillows, pin cushions, screens, collar and cuff sets, window boxes, plant stands, tables, chairs and other furniture.

To make a stencil, select your design, tracing the design on with tissue paper and a lead pencil. In first outlining the design it must be remembered that a large, simple, showy, conventionalized motif is best. Designs worked out from squares, circles and triangles are often very effective. But conventionalized flowers, fruits, butterflies and birds like parrots, peacocks or blue birds are also popular. Most important to bear in mind in order to make the conventionalized motif solid enough—that is, with connecting links, so that when it is traced upon the stencil board and then cut out, that parts of the design will not drop out. Next cut out, with a sharp knife, whatever design is traced on.

"A single stencil, applied to the object to be decorated, is meant to be single. Fasten the stencil from which the design has been cut to the material to be stencilled with small thumb tacks, drawing both very smooth and tight. If a drawing board is used having a bread board cover all the purpose nicely. Either oil or water color paint can be used to apply the color, depending upon the fabric. Oil paints are more successful on cloth, while water color is better for paper. Whichever is used, extreme care must be taken to have just as little paint on the brush as possible to avoid it running beyond the solid lines of the stencil. This is the most important detail in making a neat, attractive stencil decoration. It is best to have a bit of blotting paper handy in case the color threatens to run, for it can be lightly touched to the edge and thus color absorbed before it spreads.

If the stencil is carefully cleaned each time and properly handled it will serve many times.

If it is desired to conceal the stencilled appearance and give the effect of a free hand decoration, lights and shades can be applied with a paint brush by hand afterward. But, of course, the stencilled decoration must be thoroughly dry first.

Much of the attractiveness of this style of decorating depends upon attractive color combinations as much as "a good design." This both the fabric and the room it is to occupy should have consideration. As a rule sharp contrast is a good plan in choosing colors, done in a darker or brighter color than the background. Fine stencilling does not show up to much advantage. If fabrics like pongee, unbleached cotton, linen or China silk are to be stencilled, colors like orange, red or henna, black, or rose will prove good looking. Several colors, too, can be used. But if several colors are used in a single stencilled motif great care must be taken to apply but one at a time, waiting for each color to dry separately that any blending may be avoided. A safer and more artistic way to use a number of colors in stencilling is to alternate colors in different motifs, applications of the design in the stencil. Thus a certain

A GARDEN OF THE BRAVE.

I sometimes dream that in the years to be,
When France shall rise once more, resplendent, free,
Over my corner there shall be a grave
A Garden of the Brave.
And in my dream I see a quiet nook
That's kept by a silver running brook.
Broken Belgians sleep within this lovely spot
Nor dread the sunshine's heat nor winter's cold.
Near them stunted Australians rest. And very near,
A mighty cenotaph of maple trees,
All gold and crimson, fling with every breeze
A cloud of little winged seeds that fly
Where brave Canadians lie.
Beneath of corpulet of shamrock rest
Old Ireland's sons; the bravest and the best,
And hark! the music of the pipes!
They play
Always where buried Scotchmen sleep, they say,
And purple thistles whisper in the dells
To bonnie heather belles.
Old England's roses here, the white and red,
Where sleep in countless graves her English daisies grow,
The soldiers loved them so!
And farther still, a little nook, yet dear,
The friendly sunbeams love to linger here
Where glowing California poppies nod,
And yellow goldenrod.
I dream that as the years move on
Still I'll see as Pilgrims to this hallowed place,
And pause beside each fragrant, flowering glade,
Or rest beneath the leafy maples' shade,
And hold communion there in love divine,
And pray, as at a shrine!
—Vilda S. Owens, in Vancouver World.

border can be very pretty with say red, a blue and then a yellow conventionalized flower—both of exactly the same design, of course. Alternating a flower and then a leaf design is also other pleasing way to stencil a decoration. Green and another color is a good scheme for this, but all brown is artistic where just autumn leaves make a border. Much depends, too, on the character of the room where stencilled articles are to be placed. An informal room is cheerful with bright colors and will put-up-to-date with the many striking color combinations now in vogue, such as bright blue and green, black and red, orange and blue, while a bedroom looks daintier with a stencil of all one color or each as green, lavender or rose. In a living room dignified effects may be obtained with browns, oranges or even purple.

It is also worth knowing that hand cut stencils with colors and brushes come all ready to use, and there is quite a variety of patterns to choose from, such as potted plants, poppies, tulips, roses, grapes, cattails, pond quills, wild roses, pears, vines, rabbits, cats, Chinese coolies, Japanese maidens, Dutch children, Dutch girls and boys, wind-mill borders and numerous conventionalized squares and circles.

Many of these, enamelled in the gay colors of the modern style, will quite transform an ordinary article into a useful decoration brings a surprising amount of distinction and originality. Use enamels sparingly, for simplicity after all, is art.

Stencilling, indeed, with its solid effect of color, is very harmonious on wood, and for this reason it makes a charming decoration for children's toys and other wooden novelties like door-stops.

CONVICTED MAN FAILS TO SHOW ANY EMOTION

Windsor Man Believes He Might Just as Well Die Now as Wait Two Weeks

TO HANG FEB. 5TH

Cannot Read or Write—Two Weeks Reprieve Means Nothing in his Short Life

Windsor, Jan. 12. — "Emotions? Who, him? No, sir. He didn't show any emotion."

The jailer of Essex county was speaking for Edward Bianchi convicted slayer, who was told Monday that, instead of hanging by his neck in a lawful and legal manner must be he dead, on Jan. 23, he might continue to exist in the death cell until Feb. 5. The reason of extension of life was that the hangman had another job on his hands on the date set, and agreed to fend out "get around" to Bianchi that day.

Bianchi killed Thomas Fraser in a street fight and they were bound guilty of murder there was no recourse for the judge but to pass that grim and awful sentence, "to be hanged by the neck until dead, and may God have mercy on your soul."

Sick with Terror.

It's a neat question for the philosopher to decide whether it's the soul of the man or the unreasoning animal fear of death that is making him sick these days. Both he is sick with terror and longing for the life that has been declared a forfeit to society. There was a cage some eight feet by five in which to live, a barred window to gaze out of and an expressionless face that was starving at one night and day, one grows, doubtless, a bit abnormal. There was some idea last week that when the end of his two weeks' reprieve he would do something—sing, or pray, perhaps, or weep tears of blood. He didn't. He merely emitted a sound that might be described as a grunt.

He has three visitors, the jail doctor who looks after his sick body, a priest who tends his sick soul, and a lawyer who would prove him of benefit. The priest may be successful. That is a matter that lies between Him and the priest. The lawyer will not reach a sickness that is in itself but a symptom, the illness that comes from being driven to the threshold of death at a fixed hour and day.

The view from his window has been growing more depressing since autumn went. Once it was blue, that distant sky, with white clouds drifting slowly past and the dark of the evening wing. Now it is winter gray—the most sombre and saddest of all colors. The sun is in hiding, more than that,—it's against the bars is dirty white from coal smoke.

Can't Read or Write

Bianchi cannot read. He can not write. It is for this reason, perhaps, this shackling his mind cannot even soar out beyond the bars and the walls and find a few moments' happiness. Its power of visioning is limited to such things as picturing the quickening of a few cubic feet of the cold, rough embrace of a rope about the neck.

There is no space enough in the cage to walk about. But why walk? He has nowhere to go. He can sit with his head in his hands and stare at the stone floor until a self-hypnotic state is arrived at, a waking unconsciousness that is the next thing to sudden sounds. Up to Monday there was no message to bring him, unless the message of finality should be brought by the priest. He was dead already to the world—dead to himself except that his heart beat on, the blood flowed and nature functioned, machine-like.

The events of two weeks' reprieve meant nothing—not even hope. It seemed almost cruel. Two weeks more to wear down to sit and stare at nothingness and feel the dread of the end. No, he didn't laugh when the message came. He didn't sing and he didn't drop to his knees to give thanks. He grunted.

"No, of course Not," Jacobie said humbly, "I am forgetting that you could not possibly know! No, of course not! Well, as representative of the firm of Maitland and Rockman has just been here to give notice of a claim upon the Fonseval Estate and all properties connected with it.

"Certainly it is very strange, and in the unlikelihood as you have said, as the Squire remarked, with no appearance of unjust interest.

Their conversation continued the lawyer runs up into many figures, and is really most surprising from such a firm.'

"The sources of their information must be well linked into," Hardcastle said, with great composure; 'it is quite easy to be misled in such things, and it is hardly likely that they seriously intend to take up such a preposterous claim.'

"Perhaps, perhaps,' Jacobie remarked, but the reputation of the firm hardly lends itself to any suspicion of such a belief.'

"Very true,' the Squire admitted thoughtfully; 'there is just this much ground for their action, that the property is now exceedingly valuable, perhaps more so than anyone could foresee at the time it came into my hands; and there may be a sunicion in their minds that I was better-informed as to its possible value at the time than I really was. In fact, I knew no more than did Glenmore of its real worth, and dealt as fair as a man could without expert information. But, in any case, Clen' more wished to leave the country, and it is doubtful if he would have done any differently even if he had known. But the place had become hateful to him, and he desired to part with it and settle up old scores at any price. He was a bad man in business sense, quite understand, to whom the best things of life, in a financial way, had no proper value. And he would have made the same concessions to any man willing to furnish him at the moment with ready money—it was all the same.

'Ah, indeed, I see!' Jacobie remarked, looking much interested; 'it is just the exercise then who furnish us with interesting cases!' and he smiled knowingly, intending a joke which Hardcastle failed to see.

'I cames, in fact,' the Squire continued, 'to see if arrangements could by made for placing a small sum at the disposal of the young Glenmores, as a voluntary acknowledgement, you understand, of my old friendship with his father; but, of course, I cannot admit any claim—absolutely nothing in fact.'

'I could hardly advise such liberality under the circumstances,' Jacobie said with some asperity; 'besides, they threaten to raise questions touching the murder case for which Glenmore was tried. At least, so they inform me.'

'They cannot really mean that,' the Squire said hastily; 'I am amazed at such a thing! The case was tried with the utmost care, and the finding of the court is well known.'

'Yes, so I pointed out to them,' Jacobie said.

'And besides,' remarked Hardcastle, 'Glenmore is said to have died abroad somewhere, and—'

'He is dead, then?' Jacobie said promptly, with a note of query; 'if he is dead they are, I presume, in the case aware of it; but he has left a full history of the case, is would seem, with documents and statements duly attested, and the names of all persons concerned as witnesses. In fact, as I understand it, a great body of new evidence is in their possession.'

'I don't believe it,' the Squire replied rising with considerable asperity and perished with him. They have no evidence.'

'Then in that case we can beat them easily,' Jacobie remarked, with marked satisfaction; 'that is, of course, if we can prove what we say.'

It was a slip of the Squire's; he had no intention of indicating, even to his solicitor, that Lord Glenmore had perished,' or that he had any information as to the pable or manner of his death. But Jacobie noticed it and wondered. He secretly hoped he had not; in which hope he was quite disappointed. But the lawyer was too much of a fox to let also the momentary spasm of dismay which flashed over Hardcastle's face, and which determined him at once to read up the long-past trial of Lord Glenmore.

Hardcastle, when he left, in spite of all his self-control was restless and ill at ease. Jacobie's unexpected announcements that were quite new to him; and for once, at least, was in doubt as to the best course to follow.

He would wait developments, he said, at the Manor, which was nearer to London than Jacobie's office and home. The next hour he concluded he would return to Fonsevar, and again he decided in favor of the Manor for his future retreat. Finally, however, he convinced himself that the must return to the Hall, and attend to business of importance without delay.

A curious sense of isolation smote him as the carriage turned into the drive.

My son, my son!' he repeated to himself, 'he will surely learn wisdom and return; surely he will return.' Yet why him? I need him!'

Macalpin was against him, he told himself, and because he was visionary fool and unable to judge right in ordinary affairs. But, then, he was trying to do his business for the next.

That Bony Ache of Yours

By Frank R. Barton, M.D.

DOES YOUR HEART EVER TAKE A REST.

You have often heard it said that your wonderful pump—the heart—works every minute of the day, every hour of the day and night without rest.

Is that really true? No! To a certain extent, yes. But not entirely true. The heart rests from the valvular action, as you and I do.

How does it do it? In a very easy sort of way. It simply takes a short rest between the first and the second beat and a longer rest before it begins the first beat again.

If you put your ear to the chest you can hear the heart beat. Now, the ear should be placed on the lower side of nipple of left breast, you will hear sounds, like the following—"Lub"—"Dub," "Lub"—"Dub," or first sound is when the blood is being pumped away from the heart, and the second sound when "Dub"—the blood is flowing into the heart.

Now, the average heart beats seventy two times between the "Lub" and the "Dub" and the period of time between the "Dub" and "Lub" is about the same. Now, if we count seventy two times, we find that the heart actually rests for about one minute and a quarter, or three-fourths of the time. Not such a bad rest is it? Now that is the reason that it can keep on working for full twenty-four hours. Simply because it knows enough to rest. What about you and me? Do we get enough rest? You can't work at full speed, by pressure or par so you can call it, unless you get real rest. Here's the example of the faithful heart.

"When caught in a blizzard," said Fred,

"With nothing to help but your head

Just use it and see

What a help it can be;

Without it I might have been dead."

It was cold, bitterly cold, as Fred bumped along in his little car over the mountain road. The wind whis tled right through the windshield and dismally flapped the curtains that interfering snow sifted it through the cracks and peppered him in the face.

"Brr," shivered Fred, "I'm glad I have plenty of gas. I can't be more than a few miles from the camp up here in a storm. Why do you suppose Farmer Best ever chose to live in this forsaken place? Don't blame him for wanting me to come up after his telephone. He's surely out of the world in every other way."

He was at the top of the hill when his thoughts were disturbed by a strange grating sound! He coasted to the bottom of the hill before he got out to investigate. The frame of the car had given away, and the engine was quite dead! What could he do? It must be miles to the nearest farm house. The only familiar object in sight was a telephone pole—and the Fred thought of his tool-box. He took the little telephone from the car and strapped it across his shoulders H would climb the pole, connect his telephone, and call central to send some one out to get him. But his heart sank! He had no spurs.

The drifting snow filled his eyes. He tried to climb, but the pole was slippery from the snow. After ten minutes of hard work, Fred had to give it up, numb with cold, and sick with despair.

Then, for the first time, Fred noticed the barbed wire fence on the other side of the road. Where had he heard that the farmers here in Canada sometimes used these for their private lines? Of course it was absurd to hope, but it wouldn't hurt to try. He connected one wire of his test set to the top wire of the fence, and stuck he other wire in the ground. Hi ear to one end of the test set and his last hope was just leaving him when very faintly he heard, "Hello Central!"

"HELLO!" he shouted, at the top of his lungs, only to discover that his instrument had become dead at the end. His heart sank right down through the soles of his shoes. It was like having a last straw dangling right a front of you and your hands tie o you couldn't grab it. Then in t warm rush of hope that followed came over him that if he talked into he receiver they could hear him.

"Well, hello there," the farmer horted back. "What's the matter? t took you a long time to answer."

PETER THE GREAT STANDS FAST

When the Czar Alexis of Russia died he left three sons: Feodore, the oldest, and Peter and Ivan, who were half-brothers. Fhodore succeeded to the throne, and upon his death Ivan became the next ruler. The Russian people hated Natalie, Alexis' second wife and the mother of Peter, believing that she wanted to get rid of Ivan in order that her own son might be sole ruler. Ivan was weak and timid, but Peter was strong and brave.

Shortly after the death of Alexis a party of his enemy burst into the Kremlin at Moscow, the palace of the Russian rulers at that time, and with shouts and cries of rage broke furnishings, cutting pictures and taking souvenirs. Natalie and Ivan hid behind the throne, where while Ill this was taking place, Ivan and his mother were terror-stricken, but Peter was not frightened.

The rioters called for Ivan, the new ruler, and thought because he was the younger that he probably had been killed or kidnapped. Finally, in order to quiet them, Peter proposed that his brother and himself sit on the head of the stairs and let the mob see them. Both Ivan and his mother were terribly alarmed at this, and Peter only after begging very hard that Peter was able to get his mother's consent and to force Ivan to go with him.

When they saw Ivan, the guards all cried, "Long Live Ivan, our new ruler!" But their good will didn't last long, and they continued their work of destruction, finally even rushing up the staircase toward the two defenceless boys, waving their weapons and shouting for Ivan to die, but Peter held him back, and met the ruffians with the remark, "There is no reason why I should not be my father's guards." This impressed the guards, and as the boys were armed with a toy sword and gun, they held his ground.

reparation, but that they could not pay the enormous sum asked of Germany now. In England there were about one and three-quarters million of men unemployed. England had about two thousand troops on the Rhine, and Ulster had a similar number, but that France had 100,000 soldiers and Belgium 30,000 The Germans sold all their products through a foreign exchange, where they could ascertain the best selling market. The Government claimed that 60 per cent. was on offsales. Germany refuses to sell exchange at the same price as England as this would leave her practically unsold and would thus cause un-employment, which would be Germany's downfall. It appears to be against such large armies of occupation, that it cost for an enormous sum of money annually to keep the soldiers with their wives and children. Germany protests against her not being allowed to trade with Russia in munitions. Germany obtained a contract from Russia to build that country's railways, but eventually her said contract was manufactured at home assent to Russia.

A vote of thanks was moved by Rev. Mr. Ramsay and seconded by Colonel Moffat which was unanimously carried.

"Sergeant-at-Arms" Mack Roberts had a serious time meting out fines from the rule breakers today. It was voted at the last luncheon that any member who sat at the side tables before the head table was filled was subject to a fine, and apparently many of these tables at the club forgot about it and sat down to the prohibited tables and were fined forthwith. The following members protested, giving various reasons for their infractions of the constitution: Harold Saunders, R. J. Graham, G. Moffatt, H. Jennings, D. Reid, Billy Doyle and Bill McCreary. After a long discussion, the chairman, Bill Hume, raised the fine to twenty-five cents for the above members, which was met with much applause.

Charlie Keeber led the singing. "Bill" Hume rendered a solo in fine voice and the quartette, headed by Jimmie Bone, delighted the Rotes with some club songs.

LUMBING ON THE FARM

(unning Water Not a Luxury, But a Necessity.

Practical Hints on Sanitary Installation—The Water Service Pipe—The Fixtures—Save a Good System of Drainage for Waste Water.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

A plumbing system consists of three main parts: Water service, fixtures, and waste pipes.

The Water Service Pipes.

The duty of these pipes is to convey the water from the supply to the fixtures. They should be galvanized iron of a suitable quality, and the size for the house is ¾-inch, except the one that connects the hot water boiler to the kitchen range or furnace, which is ¾-inch in size. Pipe is bought by the foot in small quantities, and by the 100 feet in large quantities, and the price for galvanized iron pipe at the present time is 19 cents per foot for the ¾-inch, and 12 cents for the ¾-inch. The amount required for a house is about 120 feet. This will vary with the size of the house and the layout, particularly the location of the bathroom in relation to the kitchen sink, whether soft water is on tap as well as hard water. Sometimes the pipes are joined together by threaded couplings, and one lead of pipe sufficient is used on the threaded parts to reach from the joists high enough above the treads from rusting and becoming permanently set. The diameter of these pipes is usually under 30 to 50 feet in pressure, and they should be positively water-tight, particularly so if the pipes are laid under ground.

Test the Pipes for Leaks.

The pipes are installed and before they are covered up either under floors or in partitions, before they are covered up for good, the water is turned on, under a considerable pressure and a thorough test made for leaks, not only at the joints but in the pipes themselves, as a small hole or split would cause a serious leak.

Be sure the man operating the threading machine does not cut the thread deep enough to weaken the pipe. It is very essential that the water pipe be kept away from frost, and therefore it is highly desirable that the pipes enter the house on the outside wall of the house or within, if possible.

It is particularly imperative to keep the pipes protected from frost in the morning, and serious loss of life or property would likely occur, and there is in very poor economy to install anything less than the highest quality of pipe and fittings. The standard dimension of some of these fixtures are as follows:

Kitchen sink, 20 x 30 inches. This sink should have a back upstand and drain board, at least, of wood or galvanized iron. There is a variety in the style and quality of these articles, and there is a large range in prices. You should take out a good quality of enamel coating on the fixtures, like in other articles. A Drainage System.

This part of the plumbing system consists of the soil pipe or stack which extends from the sewer up through the house and out above the roof. All the wastes drain into this pipe and by it are carried to the sewer or disposal system. Each fixture is connected to this main by means of a trap, pipe having a trap to keep bad odors from coming back from the sewer. The stack is 4-inch cast-iron pipe made in 5-foot sections, and the joints are caulked with oakum and lead. The other pipes are 2 inch and 1½ inch, and lead. In installing this part of this work, also the water service pipes, a practice known as "roughing in." Space will be left with openings for the passage of the subject.

Few gardeners realize the importance of pulverizing the soil as deeply as it is ploughed. By doing this carefully the surface is prepared, if the soil is coarse and lumpy below, the plants will not thrive. Leave the coarse in the soil are a detriment, but a large number of very small air spaces in the soil are a benefit.

GOVERNMENT MENU AT TORONTO WILL DELIGHT

O.T.A. Likely to Stand Some Amendments to Come Before House

LENGTHY SESSION

Redistribution, if Introduced, Will Block Carefully Laid Plans of Premier Drury

The usual pre-session gossip that has characterized the few weeks preceding the Drury Government sessions is once again in full sway. All of the time-honored forecasts that mark the last of the present Government, will be very short, are again going the rounds of Government circles. The Drury Government is anxious that the session should be short, little hope is held out for such an early wind up. Opposition parties both of which seem to be united in the belief that the Drury Government will not have an easy passing out. There is little doubt but that this session, unless some understanding should be arrived at, will be one of the longest on record. It may even eclipse the record established last year for long sessions.

O.T.A. to Stand.

That the Government is serious in its attempt to keep the O.T.A. intact is evident from the fact that the law clerks have prepared little Government legislation. Further indications are that there will be no change in the O.T.A. The Drury Government has no intention of changing this law and it has been decided at the last minute not to interfere with the native wine section of the Act. It is said that Mr. Raney was unsuccessful in his attempt to secure co-operation from Ottawa in this matter.

Some of the Bills.

At the present time the Government legislation, which will be introduced in the course of preparation, consists of the blue sky legislation; the antiliquor Vivisection Amendment Act; Motor Vehicles Acted the usual numerous amendments to the Municipal Act which always flood the House at the last minute. Private bills, this session, are expected to be numerous owing to the fact that this is the year several members will have to show their constituents that they have obtained something for the money they send re-election.

Redistribution.

The real bone of contention, however, is redistribution. It was learned this morning that the Government has not made any preparation for the introduction of the measure, although all the necessary machinery for the redistribution Bill is being held in readiness. Premier Drury has been considering the measure for some time, and will, no doubt reveal, what has asked all his "friends" for their advice, and has received comment on but so many angles that his mind is confused.

If redistribution is introduced in the House a deadlock may easily expect a protracted session. This is a forecast that has been made by prominent members of the Opposition, and one that seems not to be fulfilled.

BRAINY BRITAIN

Lord Riddell, speaking recently upon the achievements of England relative to inventions and modern science stated that Great Britain was not very far behind other nations. He then surprised his statement by the following observations.

Wireless—Discovered by Clerk-Maxwell, a Scotsman.

Telephone—Invented to a great extent by a Scotsman, Professor Graham Bell.

Pneumatic Tire—Invented by R. W. Thomson, of Edinburgh.

Differential Gear — Invented by Thomas Robertson, of Falkirk used in cotton-spinning.

Logarithms—Mackeson was a Scot who invented the modern read.

Traffic Regulation—London policemen still supreme.

Incandescent Light—Joint work of Kelvin, Clerk-Maxwell and Swan.

Steam Engine—Founded by a Scotsman, one Murdoch.

Dynamo—Discovered by an Englishman named Wild.

Steam—Turbine—Invented by Sir Charles Parsons, an Irishman.

Surgery—A modern surgery dates from Lord Lister.

Chemical Dyes—Pioneer discovery by Sir William Perkin.

Golf—Exported to America by Scotsmen 35 years ago.

"In the region of social improvement our country is entitled to the highest place," adds Lord Riddell. "Mr. Seebohm Rowntree, Lord Leverhulme initiated the movement for brighter and better factories and dwellings for their work-people."

Steady Improvement Noted at Royal Bank Annual Meeting

Sir Herbert S. Holt, President, in Drawing Attention to Difficult Period Through Which Banks Have Passed, Stated Vitality, Stability and Reserves of the Royal Are Unimpaired—Necessity of Strong Immigration Policy.

Edson L. Pease, Vice-President and Managing Director, Reviews Conditions in Canada and Outside Countries Served by the Bank—Retires as Managing Director After 40 Years' Service—Will Continue as Active Vice-President and Director.

C. E. Neill, General Manager, Reviews Annual Statement—Deposits Help Up Remarkably Well in Face of Trying Conditions—Strong Liquid Position Maintained.

The annual meeting of The Royal Bank of Canada brought together a very large number of shareholders and the addresses submitted by Sir Herbert S. Holt, the President, and Edson L. Pease, Vice-President and Managing Director, indicated in a general way conditions had improved to a very considerable extent, both in Canada and in the countries in which it is served by the Bank.

Sir Herbert in his address, made it quite clear that banking conditions in the past few years had been difficult and presented problems that never in the history of banks had they been subjected to a severer test than in the past two years, and especially the past year. Fortunately, the earning power of the Royal and its reserves were such that it was enabled to meet the situation with reserves unimpaired. The last twelve months had safeguarded the problems of falsified Banking in Canada, had also strengthened her position among the nations. Production had increased, our exports had never been larger, the Canadian dollar had gained in purchasing power in almost all the markets of the world.

Vigorous Immigration Policy Needed.

Regarding the future outlook, Sir Herbert Holt stated that the most desirable feature is the unsettled European situation. In Canada there was reason to believe that the country would see a great degree of confidence based upon the prospect that the present industrial activity would continue during 1923, that exports would improve, that there would be surplus of goods to shelves to create a reaction and that the banking situation is secure; in fact, his observations were that the people of Canada's greatest need to meet her increasing debt, there was urgency for a vigorous immigration policy to open up a new era of development. An influx of settlers brought prosperity to the United and assisted that country to pay its great Civil War indebtedness. By inviting to our shores men and women of sound thrifty habits, building up what we may achieve a like result. We must bring in new people to share with us the great role of producers, buyers and taxpayers.

Revision of Bank Act.

Dealing with the periodical revision of the Bank Act, which calls for action at the forthcoming session of Parliament, Sir Herbert said:

"I feel confident that, as in the past, the subject will be considered solely in the interest of the general financial welfare of the Dominion, and that few changes will be found necessary or desirable. The Banking system has survived can prevent some hardship in times of depression, but we can claim that the system of the Bank Act may be trusted to us have been absolutely secure during the trying days of deflation, while in the prosperous days of activity of the world there have been some depositors who have lost their savings."

In concluding his address, Sir Herbert announced that Mr. Edson L. Pease, Vice-President, relinquish the office of Managing Director and Chief Executive Officer, as he desired to lighten his responsibilities after 40 years of service in the Bank. He was pleased to say, however, that Mr. Pease will continue as Vice-President and Director. The office of Managing Director will be discontinued and the General Manager will become the Chief Executive Officer.

Managing Director's Address.

Edson L. Pease, Vice-President and Managing Director in his address, said, in part:

"The President, having in his address fully covered the general situation in Canada, and the General Manager the bank's internal position. I shall deal briefly with the balance of the bank in foreign fields.

"Each year sees the bank more solidly established in the foreign fields we have selected, and better equipped in every way to deal in that foreign commerce which forms a quarter of the trade of the Dominion. The advantages of direct connection are thus brought home to us daily. The intimate knowledge that our officers acquire in the territory where they are stationed enables them to give an efficient credit service and to offer opportunities for reciprocal trade.

"I visited last winter our branches in Brazil, Argentina and Uruguay. These countries have suffered acutely from the universal trade depression, aggravated by decline in the value of their paper currencies, which greatly reduced their foreign purchasing power. The attention of many weak business houses, which in normal times, we suspend, has made for greater stability.

"In the British West Indies, where we have numerous branches, and in Central America, normal conditions are gradually being restored. Fair prices prevailed for their staple products, sugar, coffee and cocoa. Very few failures were recorded due to the accumulation of large profits during the period of the war. The prospects of a bumper crop and a premium on sugar, and increased prices for sugar, has created a general feeling of optimism.

"The efforts of the Canadian Government to extend the sale of Canadian goods abroad by means of reciprocal trade agreements, must meet with general approval. Treaties with Canada and Italy have already been concluded and pacts of a similar nature with Belgium and Australia are now being discussed. The commercial rise of Japan and the industrial awakening of China are reflected in their trade with the United States, which for the year 1922, amounted to over half a billion of dollars. Our neighbors to the south command in Asia, who act as trade commissioners. Similar enterprise should be shown by Canada, to foster trade in this wide market, and the excellent work already done by our trade commissioners should encourage the Government to extend the extension of the service."

"The passing in England of the bill to remove the embargo on Canadian cattle shipped to England will prove a great benefit to the Dominion. Farmers may now send stock to be fattened in England, where a difference of eight shillings per hundred exists between the retail prices of shilled and of home-killed beef. At one time Canada shipped 400,000 head of cattle in one year, to the English market, but the number has fallen to 21,500 during the season of 1922. No doubt our dealers and shippers will take full advantage of the enlarged market.

"The Imperial Economic Conference of which invitations have been issued by the British Premier, promises to be one of the important events of the year. It will bring together representatives of countries which have a combined population of one-fifth of the total population of Europe, and a land area three times as great. Within the limits of this vast territory, bound by friendly and beneficial tariffs, there is ample room for all the products of a great Colonial Empire. The success of the Bank's policy of developing the Empire and stimulating trade between its members will be closely followed."

General Manager's Review.

In the absence, through illness, of C. E. Neill, the General Manager, M. W. Wilson, the Assistant General Manager, submitted that we present to you such a satisfactory balance sheet. Total assets show a decrease of only 4.25 per cent., which can be accounted for by reductions in circulation the amount due the Dominion Government and Letters of Credit and Bills Payable outstanding—reductions directly due to depression.

"Our deposits have held up remarkably well in the face of trying conditions, and we present you with deposits slightly under 1 per cent., whereas the average decrease of all Canadian banks was about 4 per cent. We consider we have well our position has been maintained. There has been a substantial increase in our liquid assets, which represents healthy liquidation. Advantage has been taken of satisfaction bond prices during the year to make sale of certain investments has resulted in a net reduction of $4,827,305.73 in securities held. A strong liquid position has been maintained. Liquid assets are 40.27 per cent. of liabilities to the public, as compared with 41.81 per cent. last year."

"Our organization has been strengthened by the appointment in November last of four Assistant General Managers, Messrs. Wilson, Noble, Dobson and MacKinnon have grown up in our service. They are thoroughly tried, experienced men of undoubted capacity, and I can assure you that your interests will be well served by them.

"The Directors have to thank the absent possible terms the loyal and efficient service rendered by all members of our staff at home and abroad, and highly value their devotion to the bank."

DOME'S 1922 PRODUCTION

The output of gold at the Dome Mines during 1922 amounted to 94,-104 oz., compared with 83,380,040 in 1921. The total tonnage treated was 388,450, showing an average recovery of 11.26 per ton. This plant is naturally the second largest producer in Ontario, and by far the most profitable operation of the gold mines of small capitalization. From a low grade nine two years ago, Dome has since developed into the highest grade gold property in the Porcupine Camp.

SOME FIGURES ABOUT CANADA'S WAR COST

Chiefly Responsible for the Tremendous National Debt—Actual Money Payments by Govt. Total Over Two Billions Already

The decrease of Canada's national debt is closely linked with an understanding of the cost of the war. Of the present debt, $2,400,000,000, close to three-fourths, $1,800,000,000 was incurred as a result of the war and unfortunately the war left no assets to be set off against this debt.

The last war was beyond all doubt the costliest, well measured in dollars and cents, in all history. In actual money the war cost about $225,000,000,000, a sum that defies conception. Counting the figure with the same value previous wars and the latter and later part beyond imagination. The wars between England and France from 1793 to 1815 cost those two nations $6,250,000,000. The American Civil War from 1861-1865 cost a total of $5,000,000,000. The Franco-Prussian war cost $2,534,000,000. In fact, all the wars of the world from 1793 to 1813 cost but twenty-five billions.

It was as expensive war in many ways. In human life its cost was remarkable.

The known dead numbered 9,506,771; probably the actual figure should be higher. All the wars from 1793 to 1913 took but five million lives.

CANA'S SHARE OF COST.

Canada' share of the expenses of the war has already reached a tremendous figure and is daily growing as we pay out interest on war loans. To March 31, 1923, R. H. Coats, Dominion statistician, figures the cost at $5,200,000,000. This is on the following basis:

War and demobilization expenditure $1,898,964,053
Interest to date on war 695,342,282
Pensions to date 120,860,811
Soldiers Civil re-establishment to date 98,234,844
Land settlement 15,000,000
Direct monetary costs.... 2,829,397,550
Add to this:
Loss of life 300,000,000
Impairment of earning power of wounded 320,000,000
Increased death rate among civilians 200,000,000
Shortage of immigration.. 2,200,000,000

Even deducting the indirect loss cost to Canada of the war was greater mentioned above, the direct monetary than the total cost of any war in history with but three or four exceptions.

Not all of the cost of the war though was paid from revenues derived through the creation of debt. Canada bore heavy taxes during the war. War taxes to the end of 1920 had produced $153,-698,287. In 1921 and 1922 the various taxes created during the war and after brought in almost as much again in that year.

For its war debt Canada makes no excuses. Concerning that portion of its debt that was incurred in Canada it feels the country feels a bit worried.

WHAT WAR COST CANADA

Actual monetary outlay by Dominion Government to March 31 last ..$2,389,397,550
Other losses to the nation not, represented by actual cash payments 2,900,000,000

Total to March 31, 1922...$5,289,397,550

FRENCH BIRTH RATE SHOWS A DECREASE

Population About the Same as Twenty Years Ago—Must Reduce Taxes and Give Bonuses to Remedy Matters

(By Canadian Press)

Paris, Jan. 10.—The high cost of living, lack of apartments and homes for newly married couples, selfishness too many women employed in industry, and too much pleasure, are the general causes assigned for the alarming decrease of the birth rate in France, now less than in 1801.

This is a condition that has been accelerated by the war, which took many men to the front, whence many never returned. The war also creates other conditions of living for women gave them work, made them independent, and, distinctive to marry readily. and less inclined to have children.

The situation is set forth at length by the National Alliance for Increase the French population.

In comparison with a hundred years ago, each French marriage brings less than two children, instead of four children, whereas England's marriages bring nearly three children instead of nearly five a hundred years ago. In Germany in 1841, the average marriage brought 4.44 children as compared with 2.3 in 1921.

The birth decrease does not result from high mortality, br relatively few are barriages. France's population a 39,000,000 in 1922 is practically that of 1900. The number of marriages for that year was 299,000, or about the average since then, with the years following the war showing a large number, which is now nearing the average. For 1921 the number of marriages was 456,000, and for 1922 it was a little higher.

Until 1914, the number of births averaged 800,000 yearly. During seven of the war years the number drop ped to fewer than 400,000. The first six months of this year showed 308,-736, as compared to 412,500 for the first six months of 1921.

It is argued that if France is to hold her place in the world and send emigrants to her colonies, she must pass laws, as already proposed in Parliament, to check the evils arising by married men, reduce family taxes and premiums for each child born. Already, families enjoy lower railway fares.

CO-OPERATIVE MARKETING HAS ITS DISADVANTAGES

Has Not Flourished as Anticipated—Shake up in Niagara Growers This Year — Conference at Guelph This Week

Guelph, Jan. 13.—The importance of contracts in co-operative selling was emphasized by all speakers at the sessions of the Marketing Conference held at the Ontario Agricultural College here. Contracts, it might be explained, are signed by growers supplying co-operative companies, which guarantee delivery of all goods or a portion to the company for a period of years. According to Prof. Leidy, they act as a means of self-protection for the organizations, preventing ruinous competition, and giving the company control of the goods handled and collateral on which to borrow working capital.

Prof. C. R. Fay of the University of Toronto explained that contracts had long been used by European countries where co-operation flourished, and while not preventing losses in the past year or two, had prevented greater disaster.

Co-operation and Socialism.

Dr. T. Macklin of Wisconsin defended the contracts, and stated that they did not mean trusts, or that co-operation was a form of Socialism. Organization recognizes a premium on quality goods and extra work," he stated.

In speaking of advertising, this authority doubted the wisdom of adopting educational campaigns, declaring that these did not bring quick results, but he was strongly behind commercial advertising where quality goods were produced in abundance, and special brands were featured.

Position of Niagara Growers.

In the absence of C. W. Baxter, head of the Niagara Peninsula Growers, J. B. Fairbairn explained the position of this well known co-operative company. At present, he stated, the company was marking time. All the employees had resigned, and reorganization was in progress. There had been some trouble in handling the large crop of 1921, which trouble had been aggravated by disloyal and dishonest members. The company had got its standard had been shipped out, and a quality of this crop produced by members had been turned over to local companies. Mr. Fairbairn was confident regarding the future. In his opinion Mr. Baxter's services would be retained, and the affair would flourish. Contracts would be made more strict. The future for the N.P.G. was brighter today than it had been for some time, he assured the delegates at the conference.

ENGINEER MAKES 17 POUNDS GAIN

Old Time R. R. Man Says Tanlac Put Him Back on Job Feeling Fine

Orange Deane, a veteran railroad man, living at 53 Forest Ave., St. Thomas, Ont., has obtained remarkable results from the use of Tanlac. Mr. Deane wears a gold button given him by the Michigan Central, in recognition of his forty years continuous service in that road.

"A year ago," said Mr. Deane, "I was all down and out. I had indigestion so bad I couldn't eat and was too nervous and miserable to sleep. I was almost wild with headaches and dizziness, hog weight fragility, and thought I was about done for. After getting so weak I couldn't work I took a trip out West, thinking the change might help me.

"But I kept getting worse until my sister, whom I visited in Caldwell Manitoba, got me to try a bottle of Tanlac. In a week's time I was a different man, as I got more Tanlac and kept on improving. In three weeks I had gained seventeen pounds and returned to my work in as good health as any man in the C. P. R. shops. I never have any of my old troubles now. That's just how good a job Tanlac has done for me."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Over 35 million bottles sold.

Mrs. Camille Lemay has been confined to her home for about two weeks through illness. Reg aunt, Mrs. Lapp of Brighton has been attending her.

Rev. W. G. Clarke, B. A., pastor of King St. Methodist Church, Trenton, conducted union service at Carrying Place on Sunday afternoon.

On Saturday afternoon the Misses Bernice and Evelyn Powers were hostesses, when a number of their friends were entertained at bridge at their home on Marmora Street.

About eighty hockey fans from Trenton saw our intermediates settlette humble the Picton aggregation right in their backyard on Friday night by the fast score of ten more optimistic ones, believe they could have mastered the most modest scratch from Belleville on that particularly occasion. Who knows? They may yet be given that opportunity before the curtain goes down for the winter season.

Mrs. Jack Kenney is visiting her aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. M. B. Morrison on Friday night last.

Mr. W. H. Ireland, Mrs. Ireland and Mrs. Ireland entertained a number of their friends at dinner.

Mrs. Thomson, Quinte Street was able to return to her home today after her recent illness, which removed her to the General Hospital, Toronto. It will be necessary for her to continue the treatment for some time.

Her many friends wish her success for her steady improvement. Her son Henry is in the convalescing stage.

Owing to the turning off of coal in the furnaces of the local post office which caused the overheating in the boilers, a disastrous fire was averted on Saturday morning, only by the prompt action of caretaker Newton and assistant Postmaster Jack Christie. On account of the high winds which were blowing at the early hour every effort was taken. While Mr. Christie, assisted by mail clerk Thomson made use of the fire hose in the basement, Caretaker Newton considered it wise to notify the local fire brigade, who responded promptly. No person is responsible, but simply the fault of coal which causes a blockage in the fire which by the way had been thoroughly cleaned only five days ago.

"Buck" Shoniker, a member of this season's intermediate squad, who performed so well in the opening games of the season, has decided to break camp and join the Toronto puck chasers and is having it once for Guelph, where it is thought he will form new associates.

"Peck" could play the game if he wanted to, but like so many prospective players very often he didn't want to. We certainly hope the change will be the right kind of an education for him. He looked pretty good among the Quinte puck chasers and is having it once for Guelph, where it is thought he will form new associates.

"THE STOOPS TO CONQUER."

Worthy of commendation and support of all citizens are the efforts now being put forth by the pupils of the Belleville High School, in preparing for public presentation Oliver Goldsmith's "The Stoops to Conquer." Some particulars relative to the preparations and to the play to be produced is supplied by the school secretary as:

"This is our first venture at producing a play in the Opera House. Our smaller towns have packed houses for their annual school play, and we hope Belleville will support us in spite of the fact that we are sandwiched in between "The Dover Road," and "The Girl in the Limousine."

Our play is a quite worth while one—Oliver Goldsmith's "She Stoops to Conquer." Nearly every comedian of any note in America has essayed some one of the leading roles of this play, which is acknowledged to be one of the finest comedies in the language.

The humour of the play does not rest alone on the amusing situations which are many, but the dialogue abounds in real wit.

The plot of the story hinges on Young Marlowe's mistaking the home of his father's old friend, Mr. Hardcastle, for an inn. Tony Lumpkin, Mr. Hardcastle's step-son, has directed Marlow wrongly. In revenge for his step-father's having forbidden the home of Mr. Hardcastle, Marlow commits a series of blunders, even mistaking Miss Hardcastle, whom he has come down at his father's request to see with matrimonial intent, for a barmaid.

Tony Lumpkin has been called the author Caliban and is credited will producing both some of the most exquisite feeling and even upon the stage."

CHINESE MONARCHS ADOPT ENGLISH NAMES

Peking, Jan. 16.—The "boy emperor" of China, whose marriage to Princess Kuo Chia Si recently was the occasion for a series of elaborate ceremonies, has issued an edict abolishing the names of "Henry" for himself and "Elizabeth" for the new empress. The emperor's admiration for the much-married Henry VIII of England and Queen Elizabeth caused him to adopt the new names.

Owing to the economic poverty of the Chinese Royal family as a result of the inability of the republican government to remit the five million dollars (dollar) due every year, the cost of the wedding was held down to $300,000 instead of the $5,000,000 demanded by custom.

JAPANESE DELGATES ARRIVE AT VANCOUVER

En Route to Silk Show in New York—Jap Girls Coming Over to Demonstrate

CANADA'S CHANCE

Japan Has Waiting Market for Our Lumber and Grain—All Wheat Grown There Used for Noodles for Soup

Vancouver, B.C., Jan. 11.—Enroute to an international silk show to be held in New York from the 30th February 5th to 11th, five Members of a Japanese "silk" mission to America reached Vancouver this afternoon on board the Empress of Australia. They include Mr. Yosuo Sachida, Chief of the Mission; A member of the Japanese House of Commons; a Professor of the Tokio prefitex exchange and Mr. Kisso Okahibasi, president of two large silk firms in Japan, our acting as vice-chief of the Japanese delegation to New York Show. With them Mr. Sachida is also acknowledged to be the leading spirit of the artificial silk industry at the present time. In the service of the department of agriculture and commerce in the Japanese government Mr. Sachida is making a survey of trade relations between Japan and Canada. In his own country Mr. Sachida sees a market for Canadian grain, lumber and paper pulp. At present the Japanese farmer is adverse to raising grain, owing to the prevailing high prices in rice with the result that Japan is to the United States and Canada for many times as much grain as she raises. The annual wheat production of Japan is only about 20,000 pounds, practically all of which is manufactured into noodles. The present grain situation is largely promoted by him self and other prominent financial leaders to encourage the consumption of wheat products should rice to Canada's advantage as a great producing country, Mr Sachida said Japanese lumbermen are ready to talk business with regard to the importation of Canadian lumber according to Mr. Sachida. At present the chief export from Japan is coal and coal at one quarter the cost of Japanese lumber and the popularity of fir lumber is enormous in the Orient owing to the fact that it is left unpainted in interior woodwork.

Paper mills in Japan are at present trying to obtain material from Siberia whereas if Canada could sell paper pulp at reasonable prices a market could be developed.

Italy, Japan, and France will send delegates to the New York show, which is being arranged by the silk associations of America, which will be an exhibition of silk and silk manufacturers in every stage of manufacture from "cocoon" to "selling" girls will be sent over from Japan to demonstrate the process of spinning the raw product from the cocoon. The silk trade between America and Japan should considerably increase in 1922 over the previous year, the United States importing 60 per cent. of Japan's total raw silk production. "Owing to its speedy transpacific service, the Canadian Pacific Steamships carry the largest silk cargoes of any liners from the Orient to America" Mr. Sacsida stated.

WATER LEVELS ON THE TRENT CANAL SYSTEM

Electrically Operated to Maintain the Water Supply for Power Purposes—Belleville Power Generated on This River

The Trent River is a valuable asset to Central Ontario, serving for both a power supply and navigation. Its use for these separate purposes has, however, given rise to several peculiar problems. Shipping has been facilitated by the construction of the Trent Canal, but the large use of water for power purposes by the Central Ontario System of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission has made it necessary to devise means of keeping a regulated flow.

This regulated level is necessary at the canal follows the river bed in most places, and this is the case wher the Trent Canal passes through the town of Campbellford, the town being built upon both banks of the river. It is not feasible to widen the canal in passing through the town but accomodation for the canal was built with retaining walls; hence the water in the canal is much higher than the surrounding cement fabrics. When the water is at normal level it is about three feet from the top of the wall.

At the southern end of the town is located Dam No. 10, which raises the water high enough to give a sufficient little that the power house should close down the chances are that the water would flow over the retaining walls before the stoplogs could be removed, doing great damage to private property. To obviate this possibility, the Department of Railways and Canals has installed large automatic valves.

These valves, three in number, are located about the middle of the dam and are made to discharge into concrete basins with outlets that point upward; hence the water issues like fountains and does not shoot across the bed of the river, which it would under such a head. Some of the design details are:

1. Valves are made so that when raised about an inch the valve raises off its seat upon rails and from there is a rolling friction instead of a sliding action.

2. Lifting nuts are mounted on rollers, so that the friction is reduced to a minimum.

3. Connecting rods from lifting screws are attached so that the rod has a travel of about 1½ inches before working the valve. This gives the motors a chance to be under speed before the strain comes on.

Each valve weighs about nine tons and is raised and lowered by means of two screws. The screws do not revolve, but the bronze nuts do, and in this way the coupling rods pass through chambers filled with vaseline, which prevents water from sticking. The motors will be connected to these revolving nuts by means of spur and bevel gear.

The motors are not yet in place but the valves are easily operated by hand although the motors to be used will be fifteen horsepower. These motors will be operated by a float which rests on the oil level level regulated according to the water level in the canal.

Ellis says that he is now once more at the call of Sheriffs throughout the province to carry out what he calls "the law's last resource."

It began to look for a time as though capital punishment would be conducted with fear and trembling by the authorities, accompanied by members of the clergy. Others by the learned. Humanitarians will be glad to learn that this situation at least has been changed.

The difficulties have now been patched up, would-be executioners entertained and an arrangement made whereby the hangman receives a certain fee in respect of each death sentence, when the date of execution accompanies the verdict. He is paid whether the sentence is actually carried out or not. On that day Ellis is ready to report and carry out his contract, even though the condemned man is reprieved, and the sheriff accordingly has to pay him his fee.

Ellis has never succeeded, despite repeated attempts, in getting his name on the payroll of the Dominion Government as an employe. He says testified on the matter in the House and to sanction a bill providing for the payment of a salary of $800 a year to an official hangman. He claims there has never been such an official holdey since Confederation.

Ellis, according to Montreal police authorities, is considered a very valuable man in his chosen field of endeavor, which accounts for the desire throughout the Dominion to retain him whenever capital punishment is demanded by law. The authorities cannot lay their hands on a hangman every day, and magistrates do not like to them that an executioner must know his business.

DIRECTORS FIGUREHEADS ON NATIONAL RAILWAYS

James Stewart, Western Representative on the Board, had Never Been Consulted by Thornton.

Winnipeg, Jan. 16.—Since James Stewart, president of the Maple Leaf Milling Company, head of the largest grain export company on the continent and ex-chairman of the Wheat Board, was appointed director of the National Railways he has not been consulted about anything relating to the system. The fact was revealed at the dinner given Sir Henry Thornton in Winnipeg, and his proposals while under discussion, at the west.

The circumstances of the disclosure were amusing. Stewart is a hard-headed Scotchman with all the modesty of his race. Sir Henry, in speaking, had taken occasion to compliment the management on the appointment of such a fine type of progressive business man to the directorate. Of course Stewart blushed, then, rising to reply, he remarked that it had been suggested to him that he take the occasion to give an account of his stewardship as a director of the National Railways.

"However," he added, "I can only say on that subject that up to the present I have not been consulted in any capacity of director in any way concerning the National Railway System."

The remark provoked a gasp of astonishment, then laughter, but Stewart did not laugh. With the president of the Maple Leaf Milling Company evidently it was a pretty serious matter and he evidently thought he had appointed a director to help direct.

LIVES LOST WHEN SEAPLANE FELL INTO WATER

Luxurious Passenger Ship Crippled in Mid-Air

Millionaire is Drowned

His Two Children and Governess Dead—Wife Survives—Daring Rescue of Survivors'

Key West, Fla., Jan. 15.—Crippled in landing and tattered by heavy seas as he made a forced landing, the passenger seaplane Columbus, while flying between this city and Havana yesterday afternoon, turned turtle and sank, carrying down to death two little children, whose father, E. F. Atkins, a millionaire sugar planter of Boston, had already been swept into the sea and drowned. Miss Ethel Lee, children's governess, her slender grasp on the outrigging of the helpless craft wrenched away by the first blast before help came, also was drowned.

Mrs. Atkins, mother of the two little children, who floated west of the crumbled cabin of the luxurious airliner, was saved. She lived through forty minutes of the greatest battle, lived to see first her husband and then her children go down to death. Tonight she is under the care of a doctor, she is a hospital here.

Rescuers here, including Otto Abraham, a New York banker and broker; Miss Haverty, the Atkins' family nurse, and the crew of the ship.

Failure marked the search today by large fleet of boats for the bodies of the victims. While hope has not been entirely abandoned, it is regarded as virtually certain that they will not be recovered.

Mrs. Atkins, who in less than three minutes was robbed of her husband, and her two little children, is recovering somewhat from the shock, but is still in serious condition. Relatives are rushing here from Cuba and Boston where the father of her husband lived.

THREE FELL DEAD SUCCESSIVELY OF BAD LIQUOR

New York, January 15.—Bad liquor is believed to have killed three men who dropped dead one after the other, within a few minutes in a saloon in Jersey City this afternoon. They were seen by a man who had entered the place just before they had been drinking to double up and slide to the floor without a word.

TRAINS HAD HARD TIME WITH SNOW IN EASTERN PROVINCES

Eight Were Completely Blocked in Nova Scotia Near Truro

DRIFTS 20 FEET HIGH

Lines of C.N.R. Have Been Tied up Since Friday—Ocean Limited Caught in Snow—Ploughs Stuck

Moncton, Jan. 14.—At 9.30 this afternoon Canadian National Railway authorities said that a hole had been punched through the snow blockade which existed between Sackville and Truro since early Saturday morning. No. 9 night express, which left Halifax Friday night, reached Moncton at twelve o'clock tonight. She had been snowbound at Amherst since Saturday morning. She was sent forward from Amherst this afternoon, and about 9 o'clock had reached Palmer Junction, where she was snowed up while waiting in the siding for the delayed eastbound Ocean Limited. A snow plough had cleared from Moncton to the No. 9 out, was off the track at Hunt-ington and this ended a long blockade. No. 9 is the first express train through from Halifax since Friday night's blizzard began.

The storm was most severely felt between Sackville and Truro and prior to the raising of the blockade some eight trains were tied up. Friday ocean Limited eastbound was stuck at Fort Lawrence and before she was released some of the cars were completely covered over and drifts fifteen and twenty feet high are reported at different points between here and Truro.

Plough Specials Stuck.

Last night near Londonderry, two plough specials sent to break the blockade were stuck in the drifts and had to be shovelled out.

While the through line is clear to-night, it will be days before normal traffic conditions can be restored, even if there should be favorable weather and no more storms.

While trains from the north and between Moncton and St. John have been somewhat delayed by the storm and cold, there has been no interruption of traffic. The storm was not severe felt north of Moncton. To-days' Ocean Limited from Montreal arrived here this evening two hours late.

Not a wheel turned on the branch lines, including the Moncton and Buctouche, Salisbury and Harvey, Salisbury and Albert, Elgin, Petitcodiac and Havelock, since Friday, but it is expected to get the branches open by morrow.

Not for some years have snow conditions along the C.N.R. west of Moncton as far as Truro been as bad as at the present time.

Reports from Prince Edward Island are to the effect that there is a complete tie-up of the railways there.

Ocean Limited's Adventure.

The Ocean Limited, which left Montreal Thursday night, arrived at Halifax tonight. The train was caught soon after leaving Moncton Friday evening. The engineer saw the snow ahead, but thought he could push through. The train with fourteen cars stopped so suddenly that the passengers were almost thrown from their seats. With the stopping of the engine and the necessity of conserving coal there was little steam heat from Friday night on, and on Saturday night there was no light beyond that from the train lamps. Food in the dinner also was very low, but some provisions were brought to the train over the snow by snowshoe parties.

A BRIDE OF BRITISH BLOOD

King's Second Son to Wed Daughter of English Peer—A Love Match

BRITAIN GRATIFIED

Engagement of Prince Albert Announced in Court Circular From Sandringham

London, Jan. 15.—The engagement of Prince Albert, the Duke of York, second son of King George and Queen Mary, to Lady Elizabeth Bowes-Lyon is announced in a Court circular issued to-day.

The official announcement of the betrothal, which King George sanctioned "with the greatest of pleasure," has particular interest as finally disposing of the recent rumor of the engagement of the Prince of Wales to Lady Elizabeth. It leaves the gossip still speculating regarding who is to be the bride of the heir to the throne.

The romance between the Duke of York and Lady Elizabeth began in the wedding of Princess Mary to Viscount Lascelles, and is said to be a real love match.

Lady Elizabeth Angela Marguarite Bowes-Lyon is 23 years old, and the daughter of the Earl of Strathmore and Kinghorne, and early in the following year, but were then denied. Early in this month Lascelles' engagement referred to her as the future wife of the Prince of Wales, but this was followed by a public disclaimer from the Prince's secretary.

Lady Elizabeth was a bridesmaid at the wedding of Princess Mary to Viscount Lascelles. She is tall, dark-haired and athletic and extremely popular in British society.

The Duke of York observed his 27th birthday on December 14 last. Tonight's Court circular contains the following announcement issued from York Cottage, Sandringham:

"It is with the greatest of pleasure that the King and Queen announce the betrothal of their second son, the Duke of York, to Lady Elizabeth Bowes-Lyon, daughter of the Earl and Countess of Strathmore and Kinghorne, to which union the King has gladly given his consent."

After they had made their escape from the burning house. His act followed a quarrel with his wife, it is said. He is in the hospital with his life hanging by a thread.

FRANCE MAKES FURTHER ADVANCE UPON ENEMIES

Dortmund, Jan. 16.—The French headquarters has information that twenty-five thousand men of the German Reichswehr are concentrated south of Muenster, less than twenty-five miles north of Luenen to the North of Dortmund. The French have advanced to Dortmund and Luenen and outposts of the French and Germans are about eight miles apart at some points. The French, by advancing to Dortmund and Luenen, passed out of the neutral zone fixed by the Versailles treaty on the right bank of the Rhine, into which Germany is forbidden to send troops. The French are taking up positions behind River Lippe.

France, Belgium and Italy to meet at Marshall Cook's apartment this afternoon to discuss with Great Britain in place of Sir John Bradbury, who was reported as being indisposed, abstained from voting. Default it was explained by Louis Barthou, President of the Commission, resulted from the refusal of the German Government to make deliveries in kind while the French were in the Ruhr.

London, Jan. 16.—The threat to arrest the German coal directors in the Ruhr Valley has caused a panic in Berlin says a Central News despatch from the German Capital, this afternoon. On the Berlin Exchange the dollar rate was around eighteen thousand marks.

TORONTO MURDER TRIAL IS ADJOURNED

Mrs. Hucalack Arraigned—Grand Jury Found True Bill For Alleged Murder of Woman's Husband on January 3rd

Following the returning of a true bill by the Grand Jury, Pearl Hucalack was arraigned before Mr. Justice Lennox in the Criminal Assize Court at Toronto, yesterday afternoon on the charge of having murdered her husband, Peter Hucalack, on Jan. 3rd. Escorted by a policewoman, she accused, when the Crown will seek to prove, fired two shots at her husband as he lay in bed in their apartment on Portland Avenue, entered the court shortly after two o'clock.

Nervous almost to the point of collapse Mrs. Hucalack presented a forlorn figure as she stood in the dock while the Clerk of the court read the indictment. She was dressed in a greyish-green coat and plaid skirt. In her right hand she held a grey comforter, with which she played nervously during her brief sojourn in the dock. Following the usual questions of not guilty and her request for an adjournment, the judge postponed further proceedings until Thursday next.

NEWSPAPER REPORTS.

H. M. Lehrer, who is defending the accused, in asking for an adjournment, declared that this was necessary because, in his opinion, the newspaper reports of the arrest of the accused might prejudice the minds of the jury. Counsel also declared that he had been unable to consult with his client's arraignment, and was not prepared to go on with the case at such a short notice.

"Eternal vigilance is the troop on which prisoners are defended," observed the Judge in the interval, acquiesced in a postponement until the above date.

It may be that when the case again comes up, Mr. Lehrer will make another motion to have it traversed to the Spring Assizes.

DISTRICT DEPUTY IN CITY

The annual installation ceremonies of the Quinte Rebekah Lodge No. 32 will take place to-night. D. D. Pringle, District Deputy Commander is scheduled to preside. An interesting evening is anticipated.

Forty Speakers Harangue.

The ten weeks campaign of passive-ly protest against the French occupation of the Ruhr, maintaining that the Ruhr and the Rhineland were German and must remain so. Three military bands provided music. There were salvos of "Hochs" for the German Ruhr, the German Rhine and the Fatherland, with thousand outbursts of "Down, down, down," for France.

A give club of reactionary Berlin students intoned the hymn the "Reichsiandlied to Deutschland," a wartime favorite, of the Kaiser, as the disciplined, orderly crowd stood with bared heads. The crowd also repeatedly sang "Deutschland uber Alles," which, thanks to President Ebert's intervention, is the status of the German national anthem, also the "Wacht am Rhein."

There was a more significant and intense enthusiasm when the bands played the old time military tunes, "Ich hatt einen Kameraden," which, indicating that a spark of fighting spirit still persisted. The Deutsches Banner, recently regaling a back leader to fan it into flame. Strong men betrayed symptoms of impotent rage and older men and women were moved to tears.

It was almost a flagless demonstration, only one flag being waved above the 30,000. This was the old imperial black, white and red, with an antisemetic swastika across the field.

70,000 French Troops.

The troops which have been pouring into the Ruhr are estimated to be now close to 70,000. They have entered the basin, and every bridge is guarded with machine guns, sentries are at all cross-roads, and the strategic points are firmly held.

The highways are choked with armored motor cars, machine gun companies and batteries of 75's are moving up to the limits of the newly occupied areas.

The workers, however, excepting for a half-hour's strike, ordered from Berlin, which was ordered throughout the Ruhr, show no disposition to quit work, and all the furnaces and steel plants which line the roads are in full blast.

LIQUOR RUNNERS OFF N. J. COAST FORCED TO TAKE A HOLIDAY

Rum-Fleet of Ships Lying in Drifting Ready to Resume

Power Boat Captured

Efforts of Dry Navy Result in Bag of Six Vessels—Shore Boats Lie Low Because of Risk—Hooch Cargoes Seized

Highlands, N.J., January 15.—Government craft very reported tonight seemed content to be content a sharp watch on centers off the Highlands, and rumors who had expected a resumption liquor smuggling from a fleet massed off Ambrose channel lightship declared a holiday.

Two Highland runners ventured out this afternoon's end, although they returned tonight with small cargoes, they reported that the risk was too great, as the Highlands were under close guard. They added, however, that two runners from Long Island points had visited the liquor fleet today and had to trouble running their cargoes through the bar which hung over the sea.

Some of the rum fleet, they declared, had disposed of their stuff and departed.

Receiving this report, the local bootleggers went under cover for business and voted to "lie low until the squall is over." The bootleggers met whether alone and rested their backs against stacks of them.

The great "rum fleet" of 22 vessels, which looked up yesterday off Sandy Hook, while the New York dry naval squadron was being reorganized, is ready for business at sunset.

VAST STOCK REMAINS.

Although observers ashore estimated that thousands of cases had been landed last night, the rum fleet, presumably lurking from the Bahamas, still had a vast stock to dispose of to bidders coming out from the coast and other places along the coast. Whiskey, gin, champagne and wine, all were offered for sale and keen competition has developed, among the skippers of the rum ships.

As the bootleggers' runs alongside in his power boat he sees signs hung over the side of the mother ship and decides from which he will purchase. The sea began to take on the appearance of a bargain counter.

The visiting flotilla flies the flags of many nations and the crews are of all races. The vessels are of all races. The vessels are loaded to the gunwales with liquor.

BOOTLEGGERS BOAST.

The capture, last night of four boats belonging to the bootlegging ring was attributed to the failure of one man to carry out agreement to run any enforcement craft that tried to halt a heading boat. It was admitted, however, that the man on the bootlegged boat thought the coast guard boat friendly and drew alongside her to borrow a gasoline funnel.

It was related at the bootleggers' meeting that one boat captured last night escaped from the capture in the darkness drifting at approach. This boat today was repainted and her engine changed.

None of the rum-runners booked in public places with obvious pride in their achievement, of the cargoes they had landed last night. Those in the boats that had succeeded in bringing liquor into Highlands' cargoes were blocked at Atlantic Highlands and other points down as far as Point Pleasant. This fact was openly proclaimed by bootleggers in behalf of the various rums—bootleggers who backed up their boasts with displays of $1,000 bills that were said to be profits. Reports of last night's activities aroused a furore in Highlands today. Mayor Kelleher issued a long statement to the effect that reports that 35,000 cases or any such amount had been landed were a myth.

Citizens were found, however, who reached Highlands late yesterday afternoon, who declared the bootleggers had things pretty much their own way in this town.

Several weeks ago, it was said, a bootlegger, not a member of the ring, started to his home garage with a truck load. A party of men appeared, shot out the street lights and took the truck. The original owner located it empty next day and took it back.

Law abiding citizens report that several times, when they were driving home late at night, they had been halted by bootlegger guards and forced to take for other streets.

PRISCILLA DEAN IN "UNDER TWO FLAGS" HERE THURSDAY

"Under Two Flags" is one of the few really great stories.

A love story immortal, a tragedy sublime, "Under Two Flags" captured the heart of the world when it came to us months ago, the late Ouida (Louise de la Ramee) and its growth in popularity was heightened by its presentation on the stage by many eminent artists, including Blanche Bates. Now it has been made into a picture by the Universal Film Co., and will be seen at Griffin's Thursday to Saturday, with a climax Friday and Saturday. Priscilla Dean, than whom there is no more magnetic figure on the screen, breathes the fire of her dynamic personality into the role of the Cigarette, idol of a French regiment at Algiers.

There are direct scenes in "Under Two Flags" that give a true insight of the life of the masses in the French province of northern Africa. The military pomp of an army post is accurately presented. And the oppressive luxury pervading the gambling roosevard

JUNIOR O.H.A. TEAM GOES TO CAMPBELLFORD

The Belleville Juniors tackle the Campbellford youngsters in the Trent Valley town to-night. The locals need the game badly to stay in running and the Northerners will get up a merry battle. The Campbellford team known as the "Bear Cats" threw a scare into the Picton lads on Tuesday when they were leading 6-1 at the end of the second period, but lady luck shone on the Pictonians and the visitors were sent home defeated. The Campbellford team are newcomers to the O. H. A. and will give a better account of themselves next year. They are composed of youngsters ranging from fourteen to nineteen years of age. Mr. J. P. Bond of Peterboro will referee. The Belleville team will probably be chosen from the following:—Hunter, Kerr, Strachan, Bastard, Lloyd, Arnott, Hibbard, Scott, Cummings.

SHEAN AND GALLAGHER SETTLE O. H. A. GROUP

Oh, Mr. Shean! Oh, Mr. Shean!
There's a question that's been puzzling in my brain:
In this hockey race so tight,
What dope's wrong and what is right?
With the inside stuff perhaps you will come clean.
Oh, Mr. Gallagher! Oh, Mr. Gallagher!
I can tell you who will win and who will lose.
For Belleville is sure to cop
If no others reach the top.
Absolutely, Mr. Gallagher! Positively, Mr. Shean!

Oh, Mr. Shean! Oh, Mr. Shean!
There's another question bearing in my brain:
For those Students, so they brag,
Have a chance to win the flag:
Do you think it is dull, or do I look so green?
Oh, Mr. Gallagher! Oh, Mr. Gallagher!
The Students aren't as bad as many think;
If the other teams drop dead,
Queen's will come in ahead,
Absolutely, Mr. Gallagher! Positively, Mr. Shean!

QUEENS STRUCK A SNAG IN BELLEVILLE INTERMEDIATES

Local Aggregation Journey to Limestone City Last Night and Trim Collegians in Fast, Close-Checking Game

SCORE 4-1

Marks' Squad Shows Result of Good Coaching—More Combination Play Evident—Crooks' Goaling Outstanding Feature—Was Injured Twice but Returned to Game—Sixteen Penalties Handed Out—Queen's Good Team

Playing a better brand of hockey the Belleville Intermediates trounced the Queen's University squad in the Limestone City last night. The locals secured the lead and were never headed and although the Students swept in time after time they were not able to score. Len Crooks, who in the Belleville nets was beautiful and he saved many shots that were labelled goals, was the shining star of gameness as on two occasions he was injured but returned to the ice after repairs had been made. The team work of the winners was wonderful and the Holway brothers proved a stone-wall defence. Coach Lowery has drilled the Students in defensive play especially. The forwards after losing the puck immediately skated back to the position to await the onslaught of the opposing forwards. The game was featured by close checking on the part of both teams. Referee Farlow imposed about sixteen penalties but despite this the game was fairly clean. The Belleville team can be improved upon to some extent but if they are to stop Cornwall team stacks up against the locals they will be in the best of shape. No individual star appeared in the ice except probably Crooks. Both netsetters relied a great deal on combination play but the defence was the strongest feature. Plenty of body checking was ushered in and kept the fans on edge. Bouncer Holway used his body to good advantage and showed up the oncoming forwards with great agility. Ritchie tried to step Bouncer on one occasion and he himself took the count and was laid out for a few moments. Sometimes the boys were tempted to leave their positions uncovered and the Queen's forwards had a clear chance to break away, but always the Holway brothers and Crooks were on the job.

The play ranged up and down the ice, and both citadels were always in danger. When one of the defence broke way Weir or Frechette would always fall back to form a secondary line. The Collegians forward line often tempted to evade Belleville's defence and were sometimes successful, but always Crooks foiled them. Owing to the close and incessant checking subs were frequently rushed on and the locals were penalized on one occasion for having seven men on the ice. During the first period Bouncer got the gate two or three times for minor offences but usually one of the Queen's team accompanied him. Referee Farlow kept the play well in hand and cross-checking and slashing were strictly prohibited. When the Belleville players reached centre ice they were generally travelling at a fast rate of speed and the Presbyterians found it to be a hard job stoping them. On the other hand the visitors were well below the centre after the puck and gave the losers no chance to break away Intercepted passes were frequent and often both teams picked up a loose puck in centre ice and headed for the nets. "Bunny" Frechette and Ritchie were working the fast lights but when he gets the range it is bound to register. Kari Quinn who was between the posts for the Calvinists experienced a busy session but picked off the long shots with the ease of a veteran. He graduated from Junior ranks last season and is an able successor to McNeil. Chick Kendell has declined the pads on account of pressure of studies and Red-headed Johnny McKinley is out in the line-up for the same reason. Reynolds and Bond are playing Senior Intercollegiate and also in Rochester.

Ritchie is a nice defence man, he uses his body but was somewhat penalized when he came in contact with our own Bouncer. Nicol who played Junior last year possesses the wicked-est shot of the squad and he usually places it near the top of the net. He kept Crooks on needles all night. Stewart, a brother of Jimmy and Charlie of Dental and Hamilton fame showed up well, but we are informed that he is considerably troubled with water on the knee. Lindsay, Swarthout, Partlow and three remaining players are bound to give the locals a good game next Monday night.

The first time that Len Crooks was good would be putting it mildly. He turned aside shots that looked impossible and Johnny Tetroler found him a stumbling block in their path. He stopped them with his hands, feet, pads, stick and anything in face. Owing to an injury received in last Wednesday's game he wore a mask, but found his visibility somewhat impaired.

Both Holway boys form an air-tight defence and that end of the team is strengthened than last year. Mallen turned out a nice game but is still handicapped by a sore knee. His stick-handling was perfect and dazzled the Kingstonians. Frechette took a few pucks at Quinn with his bullet shot, Bunny has still lots of hockey in him and is fast rounding into form. Weir is still there with his back-checking and scored one goal which nearly bowled Quinn over. Hagerman played a nice game in spite of his sore shoulder. He kept his man well in hand Stanley has the best of condition and can go the full sixty minutes if necessary. Soup Guyer proved a useful utility man and will aid a great deal by being a guest of the chewing gum.

Last evening they showed the results of good coaching and Jack Marks is to be congratulated on turning out so formidable an aggregation. The Jack Hardy Arena is a wonderful piece of architecture and is a credit to the city.

Many favorable comments were heard on Harold Farlow's refereeing He will no doubt be seen around this neck of the woods again this winter.

Mr. Ron. Lewis did not accompany the team as he is absent in the Queen City at the present time. He will to-night will be welcome news for him.

The Belleville team were accompanied by a loyal band of rooters who made their presence known.

Mr. H. R. Stock an officer of the local club acted as time-keeper.

From the results of last night's game it appears as though the race is between Cornwall and Belleville. The red and whites are now leading the group with three wins and no losses. Frontenacs play in Cornwall to-night.

Frechette notched two wins Weir and Mallen scored the other two for Belleville, while Nicol tallied Queen's lone counter.

FIRST PERIOD

Play was fast and Frechette pocketed a few hot ones at Quinn. Weir scored for Belleville after a few minutes of play on a beautiful shot. Boucher cut Bunny went through but Smith intercepted a pass. Mallen, subbed Hagerman. Play was sent to the cooler for accidental tripping. Smith rushed and nearly scored. Tones was given a two minute sentence. Crooks made a beautiful save but was injured in making the stop. He was given a hand by the crowd and by the return Bunny and Weir went down, the former circled them behind the net and slipped it past Quinn. Mallen and Soup replaced Weir and Bunny. Period ended 2-0.

SECOND PERIOD

Lindsay was penalized for tripping. For having seven men on the ice Belleville was given a minute penalty. Play was held up while Ritchie's nose was attended to. Nicol got his first Lindsay nearly scored on a mix-up. Nicol beat Crooks on a beautiful shot for the Tricolours initial tally. Nicol Frechette and Hagerman drew penalties towards the end of the period. Score 3-1.

THIRD PERIOD

Nicol shot but hit the post. Crooks made a beautiful save when Smith came the Ritchie was laid out in stepping into Bouncer. Crooks was again laid out in stopping one but game continued. Bunny drew a penalty. Play was fast and the Presbyterians bombarded Crooks but could not register Bunny Frechette scored from a mix-up. Ritchie tried to step into Bouncer but Holway was just there everytime but didn't score. Lindsay came from behind with an open net but, the puck didn't cross the line. Mallen scored a lovely goal near the top of the net. The game ended 4-1 for Belleville.

The line-up was as follows

POINT ANNE VILLAGERS DEFEAT 34TH BATTERY IN FAST GAME LAST NIGHT

An Excellent Brand of Hockey Served up to a Good Crowd of Fans—Final Score 3-2

BOLAND STARRED IN NETS

Artillerymen Looked Better Team—Either Aggregation Will Compare Favorably With O.H.A. Teams—Much Off-side Play in Evidence—Poor Shooting

In a game that will hardly be excelled by O.H.A. Hockey, Point Anne's Bay of Quinte hockey team defeated the 34th battery at the Arena last night by a score of 3-2.

The Gunners were all over their opponents but failed to gain the verdict. Time and again they beat the Point Anne forwards but found the veteran, Pat Boland, a stone wall. He turned in one of the finest games of his career and deserves most of the credit for his team's victory. In fact his team is a branch of sluggers who never know what rest is, only one substitute being used in the last period.

The play opened up at a fast pace and Hibbard was called on to save in 1 minute. Play was continually off-side and Referee Barrett had a busy time with the bell.

Marsele got a penalty for tripping and on his return to the game slapped in a rebound off Legatt's shot in 8 minutes which Hibbard had no chance to save. In two minutes Lake scored the Points second goal on a nice shot from the wing.

The battery were having the best of the play but could not get the goals.

In four minutes Marsele again scored the Points last goal and just before the period ended Canning scored the locals first goal on a swimmage in front of the enemies' net. Pat Boland was called on to save many times in this period and really showed his class.

The second period was fast end to end rushing in which no goals were scored although both goal tenders were called on to save many hard shots.

Hibbard was especially good in this period.

The final period started off with both teams going at it for supremacy. The battery were having the better of the play and in 10 minutes they scored from a scrimmage in front of the Point's net. A few minutes late Lake stickhandled through the 34th defence but shot wide of the goal. In the dying moments of the game the 34th were all over their opponents but failed to get the tying goal. Dave Whalen had an open net but could not bulge the twine.

For the winners Lake, Marsele and Canning were best while the two Whalens and Finkle were outstanding for the losers.

Line up as follows:

34th Battery—Goal, Hibbard; defence, W. Canning and W. Finkle; centre, T. Whalen; wings, Doug. Whalen and S. Symons; subs, Armstrong and Guyer.

Point Anne—Goal, Boland; defence, Legatt and Tompkins; centre, J. Marsele; wings, Brant and Lake; subs, Green and Hart.

CITY JUNIOR HOCKEY

Canadians vs. Sports

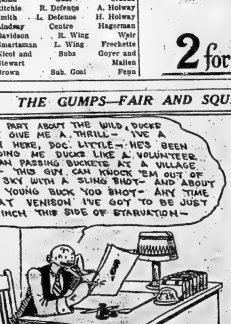
On Saturday evening in the Arena two teams of group "B" played ten minutes overtime to a no-score tie, namely, Canadians and Rovers. The stars for the Canadians were Stanley Doran and LaBerr; for the Rovers, Mullins and Playter. Holloway, goalkeeper for the Canadians, is a comer and in a few years will be a real little goal-keeper. Gorman for the Beavers has an eagle eye and was good.

Referee—Jim Lafferty.

O.S.D. vs. Beavers.

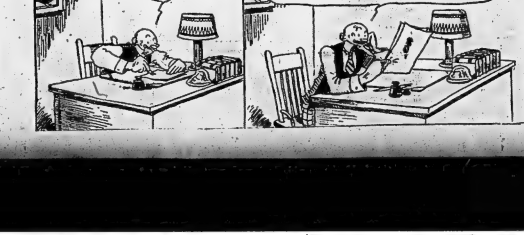
Last night two teams of group "A" O.S.D. and Beavers, played a fast game which resulted 5-0 in favor of the O.S.D. The Beavers were a far larger and heavier team. The O.S.D. boys were all small, but tricky. They scored 4 goals in the first period the Beavers' one. In the second period the Beavers, strengthened by Brown, came back to the ice and bombarded the game stood a tie with the score 5-4. Five minutes was set to break the tie, when in the very middle of play the O.S.D. scored. Immediately the Beavers left the ice and took a penalty. At close of play, Jimmy O. S.D was good, scoring 4 of the 5 goals. Brown of the Beavers has a wicked shot and was the defence star several time he shot. Walter Day scored 3 of the goals for the Beavers.

O.S.D.—Goal, Mallinder; def., McCallum, Meyett; centre, Sloan; wings, Davey, Hunter; subs, Hunter, Holbert Colege vs. O.S.D., from 8 to 9 p.m.



At Bailey's rink on Saturday morning the Terriers defeated the Cedar Street Juniors by a score of 8 to 2. It was a good game and the youngsters showed that they knew how to play good hockey. The line up was as follows:

Terriers.— Centre, Nail; Mullins; wings, Tom Burns and Ralph Bailey; defence, Ted. Rothwell and Jack Corbane; goal, Jim Follwell. Sub. B. Clare.



Grier St. Juniors—Centre, J. Mason; wings, R. Pettis and W. Bailey; defence, T. Tyrill and R. Weese; goal J. McDonald. Sub. L. Cole.

THE FORCE OF FRANCE AND THE USUAL GERMAN ATTITUDE

One of Germany's coal barons of the north, who is one of the greatest captains of industry in that country, made a highly significant statement as he discussed the arrival of the French at Essen a few days ago. "What can we do?" he moaned, "We are helpless". We have no cannon. We let ourselves be disarmed."

Did they, indeed? The world "let" seems to be slightly inaccurate. The disarming of the German nation took more than four years of the fiercest fighting in history, in which pretty nearly the whole world participated, but it was accomplished at a dreadful cost.

The popular belief of the majority of Germans seems to be that their armies were not defeated on the battlefields but were subdued through treachery and weakness behind the lines. There is considerable disillusionment in this attitude and outside of Germany such reasons are inconceivable. The Germans are horrified beyond measure at what they term the French violation of the treaty following the World War and object to the world, and strenuously too, because France is now using her force to exact tribute.

The Germans must have a very short and queer memory. In the recent circumstances and in their appeal to the nations they had better not recall too vividly their own invasion of Belgium and their "scrap of paper" which they so carelessly tore and scattered to the winds.

France has suffered beyond the power of words to describe. Her equilibrium is shaken alone—a case of nerves as we sometimes refer to one of the most ailments of man—Germany to-day hates France ten times beyond reason—France fears Germany with a fear born of the bitterness of death and out of fear and hate what fruit can come?

France is ready to chance and is demanding a settlement when she is able to effect one.

In the meantime Germany is passing through the stage of paper resolutions. The old stereotyped propaganda machinery has been cranked up again and the publications are going forward with flaming protests.

If these whinings are meant to impress the world, and if the Germans are expecting sympathy from the nations, they will be sadly mistaken as they will simply be regarded with more contempt than ever.

The passive arrogancy of the German industrialists in the present crisis amply demonstrates how headstrong and Hunnish the Rhinelander really is.

GRAIN MARKETING IN THE WEST

That the grain dealer and the grain growers' interests are not allied is the dictum of Premier Dunning, enunciated in his heated controversy with John Evans, M.P., Saskatoon, on the grain marketing proposals recently made by the Saskatchewan premier.

Mr. Evans claims that Hon. Mr. Dunning is "passing the buck", or in other words is evading the real issue in marketing the western grain crop. Mr. Dunning retaliates, "Mr. Evans might explain that it is possible for a man to do his duty as a member of parliament or as a member of the legislature on a question affecting grain marketing when he is at one and the same time an active politician and also a director of a grain-handling corporation which would undoubtedly be affected by the decisions which were reached in parliament or in the legislature upon the question. One of the greatest weaknesses in the farmers' movement to-day, in my judgment, is the fact that so many men are directors in these corporations and at the same time active politicians—members of the legislature and the federal parliament."

This is a belated but a welcome discovery by Mr. Dunning.

It was claimed by Conservatives that Hon. T. A. Crerar could not serve honestly both as $15,000 per annum president of the United Grain Corporation and $4,000 per annum leader of grain growers' political party. Mr. Dunning has discovered the accuracy of the Conservative criticism. But Mr. Dunning did not discover this until Hon. T. A. Crerar, grain magnate, Hon. A. B. Hudson, grain exchange counsel, and others wrecked the farmers' chances of a wheat board. Mr. Dunning is right in his conclusions. It was proven that T. A. Crerar could not serve both the grain exchange and the farmers. Can Mr. Evans? There is this difference.—Evans is a sincere, progressive; Crerar was a Grit partisan masquerading as a Progressive to further the ends of the Grit party and the Winnipeg Grain Exchange.

BRITISH JUSTICE

British justice enjoys the reputation of being prompt and sure as well as stern and it is a reputation well worth maintaining. Just now, several United States newspapers are commenting, editorially on this subject and every article speaks appreciatively and eulogistically of the British system.

The recent hanging of a man and woman in England has caused world-wide interest. It does seem shocking to even think of the hanging of a woman, but it is even more shocking to think of a woman plotting the murder of her own husband just to get him out of the way. The jury in the case found that the woman had planned the murder and had suggested the crime to the man, believing that he would carry out her plan. For this intriguing and cowardly act they were really guilty of murder and thus for the first time in fifteen years a woman was hanged in England.

British justice is indeed swift and sure, and is no respecter of persons. United States law, which is based and framed upon the British, is possessed of the same indentical fundamentals, but unfortunately, the constitutions are not applied with such rigor, firmness and despatch, and, as has been demonstrated a thousand times, many months and sometimes years elapse before a penalty is paid, and even then after much legal argument and alas, meddling influence, the law does not properly function and the accused escapes entirely.

PASSING COMMENT

Like France, Canada is also badly in need of coal, but there is no present likelihood of a movement to invade the Lehigh valley to secure some.

A domestic science course will teach a girl to cook almost all the things a man doesn't care for.

Christmas Echoes

No doubt to most merchants the best "compliments of the season" come when the shoppers start paying bills they have piled up in buying Yule gifts.

HERE AND THERE

"NICK AND PICK"

Everybody knows what a picnic is but most folks would find it hard to say how it got that name, and yet it is simple enough when you come to learn.

When a picnic party is being arranged for, the custom generally was that those who intended to be present would supply the eatables and drinkables. A list of these necessaries would be drawn up, it was passed around, and each person picked out the article of food or drink that he or she was willing to furnish, and the name of the article was nicked or ticked off the list. The open-air entertainment thus became known as "pick and nick". The custom is said to date from 1802, so that the picnic is wholly an institution of the nineteenth century.

DEDICATED TO THE MOST RECKLESS TAXI-DRIVER IN BELLEVILLE

I am the original autofool,
A pesky sort of animool,
With ears as long as Saalam's ass,
I sound no horn as cars I pass,
Fifty per hour is slow for me,
No matter what the law may be;
I don't look out for the other fellow—
The gink who does is simply yellow,
I drive in the dark without my lights
And suddenly stop on darkest nights;
I put on speed at all blind corners,
If a crash occurs, just pays the mourners;
I go my darndest around the curve,
And pass all guys to show my nerve;
I hit 'er up on slippery streets,
And step on the gas when it rains in sheets,
I give no signal when I jump,
Have no respect for a traffic cop,
I love my brilliant, dazzling lights,
I coast the hills on wintry nights;
I scare the horses with my horn—
My muffler cut-out roars at morn;
I never signal when I back,
And always ride the street car track;
I love to speed where children play,
And always take the right-of-way,
I laugh when I graze a timid "rube,"
For I'm a reckless TAXI-BOOK.

PRESS OPINIONS

AN ANSWERED PRAYER

Rev. George H. Lawson of Orange, New Jersey, has a great belief in the efficacy of prayer. Recently he felt the need of a wife to be his partner in parsonage life, so he made it the subject of his prayers, and got her. In the world-know sheet of the in response, along came a widow who was hailed as his prayer bride, but, fortunately, when just within the shadow of the altar, she backed out of the bargain, and he was left lonely once again. But, he says, he kept on praying, and in response has been besieged by young ladies and old maids who were keen for the honor of being rewarded as an answer to prayer. Out of that number, he has picked out three, and from them the ultimate choice will be made.

Probably he will go through the rest of his life convinced that these women all responded to his call because of his prayers. Perhaps they did, but it is more likely that they jumped at the chance because of the publicity that was given to his first attempt to lead a bride to the altar. He would have received exactly the same response if he had placed an advertisement in a few of the newspapers, for it is a strange characteristic of human nature that there are hundreds of people who will respond to any advertisement, while often them a prospect of matrimony, if it does not so, the many matrimonial agencies which flourish would have a small chance of remaining in existence.

THE PROROGATION "SPECIAL"

(Vancouver World)

"Girls grow up to be women, but boys only grow up to be big boys" says the old proverb.

After six arduous brain-breaking weeks, in which they lowered the price of liquor permits from $3 to $25 apiece, another commissioner to the liquor board; provided that three doctors instead of four set the exams. for the chiropractors, and tinkered up a number of provincial statutes, the legislature adjourned on Saturday afternoon.

Here is how the world staff correspondent describes the scene which followed the formal prorogation:

"The departure of the Speaker was the signal for a wild scramble from members who had restrained themselves for the past six weeks and the air was immediately filled with flying blue books and order papers, while the crowded galleries cheered across the rail, in response to the fun. Waste paper baskets filled with torn papers were dumped unceremoniously over the heads of the unfortunate and for a few minutes pandemonium broke loose. A few minutes later a litter of papers and bills was all that was left of the empty chamber look like a snowfield, was all that remained to show the turmoil of a session that had been in session and had completed one of the most crowded and hard-working sessions yet held."

Gentleman Crook—Pardon me, sir, but haven't I held you up before?

Weary Victim—Well, the face looks familiar, but I've forgotten the face.

WELL, WELL!

He was a rather bibulous individual And he liked
His little drink.
(For that, as you know,
Is what bibulous means.)
And anyway he sat up the other night
To see the Old Year out
And the New Year in,
And he got along fine,
And now he is walking around
With his chest out,
Claiming a world's record,
For he says he saw two Old Years out and two New Years in.
The explanation being,
That he celebrated so wisely
And so unwell
That he was seeln double.

A COMMON MISTAKE

"How did our friend happen to get left so far behind?"

"Made the usual blunder," replied Senator Sorghum, of "at mistaking his own after-dinner speeches for the voice of the people."

A real whole wheat porridge

Children like a whole wheat porridge better than any other porridge—and it is so easy to make it, hot and tasty, out of Shredded Wheat.

Place the Biscuits in a small saucepan, add salt and enough water to cover the bottom of the pan; stir and boil until it thickens. Serve with milk or cream.

A hot dish for those who do not like porridge is made by simply pouring hot milk over the Biscuits, adding a little cream and a little salt. Nothing so good for youngsters as these little loaves of crisp, oven-baked shreds of the whole wheat.

Shredded Wheat contains all the bran you need to stimulate bowel movement.

SHERRIFFS NEED NOT ENGAGE AMATEURS

Hangman Ellis is Still Available With His Expert Talents—Executed Over 60 Men in Last Two Years

Montreal, Jan. 16.—Despite the Solicitor-General's refusal to place himself on record as paymaster to an official hangman, there need be no misgivings regarding future executions, for Arthur Ellis will resume his duties. That will remove from the minds of the authorities any fear of repetition of the Benny Swim tragedy last November, for Ellis is considered an expert in his peculiar line. The hangman stated today that he had never more than sixty men to their death in 1921 and 1922.

Ellis says that he is now once more at the call of Sheriffs throughout the country to carry out what he calls "the law's last command."

It began to look for a time as though future executions would be conducted with fear and trembling by the authorities, accompanied by mental and physical torture for the condemned. Humanitarians will be glad to learn that this situation at least has been changed.

The difficulties have now been ironed up, workable circumstances determined and an arrangement made whereby the hangman receives a certain fee in respect of each death sentence, when the date of execution accompanies the verdict. He is paid whether the sentence is actually carried out or not. On that day Ellis is ready to report and carry out his duties, even though the condemned man is reprieved, and the sheriff accordingly has to pay him his fee.

Ellis has been succeeded, despite repeatal attempts, in getting his name on the payroll of the Dominion Government as an employee. He says neither of the parties in power has cared to exercise a bill providing for the payment of a salary of $800 a year to an official hangman. He claims there has never been such an office-holder since Confederation.

Ellis, according to Montreal police authorities, is considered a very valuable man in his chosen field of endeavor, which accounts for the desire throughout the Dominion to retain his services against political opposition demanded by law. The authorities sound lay their hands on a lanyman every day, and experience has taught them that an executioner must know his business.

WOMEN SMOKERS INCREASING

Evil Results From Usage of Weed—Tends to Cause Extreme Nervousness in Future Life—A Doctor Explains

There is certainly an increase of smoking among the rank and file of women of the middle and upper classes in this country.

The day has passed when any sensible person would object to women smoking on ethical grounds. It is no more "wrong" for a woman to smoke a cigar than it is for her to drink her morning tea. It has ceased to be remarkable for women to smoke in public places, and, for my part, I consider that women should smoke openly when and where they feel inclined, irrespective, without criticism from those who hold a conventional code that is out of date.

Moderation is the keystone of conduct, says Dr. Chesser.

Women ought to smoke to excess, nor should men. Too much smoking injures the health, often irreparably, and the habit once contracted an alkaloid, nicotine, which has a very definite physiological effect upon the body, and which, when isolated and what is called "smoker's heart".

Evil Results.

It is a nerve poison also, and most heavy smokers suffer from diminished power of mental concentration, lack of emotional tone, "nerves", and impaired sleep.

That smoking, unless in strict moderation, is especially harmful to women, is very probable. While I believe that they can smoke to no less excess than women, I admit that the habit may justly be considered more injurious to women, and more particularly to young girls, than to men. It is not that woman's nervous system is more delicate" than man's, but her motherhood function makes her health of more value from the eugenic standpoint.

A woman's chief importance to the community, unless she is of outstanding intellectual worth, is to provide healthy babies, to bear and rear efficient men, and women for the next generation. It is, therefore, a national loss if women injure their health by smoking.

Nervous Movements.

There is no more pathetic figure than the type of modern young girl who, with her perpetual cigarette, degenerates in a few years into the irritable neurotic woman with cold, moist hands, stained finger-tips, and furtive, nervous movements. Smoking in her case has become a vice.

Many women say that smoking soothes the nerves, but in such cases tobacco is being used as a drug, a narcotic which has to be taken in larger and larger doses to obtain the desired effect.

A great deal depends upon whether or not the tobacco is inhaled. The woman who inhales cannot afford to smoke one-quarter of the cigarettes consumed by the woman whose smoking is confined to the upper air passages.

Never inhale, never smoke more than three, at most four, cigarettes a day. The observance of these two rules would prevent a good deal of ill-health at present caused by cigarettes.

LIFE AND BEAUTY

To live and to create,
Wisely to love, wisely to hate,
These are the syllables the forest
Whispers,
These are the letters on the skies
Are carved,
The answer adopted by innumerable springs
To all the weighty questions of the world.
The early children of oblivion,
Oblivion shall claim,
When reaching hands beneath the sun
Washed in time,
Deftly and beauty, you that would not unravel
Life that threatens from the void;
The blended eyes of lust, the mind un-linked,
Shall seek again into the vacant dark,
They who destroy shall be in turn destroyed,
Nor feel the Alchemist's transmuting
hours,
The flame of being reaps infinity,
Flawless, without beginning, without end!
Out of the centre of all words that be Dust the fine rare of beauty, till they flow
The ring of life. And they shall most;
Pass as, O desert, rain,
Pass as, immortal Girl, immortal Bow
Pass on, dear stricken faces of the grave!
Pass on, white feet of joy,
Pass oh, O voice of mirth,
Add all you fair and happy of the earth,
Pass on abundantly;
You that have sought the hidden gold,
You whose beauty shall unfold
Upon the Tree."

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Selecting Furniture Fabrics.

When purchasing material for upholstering purposes avoid long, loose threads on the surface. Select a close weave, preferably of smooth texture, and your furniture will wear longer.

Spots On Wallpaper.

To take a grease spot off wallpaper make a paste of cornstarch and water and spread over the spot. When dry, brush off, and the stain will be gone.

Will Take Away Rust.

Place the rusty curtain hooks in a bowl of cloudy ammonia for an hour and stir frequently with a stick. The rust will be removed and the hooks and brackets will look like new.

To Freshen A Sponge.

The sponge that seems a bit sour can be sweetened by rubbing a fresh lemon thoroughly into it and then rinsing several times in luke-warm water. It will be like new.

Mending Table Linen.

When mending a torn table linen save all the threads that are pulled in straightening the edge. Then, when the linen comes to the mending stage, use those threads you have saved to darn it, with the result is that the mended place is scarcely noticeable.

Egg Camouflage.

If you are eating down the number of eggs in a cake, add a half teaspoonful of baking powder for each egg-white omitted.

THE FASHIONS

Hats For Girls.

To match the new coat are little girls' hats of green-blue velvet trimmed with squirrel or opossum.

RECIPES FOR DINNER DESSERT

Two Ways to Make Cranberry Pie

Line a pie plate with good puff paste, roll the strips of paste one-top crust thin and cut it in strips. For one pie make the lattice crust, which for the edge, cut the strips entirely-can fashion. For the first pie chop coarsely two large cupfuls of cranberries and put them into the crust. Dust them with a tablespoonful of flour, sprinkle them with a cupful and a half of sugar, and add three tablespoonfuls of water and dot over with two tablespoonfuls of butter. Put on the lattice strips, mark the edge of the crust with a floured fork and bake in a moderate oven about half an hour or until the cranberries are well cooked and the crust is a good brown.

The other way to make a cranberry pie is to take a quart of cranberries and add to them a cupful and a half of water and slow them gently until the berries are soft, then add two cupfuls of sugar and cook them ten minutes longer. Cool the mixture, then fill the pie, dust it with a little flour, dot with a tablespoonful of butter and lattice the crust over the top.

Old-Fashioned Apple Pie.

Line the pie-plate with a good rich crust. Slice thinly enough tart, tender apples to fill the crust comfortably but not too full. Mix a tablespoonful of flour with three-quarters of a cupful of molasses, add a saltspoonful of cinnamon, a little grating of nutmeg and a teaspoonful of lemon juice. Pour this mixture over the apples, and then put on the top crust. Bake in a medium oven from thirty to forty minutes. Serve this apple pie with blocks of sharp dairy cheese.

Floating Island.

In case other desserts lack flavor try this old-timer. Make a rich, boiled custard in a double boiler, using the beaten yolks of six fresh eggs, a quart of rich milk, a quarter of a saltspoonful of salt and sugar to taste. A custard is a tricky thing to get just right, but when it thickens enough to coat the back of a spoon when just at the boiling point, it is done. If cooked until it boils, a custard is apt to separate. Remove from the fire and add a teaspoonful of vanilla flavoring, turn into a dish and set to cool.

Meanwhile beat the egg whites very stiff, adding slowly four teaspoonfuls of powdered sugar sifted carefully with a few drops of vanilla. Pile this mixture by the tablespoonful onto a very lightly buttered baking plate and cook it in a medium oven a delicate brown, letting it dry off like a meringue. When done, lift with a spatula lay one on the custard and set to chill. This is a delicious old-fashioned dessert, and one not often met in modern days unless someone revives it for the holiday season to take the place of ice cream.

Woman So Ill Could Not Stand

Says Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Made Her Well and Strong

Glens Falls, N. Y.—"For over two months I was so sick I could not stand on my feet, and my husband did my housework and cooked. The doctor said an operation might be necessary, I said tentatively. I got a letter about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and began to take it. Before I had finished taking the first bottle I saw what good it was doing me. I kept it up and dropped in all my work for a family of four, all my washing and ironing, and I think it remarkable, as I had not dared to run my sewing machine and does still, with my hand. I truly feel that were it not for your medicine I would be here in bed yet. You can succeed very serious."—Mrs. GEORGE W. BOARDMAN, Glens Falls, N. Y.

That Body of Yours

By James W. Barton, M.D.

WHY YOU GET SO TIRED

When I was young I helped a neighboring boy to saw his hardwood in exchange for which he helped me clean up my yard.

When I was half way through the piece of wood I would slop to put more grease on the saw. I was more particularly with the idea if giving my aching arms a rest.

How often caused them to ache? The constant motion of the muscles rubbed and bruised the little nerves in the muscles and also caused the pain. You know how it feels when you receive a blow on a muscle. It simply aches, doesn't it?

And so the constant little blows from using a muscle continuously causes the same ache or pain. Sometimes, in sheer desperation I would continue pushing the saw through the wood a many times the other fellow had set a certain number of times without a rest

And so at times although I was able to bear the pain my arms would simply refuse to move any more they were so tired and fatigue.

Now, what happened to my arms?

When we work our muscles, they become healed, and poisons are manufactured in the muscle as a result of combination. These products are really poisons and like other poisons are the ones they have the power of actually paralyzing the muscle.

If these products are extracted and put into a fresh or unworked muscle they will paralyze it just the same, if it had been doing a great deal of work.

You and I don't as a rule, work long enough at a time to bring on the paralysis. We usually stop working or exercising, when the pain begins. And this is really the time to stop and rest.

If after exercising for a while we rest for a short period, the circulation of the blood carries the fatigue away and we can do some more work.

Charlotta Russe.
